WHY MEN ARE BALD.

Stiff Hats, Hair-Cutting and Heavy Eating Are Causes.

There are real reasons why men get bald earlier than women. The reasons have been discovered by Dr. Edmund Guelpa, a hair specialist of Paris. Here are his reasons, based on several years of study relative to baldness in men and women:

Men wear stiff, heavy hats.
 Men keep their hats on too much.
 Men cut their hair too short.
 Men eat more than women.

These are all of the reasons and the only reasons why women's "crowning beauty" is lovelier than man's.

"The scalp is like a soil," says Dr. Guelpa. "Hair closely resembles the vegetation that grows upon the real soil. When the scalp is neglected or given a wrong treatment the hair on it does just as the grass does if the soil on which it grows does not receive sufficient moisture and care or when the soil is too poor."

According to Dr. Guelpa, a stiff hat is a mistake, because any sort of a hard, stiff hat constricts the blood vessels that nourish the scalp and causes the scalp to resemble un-nourished soil, thus killing the hair.

Hair that is kept short is usually unhealthy hair, because clipping the hair exposes the scalp and leaves the delicate roots unprotected and at the mercy of dust, wind, heat and cold. The natural oils which form are hardened by the cold or softened by heat, and cannot perform their duty as well as if protected. In summer a man with short hair frequently burns the roots of his hair because he ventures into the sun without the needed protection of a soft hat or cap.

Too much food causes fat to form directly under the skin, and in addition to the flesh and skin layer there is a fat layer near the skull. This fat layer causes the hair to die. That is one reason why fat men are more liable to be bald than slender men are.

The Chinese Tea Table.

This is a game to amuse small children. The players sit in a circle and each one takes the name of some article used at the tea table, such as tea, sugar, cream, cake, etc.

Tea begins; she rises and turns round and round in her place, saying, "I turn Tea, who turns Sugar?" Then Sugar gets up and begins to turn, saying, "I turn Sugar, who turns Milk?" Milk begins to turn, saying, "I turn Milk, who turns Cream?" Cream turns, saying, "I turn Cream, who turns Hot Water?" And so on with Rolls, Muffins, Jam, Cake or anything that can be thought of for tea—even to napkins and dishes if there are many playing—till all are turning.

They must continue till the leader claps her hands and calls out, "Clear the table," when all sit down in their chairs again.

Hunting the Wren.

In the south of Ireland the custom of "hunting the wren" is practiced on St. Stephen's Day, the day after Christmas. The wren-boys, also called Droleens, go from house to house demanding contributions and carrying with them one or more wrens in the midst of a holly bush decorated with bright ribbons.

One of the traditions connected with the killing of these little birds is that a Danish army would have been surprised and destroyed by Irish troops had not a wren given the alarm by pecking at some crumbs upon a drumhead, the remains of the sleeping drummer's supper, which roused him, and he instantly beat to arms. This would account for the Irish hatred of the wren.

Pork Cake.

One pound of salt pork chopped very fine, one pint of boiling water poured on the pork, two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one heaping teaspoonful of cloves and of cinnamon, one pound of chopped raisins, two teaspoonfuls of soda, one small teaspoonful of baking powder and about six cupfuls of flour (enough to make it rather thick, but not too stiff). Bake slowly and be sure that it is done before taking from the oven. This cake will keep for weeks if wrapped in paraffin paper and kept in a tin box or a covered jar.

Raisin Puffs.

One-half cupful of sugar, a heaping tablespoonful of butter, two eggs, a cupful of milk, two cupfuls of flour, a cupful of raisins chopped and floured, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Steam in buttered cups one-half hour. This makes twelve cupfuls. Sauce for puffs—two cupfuls of brown sugar, two cupfuls of hot water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of vanilla. Cook until thick. Serve hot.

To Keep Rice Grains Whole.

Have plenty of water boiling rapidly in a large saucepan, add to it the strained juice of a lemon, put in the rice, stir with a cooking fork (never stir rice with a spoon), boil hard for fifteen minutes uncovered. Now add the salt, stir well, boil ten minutes longer, pour it into a colander, shake well, put into a warm oven for five minutes to dry, serve in a hot uncovered vegetable dish. The lemon juice does not flavor the rice.

Squash Pie.

Cut squash in two, clean out, place cut side down in oven and bake. Press through colander. To a quart of sifted squash use three eggs beaten light, a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and ginger, a quart of milk. Mix altogether till smooth. Bake with undercrust.

To Make Light Omelet.

Use one teaspoonful of cold water for each egg in place of milk and the omelet will be lighter and will not fall.
