Some of our citizens take commendable pride in keeping not only the front of their farms clean and tasty but also the roadside in front of them level and clear of stone and rubbish, while others are not even satisfied to leave the road in front of their own place in the rough state of nature, but Wm. Bailey. -Carried. even draw the stones and refuse from their farms and pile it along the roadside, and that in some cases is right in front of the farm of good appearance. Now that travelling is becoming more dangerous than of yore from the many new devices for frightening horses, every effort should be made to have the roads as clean and level as possible. It would not be out of place for the council, to compel all road builders to pile the stones that come from grading or cutting hills in a safe place instead of merely rolling them back out of the way, and there is many a marmur by citizens, teamsters especially, over the custom of hauling rubbish from the backyard, tin cans, boxes, soap barrels, stovepipes and everything imaginable by the waggon load and throwing it beside the road just north of the village, and of the corporation, of

HEN AND CAT WERE IN PART-NERSHIP.

A despatch last week from San Jose, California, says: Without formality of going to court, Will M. Beggs, San Jose attorney, has had even the nature fakers guessing of late.

A house cat and a pet hen at the Beggs' home started housekeeping on partnership plan. When the cat wished to go out and make a call on the back fence the hen would spread her wings over the litter of kittens.

When Mrs. Hen had a date it was the accepted thing to see the cat mothering a brood of very young chickens. The rough feet of the hen, however, threatened to do serious damage to the tender fur of the young kittens, and Beggs decided to separate them. He established the two households in separated inclosures.
