THE SWEET RESTORER.

Strange Sleeping Habits of Animals and Birds.

The majority of mankind sleep lying upon the right or left side of the body, and with the knees drawn up toward the chin. Certain African tribes, however, lie upon the back, with the back of the neck resting on a bar or wood supported on two short pillars.

The elephant apparently invariably, and the horse commonly, sleep standing. This is really astonishing. Apart from the apparent difficulty of maintaining the balance of the body during these long periods of unconsciousness, one would have supposed that a recumbent posture, in the case of both these animals, was imperative. Cattle and their kin commonly sleep lying down, and during many hours of the day they lie down, as when chewing the cud.

More curious still, bats and other creatures invariably sleep hanging head downwards, suspended by their hind feet. The same strange habit is common to the little hanging parrots of India and the Malayan region. In this they differ from all other birds, which invariably sleep with the head turned tailward over the back and the beak thrust in among the feathers between the wing and the body—not under the wing, as is commonly believed. This strange habit is followed even by the penguins, wherein the feathers are so short as to fall completely to cover even the beak. Owls are perhaps, the only exception to the rule. And, by the way, the only other animals which thus turn the head backward after this fashion during sleep are certain peculiar tortoises known as "side-necked tortoises."

Long legged birds, like storks and gulls, sleep while resting only on one leg. Ducks generally sleep on open water. And to avoid drifting shorewards, and therefore into the danger zone, they keep constantly paddling with one foot, so that the body is always circling round the chosen sleeping area. The sloths sleep suspended by their feet, and the head tucked in between the forelegs. The no less remarkable African pottos, or slowlemurs, assume a similar pose, but they attach themselves to a vertical, instead of a horizontal, bough, so that the body rests with the head upward. No animal, save man, sleeps upon its back.

As a rule, darkness induces sleep. With many animals, however, the reverse is the case—as with the bats and owls. This reversal of the usual order has been brought about by the nature of the feeding habits.

The question where sleep begins is by no means easily answered. One is inclined to draw the line at the insects. But since all living things, plants as well as animals, display periodical states of quiescence, perhaps we shall be near the truth in regarding sleep as universal among living things. In the case of plants, it is enforced by darkness, save in the case of many bacteria and fungi, which, like evil deeds, grow under the cover of darkness.

Siberia's Only University. Tomsk, the agricultural centre of Siberia, boasts of the only university in that country. It was opened 26 years ago, and is so well endowed that tuition fees amount to only $50 a year. At the university hospital may be obtained the only Pasteur treatment for mad-dog bite that is available in Siberia. As the disease is rife, this is no small blessing to the settlers. A great institute of technology and school of mine, too, is to be found at Tomsk. It has an enrollment of 1,700 students, many of them from the far away region of the Caucasus, in southern Russia. American engineering text books are largely used in the institute.

Getting a "Thrill" in Formosa. The traveler who is tired of conventional journeys and who is anxious to visit an "unspoilt" country where he can enjoy the comforts of civilization and at the same time taste some of the thrills and excitement attendant upon encounters with unsubdued savage tribes should certainly make a trip to Formosa, that wonderful island lying off the coast of China which passed into the possession of Japan in 1895.

Here, along the eastern coast, he will find prosperous towns with fine harbors and wharves, spacious streets and magnificent residences, schools and churches, electric light and ample water supply—all the luxuries, in fact, of a European city. He can journey comfortably by train from one place to another, passing through vast tea gardens and rice fields. Everything is civilized, orderly and safe. Yet only a few miles inland, among the mountains and forests, dwell fierce, unconquered tribes, whose chief aim and ambition in life is to gather human heads. —Wide World Magazine.

Boissier's High Priced Autograph. A good Boissier-Renan anecdote is told by a French paper. One day Boissier arrived at Renan's home with a beaming face, saying "Now I'll tell you a piece of news that will humiliate you. My autograph has fetched a higher price than yours." "That does not surprise me," Renan said serenely. "And where did you hear this?" It then turned out that at an auction a day or two before a Renan autograph had been sold for 3 francs and a Boissier for 5. "Well," Renan went on, "now let me tell you the reason. There were three faults in the spelling of your letter, which is now lying here on my writing table. A friend of mine was at the auction and made a higher bid for the letter after noticing the artificial gems that adorned your prose. He brought it to me in order that I might return it to you instead of its reaching the public, which might get a bad impression of the accomplishments of members of the French academy."

Painless Death. William Hunter, the celebrated anatomist, who died in 1783, said to a friend in his last moments that if he had strength enough to hold a pen he would write how easy and pleasant a thing it was to die, and the late Professor Jowett, after an illness which had brought him very near to death, described the experience as being "full of interest and devoid of alarm."

On one occasion a well known public man described the act of dying as "a great adventure that must be much more interesting than setting out for the north pole." While few will agree with him, it is a great thing to know that science has robbed death of its terrors and has taught us that no matter how much a dying person may appear to be suffering, he or she, immediately before death, can feel no pain whatever.—Pearson's.

Forgetful. An eminent painter was once asked if he thought art students did well to go to Europe to study. He said that undoubtedly the atmosphere was more artistic in Europe than anywhere else, but that Paris as a city to study and work in was overrated.

To illustrate his meaning he said that a certain rich man's son after three years in Paris wrote home to his father: "Dear Father—I have made up my mind to set to work. Please let me know at your earliest convenience whether it was painting, architecture or music I came to Paris to study."

If All Candidates Wore White. The word "candidate" is from the Latin "candidatus." Literally it means white robed, and it was thus called because in Rome those who sought office wore glittering white togas. Fancy, if you can, all our modern Americans dressed in accordance with their political ambitions. In some sections there would be no such thing as a dark suit of clothes. Washington would simply be one shining center of universal whiteness.

The Apple of Discord. At the marriage of Thetis and Peleus, where all the gods and goddesses met together, Discord threw on the table a "golden apple" for "the most beautiful." Juno, Minerva and Venus put in their separate claims and, not being able to settle the point, referred the matter to Paris, who gave judgment to Venus. This brought on him the vengeance of Juno and Minerva, to whose skill is attributed the fall of Troy.

Probably Not. "I hate to be poor. Now a millionaire can walk right in and order what he wants without bothering about the price." "He can," stated the weary salesman, "but he seldom does."—Kansas City Journal.

Calling on the Poor. "Did you call on those poor people?" "Oh, yes," answered the amateur welfare worker. "And what do they need?" "Why, I didn't go inside. The house was so fearfully squallid that I just left cards."

Crime and Punishment. Imp—Here are two spirits—one sinned knowingly and the other ignorantly. Satan—Put them both in the same furnace, but let the knowing one see the thermometer.

Any coward can fight a battle when he's sure of winning, but give me the man who has pluck to fight when he's sure of losing.—George Elliot.

On the Last Lap. "Saw an odd race yesterday." "Indeed?" "Yes, it was between two dogs—a fox terrier and a dachshund." "Well?" "Two saucers of milk were placed in front of them and the object was to see which could lick up his first." "Which won the race?" "The dachshund won in the last lap."—Florida Times Union.

Well Spoken. Mother—You know what a party is, don't you, dear? Doris (aged four)—Yes, mamma. A party is where you go and stay a little while and pass your saucer back for some more and stay another little while and go home. —Boston Transcript.
