NOTHING

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

When I began business at eighteen years of age 1 entered the counting room of Stoughton Bros, on a salary of $4 a week. I had assurance enough for ten men of my age, and it is assurance that tells. I have often wondered why this is so largely the case and have come to the conclusion that it is based on the principle of war that the assail ant has the advantage of force over inertia. It is a principle of mechanics that a body started through space in which there is no resisting medium will go on at the same rate forever. A body that is not started will not move, and when struck will be knock

I had no reverence for my superiors but treated them with eminent respect except when they undertook to browbeat me, when I jumped on them with both feet. Not that he put on any airs, but because his position was so lofty. used to hear stories about how he got his start and learned that he went into the cotton market one day $50,000 in debt and in a few months was $300,000 to the good. At the time I entered business he was worth millions.

Belonging to an excellent family and not being troubled with backwardness. I was a butterfly of fashion. My capital was one dress suit, which, notwithstanding my youth, was too small for me, but for 50 cents I got a tailor to enlarge it. At functions I used to meet men who were the heads of large business concerns, as well as of families. Some of them I occasionally went to during business hours on business, with my hat in my hand. But. meeting them socially, I considered that while we were on a different basis it behooved me to keep up an outward show of deference. Time passed, and my salary, though slightly enlarged, was far too small for my requirements. The elbows of my dress coat were getting ragged. and it was impossible for any tailor to hide their nakedness. I did fairly good work myself in that respect with ink. Some of my fellow cierks got small raises by being obsequious to those above them, but I kept on in the even tenor of my way-that is, being ordinarily respectful and standing up for my rights. It didn't occur to me that it would pay me to toady to a man for the purpose of getting an additional two or three dollars a week.

One spring we had a heavy snowstorm, followed by a freeze and then a deluge of rain. There's no worse meteorological combination for transportation than this, and the city was well nigh impassable. Chum Saved Himself.

A little dog, unlicensed, had been found in the streets and taken to the pound. He was an affectionate animal and greatly endeared himself to all about the place. They called him Chum and he joyfully responded wheneves his name was spoken. As the days passed other poor, homeless dogs were put to death. Finally came Chum's last day of grace, and no one had come to claim him. The next morning dawned, and the man who was to kill Chum called him into the yard. Chun danced and wagged his tail, no doubt thinking something good was in store for him. The man then said: "Well Chum, your time has come. You'd bet ter say your prayers." Immediately the little forepaws were crossed, the little head bowed, and Chum said his prayers. As the little body was still in this attitude of reverence a step was heard. The attendant looked up and saw the superintendent standing there There were tears in the eyes of each Chum is still living, but instead of be ing nobody's dog he is now everybody's.

March 17 was celebrated in the middle ages as the day on which Noah entered the ark, and a very busy day it must have been if we are to believe the mediaeval dramatists, for Noah's wife was always the typical shrew of the period.

In the Chester cycle when Noah tells her of the coming flood she sneers at him for his credulity and abuses him for always bringing bad news. "Bidden hold her tongue." her abuse only becomes more stinging. Noah strikes her, she hits back, and a good set-to ensues till the man retires to make the ark. When it is finished she refuses to

"I was writing an opera. I had to deal with a very tiresome and capriclous tenor. I had already written two great arias to the same words, neither of which pleased him, and also a third, which he did not care for the first time he tried it, although he took it away with him. I was thanking heaven I had done with him and had begun to settle myself to something else which I had laid aside I had hardly worked at it half an hour before I heard a knock at the door, which I recognized
