Our concrete roads are far ahead of the ex-

we used to be two days marketing fifty bushels day, and can go to the city anytime we want to.

are the best, cheapest and most satisfactory roads that can be built.

Best, because they permit bigger loads, increase land values and im-spent in building more good roads. Most satisfactory, because they are open to traffic every day in the year, lower cost of marketing and

A Memory of Burns.

Writing of a visit to Dumfries, "T. P." in his London weekly tells of seeing the spot where Burns caught his fatal chill:

"I had pictured a cross or a tablet or something of the kind. What I saw were two or three brick steps decayed, gaping, with the mortar half worn away; just three brick steps; that and nothing more. It did not make the spot less tragic, less impressive, because it stood thus in all its common nakedness. It was indeed far more impressive in its suggestion, that of utter simplicity and merest commonplaceness, which so often are the narrow and squalid theater on which the resounding and immortal tragedies of life are played."

A Poignant Anecdote.

"The great fault of American servants is familiarity. To be familiar is to be inefficient. A familiar cook is as inefficient as a pessimistic doctor."

The speaker, a prominent society woman, is perhaps the most brilliant conversationalist in New York, a fact which renders more poignant this anecdote.

"I had a cook." she continued. "whom I tried to break of her overfamiliarity. What was the result? This cook, discussing me in the servants' hall, said:

"'I don't say she's a bad mistress, but she's a woman of only one idea. Why, I can't never get her to talk of a single thing but eating." - Washington

Whimsical Numbers. A bright schoolgirl was asked by her wrote. "There are two kinds of numbers-whimsical and even!"
