THE TRIPLE ENTENTE AND THE ALLIANCE.

The triple alliance was formed in 1883 between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy for the purpose of checking encroachments by Russia and France. The three powers are bound to support one another in certain contingencies.

The exact provisions of the alliance have not been divulged, but are said to have been modified as between France and Italy in 1893. For many years Great Britain, while not a party to the alliance, was closely linked to it through apprehension of French and Russian aggressiveness, but later, becoming disquieted by the growth of the German naval power, adopted in 1902, a decided change of policy with a view to seeking in the balance of power greater security against invasion.

In pursuance of this great policy Great Britain entered into an agreement with France in 1904 and with Russia in 1907. The aims of the triple entente, so called, Great Britain, France and Russia were substantially as follows:

- 1. The balance of power.
- 2. The strengthening of the treaty law in the interests of peace and the status quo.
- 3. Disarmament.

In the event of a war between the powers of the triple alliance and those of the triple entente the land forces of the entente would exceed by probably a million men those of the alliance.

The strength of the combined navies of the entente in ships, tonnage, armament and number of men would exceed the naval strength of the alliance.

AFTER A TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

John Runlet was a fine, sturdy fellow until he fell ill with impoverishment of the blood. He was a fine swimmer, skater, boxer, fencer, a champion in tennis and one of the best ball twirlers in the country. But when sickness overcame him he lost his strength and even his life was in danger.

Drs. Hammersly and Phipps, his physicians, consulted on his case and came to the conclusion that they had better resort to transfusion of blood. It was not easy to find one who was willing to give up sufficient blood to fill Jack Runlet's veins, for they were of no ordinary capacity, but several persons volunteered to give each a portion, and in this way the whole was obtained. Runlet was a favorite among women, and two of his sweethearts responded to the call, though neither knew of the offer of the other. Two men, Jack's most intimate friends, offered to give their quantum of blood, and after the four transfusions were effected the patient had in him the blood drawn from two women and two men.

Maud Scarborough and Delia Thorne were the women and Ned Summerfield and George Smith the men. The operators would have preferred that the blood should be transfused in a mixed state. This was because they expected the patient would be affected by the peculiarities of the persons from whom it came, and it would be better that these traits should in a measure neutralize one another. But the operations must be performed separately.

Runlet became well again, thanks to these devoted friends, but not himself. There was very little of his own blood left in him—indeed, he was four other persons in turn. When the blood of one of the women was sent out from his heart he was much like that woman, and since only half of him was man he was manly but half of the time.

When he regained his health and strength the baseball season was opening, and he resumed his position as pitcher, but he was found to be unreliable. At times he had his usual strength, while at others he seemed to have lost it, both of will and muscle. He concealed his weakness as well as he could, but it was unfortunate that he did so. It would have been better for him to retire. When a match game of great importance was being played a frightened mouse ran across the diamond. Doubtless the blood of one of the women with which his arteries were filled was at the moment being sent through his system, for he became paralyzed with fear. Running to the grand stand, he stood upon one of the plank seats and could not be induced to come down.

But few of those present knew the cause of Runlet's cowardice, though none could understand why a man should be afraid of a mouse. At any rate, the game was broken up, for Runlet, covered by shame, left the field. The next day he went to his doctors to learn what was the matter with him. They looked at each other knowingly, but thought it best that he should not be enlightened. So to get rid of him they told him he needed rest.

The next time a game of importance came off Runlet took his place among the spectators instead of in the box. He had doubtless been under the influence of the blood he had received from one of his women contributors, for he had nearly all that day been acting effeminately. He had been very particular about his clothes, putting on a particular scarf with a diamond stickpin in it, and had plumed all his sister's rings, which he put on his fingers. He went to the baseball match with a lady's fan in his hand and while waiting for the game to begin alternately fanned himself and sniffed at a bunch of violets pinned to his shirt bosom.

Not a man of his old chums would speak to him. They remembered his desertion of his post at a former game, and now to see him sitting benighted with jewelry, swinging a fan and snuffing at flowers excited their full contempt. As for the women spectators, they were very much amused at his actions.

Runlet's club had not found a pitcher to take his place. It lost steadily, and by the end of the fifth inning all hope of winning the game left them.

It is a disputed point what caused a sudden throwing off of Runlet's effeminacy. The doctors who transfused the blood into him contend that a quantum of woman's blood, which had been thrown through the heart, suddenly gave place to that of a man. Be this as it may, Jack Runlet, benighted as he was, vaulted the rail that separated him from the field, jumped down into the diamond and demanded the ball. A shout arose, with cries of "Try him again!" "Give it to him!" and the like. Some one tossed the ball to him, and by a succession of remarkable curves he put out every one who attempted to handle the bat from then to the end of the ninth inning, winning the game handsomely.

The doctors are now consulting how to get him back to the unbroken masculine condition he was in before it became necessary to put new blood in him. Dr. Hammersly has suggested letting out blood whenever he is effeminate, supplying the deficiency with that of a sturdy man. This will doubtless be done.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

Starch is improved by long boiling, instead of being made in the usual hurried way.

Lace continually cleaned with gasoline or naphtha will turn yellow very quickly.

Good lard is much better than butter for basting roasted meat and for frying.

In making children's dresses which will need letting down, stitch them with 100 cotton thread, and you will have no trouble in ripping tucks or hems.

To clean brass flower pots or trays, rub them with a piece of lemon; then pour boiling water over them, and finally polish with a soft dry cloth.

When boiled and unboiled eggs get mixed, spin them, and the boiled ones will spin round quite fast, while those which have not been cooked will hardly spin round once.

The hair mattresses which are filled with black hair are much better than those filled with white hair because the latter has generally been bleached and is deprived of its springiness.

Old oak, if shabby, should be brushed with warm beer, and later polished with beeswax and turpentine. When polishing always work the way of the grain, and finish with an old silk huckerschief.

When the sprinkler bursts a seam, dip the offending part in hot paraffin. This has often been sufficient to repair the break so that it stays good indefinitely.

A sure test of linen is to wet a portion of piece and if moisture is quickly absorbed and shows through to other side you will never be mistaken about linen. This is a never-fail test.

To revive withered flowers plunge the stalks in boiling water and leave them in it till it becomes cold. Then cut about one inch from the end of the stalks.

If you wish to prevent green vegetables from boiling over, drop a piece of dipping the size of a walnut into the centre of them, just as they commence to boil.

If a pinch of salt be added to the sugar used for stewing sour fruit much less sugar will be required.

When cooking haricot beans add salt to the water first, and they will cook in a third of the time, and will not need to be soaked overnight.

When pickling, boil the corks for boiling, and put into the bottles and jars while hot, when cold they will seal themselves tightly.

To make an old fowl tender rub the bird all over with lemon juice, then wrap in buttered paper, and steam for two or three hours, according to size.

Add a little ground ginger to rice puddings just before placing in the oven. Half a pint of water can then be mixed with the milk and the pudding will taste just as well.

A sandwich hint. When buttering bread for sandwiches knead the butter on a plate and mix the mustard with it, instead of spreading it upon the meat.

To clean an enamel bath, moisten kitchen salt with turpentine and rub into the bath. See that the bath is quite dry before applying the polish with a dry cloth.

To remove tea stains from woollen materials, cover with powdered fuller's earth, dry and leave for twenty-four hours. Then brush out, and the stain will have disappeared.

A home-made sauce for cold meat. Scrape a tablespoonful of horseradish, mix with one tablespoonful of mixed mustard, a teaspoonful of sugar, and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar.

A use for an old leather belt. Nail it right side down on a piece of wood about the same size, so that the wrong side of the leather is uppermost. This makes an excellent knife-board.

A cupful of mint tea taken morning and evening aids digestion, and was claimed by our grandmothers to be an infallible rule for giving a fresh and healthy appearance.

Cucumbers are cooled under running water if they have not been on ice, or if stood stem down in iced water for a little while they become suitable for salad.

Save the water in which the fresh green peas have been boiled. It makes an excellent foundation for soup stock or gravies. It is of such a delicate flavor that some people like it served in bouillon cups with salt, pepper and a bit of butter.

A quick way to clean currants when making cakes is to put the fruit into a colander with a sprinkling of flour, and rub round a few times with your hand. It is surprising how quickly the stalks are separated and come through the small holes.

Get some bitter apple from the chemist, crush it, and sprinkle it amongst the clothes. You will find it the finest thing on record for keeping moths away from everything, and one can use garments at a minute's notice, as there is no smell left by bitter apple.
