

THE DURHAM CHRONICLE

W. IRWIN Editor and Proprietor.

DURHAM, OCTOBER 8, 1914.

THE PASTORAL TERM IN METHODISM

At the Methodist General Conference just concluded, the vexed question of the limit to be placed upon pastoral terms was again discussed without any fresh conclusion having been reached.

It is not hard to find a reason for the opposition of the country pastor. His is the poorer charge. The salary is an indifferent one and the work is trying.

But before him spurring him on to greater effort there constantly appears the boon of a call to the city. Only the itinerant preacher whose lot has been cast among the concessions and side-roads knows the joy that comes into the life of his family when it is known that he is at length to preach regularly from a city pulpit.

The pastors already enjoying city life naturally would prefer not to be disturbed. If others are to come from the country then those in the city whose places they take must return to the lesser charges in the villages and townships.

Ultimately it may be predicted with confidence the term will be extended at least to meet special cases. Much of the difference in conditions existing between city and country pastorates will be wiped out.

As a small memento in parting we present you with these small tokens of esteem, and we hope they may occasionally remind you of your years in Durham.

REV. MR. HARTLEY HONORED

On Thursday night of last week a number of the members of Trinity church assembled at the rectory to express a feeling of respect to Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, fore departing for their new home at Delaware.

As no intimation had previously been given, it was quite a surprise when forty or fifty of the congregation with little or no formality, took possession of the pastor's home.

At the proper time, Mr. Hartley was called, when a brief address was read by Mr. John Kelly and a presentation of a purse of gold was made by Mr. Jos. Atkinson.

Mr. Box, in reply, spoke in kindly terms of Durham and her citizens, and hoped when the war was over, and after his visit to Berlin, he would be able to return again and renew his many warm friendships.

Mr. Box, in reply, spoke in kindly terms of Durham and her citizens, and hoped when the war was over, and after his visit to Berlin, he would be able to return again and renew his many warm friendships.

The following is the Address to Mr. Hartley:

Dear Mr. Hartley: Only a short time ago we learned with profound regret your decision to sever your connection with the congregation of Trinity church.

During your incumbency here you have not only won the respect, confidence and esteem of your congregation, but the general admiration of the whole community.

In the separation we know a warm friendship exists on both sides. We are glad it is so, and we are confident that in leaving us you are doing so for what you believe to be the best.

To Mrs. Hartley, too, we extend our heartiest and best wishes, and hope she may be long spared in health and strength to assist you in your work.

As a small memento in parting we present you with these small tokens of esteem, and we hope they may occasionally remind you of your years in Durham.

On Tuesday evening of this week the members of St. Paul's church, Egremont, met at the parsonage, where a pleasant evening was spent and a good program provided.

To Rev. W.H. and Mrs. Hartley. Dear Friends,—We, the people of St. Paul's congregation, on this, the eve of your departure from among us, take this opportunity of sending a few more pleasant and profitable hours together, as we realize how very pleasant our associations together as pastor and people for the four years you have been with us has been, and we trust, of everlasting profit.

You have given us from the pulpit of your ability and God-given power, the inspiration and instruction in divine things, which will cause your earnest labors to remain with us while you are absent in body. You have been at our side in sickness, sorrow or adversity of any kind, to render such help or consolation as lay in your power, while your general conduct in all matters, no matter how trying they may have been, has been an object lesson which may leave a more lasting impression than words.

We now ask you to accept this, not for the sake of its intrinsic value, but as a slight mark of our appreciation of your earnest efforts on our behalf, and a something by which you may sometimes give us a place in your memory.

A Fisherman's Story

By MARCIA BEVERAGE

"Gals is gals," said the old fisherman as he went on mending his nets, "whether they're poor fisher folk such as we have here the year round or high-flyers from the city. You never can tell what one of 'em's goin' to do. It seems sometimes as if there was a wireless telegraph apparatus that sends a spark from a man's eye into one 'em when he looks at her, and she drops like a skeeter into a plate o' coal oil.

"Now, there was Miss Markham, who come here first seven years ago, as purty a little thing as a bran new schooner yacht. She wasn't more'n seventeen years old and wore the neatest dresses of any gal on the island. You'd ought to see her swim! She didn't tie up her hair in a lump on the top of her head when she went into the water, but let it trail behind her like a mermaid. Never in my long life did I see anything so likely as Josephine Markham pullin' herself along on her side in water so clear that you could see the whole of her, the sun shinin' on her and the ripples she made and sparklin' at the same time from a jewel she wore on one of her fingers.

"I had nothin' to do then, waitin' for my boat to come out o' drydock, and used to go down to the beach on purpose to see her in the water. Sometimes she'd go in right about here with the other bathers, and sometimes she'd go out yonder on to the end of the dock and take a header. But wherever she paddled she attracted a crowd. One day while I was watchin' her swim off from the beach I saw her lookin' up at the dock at somebody and followed the direction of her eyes with mine. A young feller was standin' alone up there, and I knowed it was him that was attractin' her. He was purty enough, but, laws, there wasn't no stuff in him—pale little chap with big eyes. They was bigger than usual when he watched Miss Markham kind o' wistful, like as though he wished he was swimmin' beside her.

"Every mornin' after that the little beggar would stand on the dock watchin' for the gal to go in. One day I called up to him, 'Hain't you goin' in, sir? And he said, 'No.' And I said, 'Never learned to swim?' and he said awful melancholy-like, 'Yes, I know how, but I can't.'

"Well, one mornin' when Miss Markham was a-steppin' into the water with her dainty little feet, sort o' shrinkin' 'cause the ocean was cold—it wasn't more than 60 degrees—a lot o' boys was a-skyarkin' on the dock, and one on 'em, tryin' to dodge another, pushed the little chap off into twenty feet o' water. You'd ought to see the gal skip the breakers and, after gettin' beyond 'em, go for him. The bathin' master didn't happen to be about. I s'pect the water was so cold he didn't look for bathers. So I run the life-boat down in order to help, launched it and rowed out to the scene o' the accident.

"When I got there I saw the consarnedest sight I ever clapped eyes on. There was Miss Markham strugglin' with a pair o' legs. The little chap's head was down in the water, while the lower part of him was afloat. The gal couldn't do nothin' with him. Once she succeeded in gittin' his head above the surface, but his legs wouldn't go down, and that spoiled the game. She cast a pitiful look at me. I was hurryin' to pull up beside her, and as soon as I came into position I caught a hold of an ankle and pulled the drownin' man out, his head comin' up last, and got him into the boat. Then I helped the gal in and, takin' the oars, pulled for the beach.

"Them two creatures hadn't never spoken a word to each other, and yet she hung over him as if she'd growed up with him. As soon as I got him ashore I set about bringin' him back to life, for he was unconcious, and, callin' for a barrel, put him on it and rolled him to git the water out of him. What do you think happened? First one of his legs come off and then the other one.

"'He's fallin' to pieces!' screamed a woman who was lookin' on, scared out o' her wits.

"'Poor feller!' said another. 'Did a shark bite 'em-off?'

"'Yes,' a man in the crowd answered. 'They was hangin' by the skin.'

"'Jist then a man come up who said he was a doctor. He picked up one o' the legs and throwed it down, then picked up the other and throwed that down.

"'Cork!' he said. 'The little chap opened his eyes and looked about for somepin. When he saw the gal he looked relieved and closed 'em ag'in. We carried him to his hotel, and he was soon all right ag'in.'

AFRAID SHE WAS DYING

Suffered Terribly Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, JAN. 27th 1914. "After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives". I suffered so much that I would not dare eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives". I did not wish to try them for I had little confidence in them but, seeing my husband's anxiety, I decided to do so and at once I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was cured. While sick, I lost several pounds, but after taking "Fruit-a-tives", I quickly regained what I had lost. Now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am completely cured, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives".
