The Mysterious Stories

By EVERETT J. MARKLE

I am a man of artistic taste, but, having taken up business, I have felt the necessity of finding something to occupy and divert my mind during my leisure hours. I began writing stories. After amusing myself at this work for awhile I constructed a story that I thought pretty good and tried it on a magazine. To my surprise, it was accepted. I sent out more and was rewarded with more acceptances.

When I came to be troubled with insomnia my story writing furnished me with occupation during hours of wakefulness. I have written many a story or part of a story between 1 and 4 in the morning. I boarded with a lady Mrs. Stoughton, and her daughter, Kate. I may admit in passing that when a man boards with a lady who has a daughter, especially if that daughter is attractive, he is likely to put a matrimonial rope around his neck. At any rate, an affair was brewing between Kate Stoughton and myself. She used to twit me for sitting up in the middle of the night scribbling, for I didn't admit that I was troubled with insomnia. But Kate was always joking me, and anything she said was acceptable.

One evening I went up to my room carrying a magazine with me to read during my evening awake. Turning over the leaves, I came to a story by some one who had the same name as myself. I read the story, and it seemed to me as if I might have dreamed it myself. But our mental faculties are very subtle, and it occurred to me that my seeming connection with it might have come from an infinitesimally small period of suspended animation at the awakening from which I fancied I had seen the story before.

But this did not explain my name being used as the author of the stories. I was puzzled over this, especially because I was not familiar with any magazine writer of my name—Truce. It is not an uncommon one, and doubtless there were other scribblers bearing it, but I knew none such, especially with my initials.

I didn't think much of this at the time, for my business, which had been running so smoothly, began to give me a lot of trouble, and I was finally on the verge of closing it out. I was hanging by my fingers, so to speak, when I saw another story with my name to it, and, strange to say, there was the same faint dreamy knowledge of it that had pertained to the former one. The fellow's stories evidently pleased magazine readers, for they began to appear quite often. I read every one I came across, and my astonishment grew with each, for there was none but reminded me of something I had heard or read or dreamed.

Then it occurred to me to go to some of the magazine offices and find out who the writer was. I went first to an editor I knew best. "Hello!" he said. "You're just the man I want to see. I sent a check to you the other day for one of your stories, and the letter inclosing it came back unopened. Have you taken to scribbling for no pay?" "I haven't sent you a story for months."

"Not 'The Moonshiner?'" "No." This was one of the other fellow's I had read.

The editor looked at me, puzzled. Then I told him what had happened. He had supposed the stories with my name attached to them came from me, and he had no explanation of the mystery to offer. He handed me a fat check, but I declined it and went to see other editors in whose magazines the other scribbler's stories had appeared. They had all supposed that I was the author of the manuscripts sent in, and all had credited me with the amount due—in all more than a thousand dollars.

Now, I had got through my business troubles, all but a thousand dollar note coming due in a few days. All I had to do was to accept checks in payment for my stories and I would be "out of the woods." But I had not written the stories and had no right to take pay for them. Besides, if I did so and the real author turned up I would be liable to prosecution for swindling.

I was in a condition of mind where a man needs to confide in some one. That evening I saw Kate Stoughton and told her the whole story, including the fact that the use of a thousand dollars would save my business. "Then go to morrow," she said, "and draw the money from the magazines. One morning mother found a manuscript in a drawer of your desk; then another and another at intervals. One night she saw you writing and spoke to you. You didn't answer. You were writing in your sleep or some similar condition. I read the stories, and it occurred to me that it would be a good joke to send them out to magazines. I did so, and they were all accepted. In some instances letters came for you from the magazines. Some I opened and found checks inclosed. I resealed the envelopes and returned them. Such is my confession. I am sorry now that I didn't give them to you."

I was so delighted at having the money to pull me through in my business affairs that I threw my arms around her neck and thereby put the halter of matrimony that I spoke of around my own.

But how I wrote the stories is still a mystery to me, and no one has ever been able to give me any explanation.

How Turner Painted.

If we are to believe Thornbury, the wonderful "Burning of the House of Lords and Commons" was almost entirely painted after the canvas was hung on the walls of the Royal academy. So certain was Turner of himself at that period that he would send to the exhibition just a laid in sketch, trusting entirely to varnishing days to complete the scheme. He would arrive at the academy as early as 4 o'clock in the morning and be among the last to leave in the evening. Unlike Lawrence, who had to step back constantly to judge of effects, Turner would work so to say, with his nose to the canvas. When Lord Hill at too close quarters looked at the houses of parliament picture he condemned it as "nothing but dabs." Catching its magical effect from a just distance, however, he exclaimed enthusiastically: "Painting! God bless me! So it is!" According to Thornbury, Turner made a number of sketches of the fire, but produced two pictures only.—London News.

Why He Played It.

Some years ago the Oldham amateurs were producing one of Handel's oratorios under the personal tuition and conductorship of the late Charles Halle. Among the orchestra was the famous and gigantic bassoon player, George Seel. At the final rehearsal Halle went to George and, indicating several bars for the bassoon, told him not to play them on the night of the performance. George was inwardly boiling with indignation, but said nothing.

On the night of the performance George played the banned music. When the affair was over Halle went up to Seel in a great rage and, pointing to the notes, said:

"I told you to leave that out, didn't I?" "Aye, you did," said George, "but Handel told me to put it in, and he were a better judge than you!"—London Answers.

The Ancient Greek Theater.

The performance at Athens, in ancient Greece, began at dawn, and, as several pieces were produced one after the other, these performances lasted the whole day. On the days the performances were given all work was suspended, business put off, imprisoned debtors were set free and arrests strictly prohibited. Long before sunrise thousands of people assembled, and outside of the theater noisy crowds of men, women and children congregated, all bent upon enjoying themselves and eager to obtain the best seats. Many of them brought their food with them, and in order to stimulate the enthusiasm of the people copious quantities of fiery Greek wine were given to impecunious citizens by wily authors, who endeavored thus to buy the applause of a discriminating public.

Whoever Loves Is Never Old.

When life has been well spent age is a loss of what it can well spare—muscular strength, organic instincts, gross bulk and works that belong to these. But the central wisdom which was old in infancy was young in fourscore years and, dropping off obstructions, leaves in happy subjects the mind purified and wise. I have heard that whoever loves is in no condition old. I have heard that whenever the name of man is spoken the doctrine of immortality is announced. It cleaves to us from the other side. But the inference from the working of intellect, having knowledge, having skill—at the end of life just ready to be born—affirms the inspiration of affection and of the moral sentiment.—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Life of the Sun.

Adopting the well known hypothesis of Helmholtz, which attributes the production of the heat emitted by the sun to its contraction, an idea can be formed of the sun's duration. If one gives to the sun a coefficient of expansion intermediate between that of mercury and that of gas one arrives at the conclusion that it has taken 1,000,000 to 3,000,000 years for the sun to contract to its present radius; in particular, it would have taken 10,000 years to contract from infinity to a radius twice its present radius. Finally, the sun will take 200,000,000 years to contract from its present radius to half that radius, and even then its temperature at the surface will be 3,000 degrees.—Scientific American.

The Old Style.

No, this is not Esperanto: Koom oontaw thez yelauoo sands And then taak handz; Koortsid hwen eooz haav and kist The wayid waawz haav. Nor is it the song of a boy scout who is imitating the bellow of the hedgehog and at the same time whistling between his teeth. No, it is Shakespeare's lyric, "Come unto these yellow sands," etc., as rewritten after the Elizabethan style.—London Globe.

The Point of View.

"You sang off the key?" exclaimed the musical director reproachfully. "Sir!" replied the young but haughty soprano. "What you mean to say is that your orchestra occasionally failed to harmonize with my voice."—Exchange.

Near Fatality.

"An' you were at MacDougal's last night? What kind o' mahn is he?" "Leebral w' his whisky, but the quality o' it's that indeefrent I verra near left some."—Exchange.

No other person in love acts so foolishly as the person in love with himself.

CANADIAN PICTORIAL.

Canada's Most Artistic and Popular Magazine.

Its pictures pertaining to the war are alone worth the money. This elegant magazine delights the eye while it instructs the mind concerning the picturesque doings of an interesting and highly entertaining world.

Each issue is literally crowded with the highest quality of photographs, many of them worth framing. It is the most popular "Pick-me-up" on the waiting room tables of the leading doctors throughout the Dominion, and in the big public libraries it is literally "used up" by the many who are attracted by its entertaining and beautiful pages.

It's a "love at sight" publication and it has departmental features of great interest to the young woman and the homemaker.

Of it—just to quote one man's praise from among thousands—the late Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona, wrote: "The 'Canadian Pictorial' is a publication which, if I may be permitted to say so, is a credit to Canada."—(Signed) Strathcona.

On trial to new subscribers—twelve months for only 65 cents. The "Canadian Pictorial" is published by The "Pictorial" Publishing Co., "Witness" Block, Montreal, Canada. Try it for a year.
