LUCILLE LOVE

"Water—please," she stammered, then glared in horror at the international spy's downcast face. Loubeque moved carefully to her side, placing his hands upon her arm.

"There is no water," he said gently. "In their hurry they put an empty keg in the boat. It is the test of fate, my dear. Try not to think of it—try!"

He did not finish for the pity within him at her brave struggle not to show her fear, her pain. Her lips trembled as she tried bravely to smile, then, with a determined effort, she sat upright. Her head ached maddeningly and the sun seemed to fairly sizzle down upon her.

"Last night when I discovered the keg was empty," Loubeque said reassuringly, "I started working out our reckoning. We are well within the fishing zone of the coast. There is always a chance of being picked up. Don't fear, Lucille."

She smiled bravely, the effort only making her realize that the heat was paralyzing her facial muscles. After that she sat quite still, enduring in silence the maddening heat, the worse thirst. At times she thought she would be unable to stand it longer, that she must reach into this endless expanse of ocean and drink—drink; that she must plunge over the boat's side and allow the salt water to be absorbed by her body.

Night came and the stars, but night and stars from which all kindness had fled. She knew it would be impossible to endure the strain longer. Loubeque's silent figure was motionless. In one long, gliding motion she half rose, then dropped swiftly from the boat, the water encircling her, cooling her, lapping at her ears in soothing refrain that lulled her senses to a glorious sleep, visionless, profound. Then in a flash of sanity came the horrified face of the man who was dragging her back into the boat. Darkness, blank, impenetrable—slumber, goblin haunted—sun and desert with mirages of water that receded before her lips—

In her delirium Hugo Loubeque was constantly ministering unto her slightest want, soothing her with tender words, a veritable Goliath in fighting back the hordes ofimps that would have tormented her. Always was he by her side—always until the mantle of blackness completely reached out and swathed her, soothing her to untroubled slumber, a slumber disturbed but once and that when Loubeque stood before her looking down at her with a light of mingled happiness and triumph in his eyes—a look that brought dimly back to her the memory of certain things yet to be accomplished, but which she had not the strength to completely recall, a look so transitory that when she fought her eyes wide open he was gone, and she was conscious of being in a strange place, a black figure rising from the corner, then slumber once again.

Instinct forced her finally from the lethargic slumber, the instinct common to all higher forms of animals of protecting one's treasure. Her hands groped at her neck, where a slight tug had awakened her. Something brushed across her hand when she forced her eyes open, the figure she remembered to have seen in the corner was still squatting there, a figure that might have been inanimate save for the burning eyes fastened upon her. Nervously she fumbled at her neck, the feel of the ruby necklace meeting her fingers and puzzling her for a moment before it started a chaotic chain of recollections that finally marshaled themselves in semblance of order.

Out of the delirium of fever she fought remembrance of all that had happened since Hugo Loubeque dragged her back in the boat, recalled vividly from the subconscious brain that had attained ascendancy during that harrowing period, his tender nursing of her, his denial, his stern self mastery when the blazing sun, the thirst, the hopelessness would otherwise have compelled him to give up the fight; and then the fishing boat, the blessed relief of water, the breaking of the fever and consequent repairing of burned out nerve tissues, the arrival in this house and the spy's leave taking.

A cat and mouse game she played for two days with the silent Chinese woman nursing her. The woman had discovered the necklace, and Lucille knew she was constantly after it.

Short periods of time there were when the nurse would sleep lustily and then Lucille walked warily up and down the floor, gradually regaining perfect power of locomotion. That necklace meant everything to her in this strange country. It meant the ability to travel, to do anything she pleased in her fight to regain the precious papers that meant honor and liberty to her falsely accused sweetheart.

And with the return of strength came a terrible uneasiness, a great fear. Hugo Loubeque, tender though his care of her had been, had left immediately she was out of danger, and she knew his motive was to seek the papers that Captain Wetherell had stolen.

It was dawn of the third day that the nurse slipped from the room, slipped out with a stealthiness that somehow sent a chill through the girl and made her sit bolt upright in the bed, then, as the door closed, spring toward the chair beside the door. The soft patter of slippers feet upon the floor without made her stiffen with resolution as she hid herself so that the opened door would secure her from sight. Then the door opened an inch at a time, silently, cautiously, while the woman slipped inside the room, looked at the blanket upon the couch where Lucille should have been, then beckoned to a slender, yellow robed young Chinaman, who entered even more noiselessly than the nurse had by Brownlee & Carefoot. The winnings of the latter firm's horses were: 1st for single horse in harness, 1st for single horse shown on line, 1st and 2nd for Grey County Specials, and 2nd for team in harness. Their yearling colt won 4th in a class of 20 gathered from the stables of the largest breeders and importers in Canada.

GREY is not noted as a Dairy County, but there were on hand in 1913 about 35,649 milch cows. The approximate value of these was $1,782,450. From the records of the District Representative we find there are only 65 animals of the dairy breeds that are pure bred. These are represented by nine breeders. These animals are as follows: Holsteins, 26; Jerseys, 38 and Ayrshires, 1.

Only two Counties in Ontario have more beef cattle than Grey. On July 1, 1913, there were on hand 86,208 head. The value of these was $2,386,000. The District Representative has a record of

WINNER OF FOURTH PRIZE, GUELPH, 1913

1,160 animals that are pure bred animals of the beef breeds. Of these there are 8 that are Red Polls which are a dual purpose breed. The pure bred animals are made up as follows: Shorthorn, 89; Herefords, 182; Aberdeen Angus, 75; Galloway, 1 and Red Polls, 8. Prizes to the extent of $30 were donated by the County Council for beef cattle at the Guelph Winter Fair in 1913.

77,041 Sheep were on hand in Grey County on July 1st, 1913, the value of which was $460,246. There is on hand in the District Representative's office a record of 925 pure bred Sheep of the different breeds. They are made up as follows: Shropshires, 345; Leicesters, 246; Cotswolds, 18; Oxford Downs, 270 and Lincolns, 26.

$513,233 was the value of the 61,576 head of swine on hand in 1913. This does not count in what were sold or slaughtered. In 1912 this reached the total of 83,508 head, with a value of $1,064,727. As far as can be learned by the District Representative there are in the County 361 head of pure bred of the different breeds. These are made up as follows: Yorkshires, 233; Berkshires, 57; Tamworths, 66 and Hampshires, 5.

The 550,137 head of Poultry on hand in 1913 were made up as follows: Turkeys, 34,750; Geese, 23,091; Ducks, 25,943 and other Fowls, 466,353. These were valued at $247,561.

Leaving out the Poultry there were in 1913 about 293,909 head of Live Stock in the County of Grey. This is about one head of stock for every one and one-third acres of cleared land in the County.

In 1913 there were in the County of Grey 14,056 acres of orchard, beside 303 acres of small fruits and 1,670 acres of garden. In the same year the County Council generously donated $200 to put on an apple exhibit at the Toronto National Live Stock and Horticultural Show. This was done and the prizes won were as follows: In the class for the best single box of Spies, we won third prize third prize in the 100 box lot, first and third on barrels of Kings, and third on a barrel of Spies. Grey is not considered a good apple county of Ontario, but this shows that we can and do grow fruit that will take its place with the best that is grown in other portions of the Province. In 1913 the apples were not as good as they usually are and therefore the winnings are all the more creditable.

As early as 1911 Grey County apples were winning at the large Fairs in the Dominion. In that year Mr. Robert Batty secured first prize on a box of Gravensteins at the Ottawa Exhibition. We have in the County some land that is just as well, if not better adapted to fruit growing as they have in other Counties, and these victories show that our fruit, grown on these lands, has quality excelled by none.

The Board of Agriculture

What is The Grey County Board of Agriculture? This question has been asked on many occasions. It is made up of two representatives from each of the Farmers' Clubs in the County of Grey. They hold their annual meeting in January and elect their officers. The object of the Board is to promote Agriculture in the County and make the merits of the County as an Agricultural County known to all.

The Officers for 1914 are: CHAIRMAN, J. F. Brownlee, Ravenna; SECRETARY-TREASURER, T. H. Binnie, Priceville; OTHER MEMBERS OF EXECUTIVE: H. O. Breen, Tara, R. R. No. 5; J. E. Dolphin, Tara; J. Moffat, Bognor and H. C. Duff, District Representative, Markdale.

First published in The Durham Chronicle 13th August, A.D. 1914.

This World-Wide War has created demand for newspapers unprecedented in history.

The fact that Canada is in a state of war along with the mother country and their Allies against the combined forces of Germany and Austria and the further fact that Canadian troops are on the firing line, will have the effect of increasing our interest in the struggle.

The Chronicle clubbed with The Toronto Morning World will be mailed to subscribers from now to the 1st of January, 1916, for $3.50.

Take advantage of this special offer at once as we are obliged to reserve the right to withdraw it without notice as the ramifications of the war may cause a very rapid increase in the cost of white paper which will mean a much higher price for your newspaper.
