ROME, SWEET HOME.

The new arrival at the London hotel owed allegiance to the Kaiser. "From Potsdam I vos com," he announced.

"A fine place, sir," remarked the manager, politely.

"Dere vos a better."

"Yes; Berlin."

"Nein; Ohm."

"Ohm? In Germany, of course?"

"Donnerwetter, nein; in this country—in Britain."

"Ohm," repeated the manager, reflectively.

"Ya, I vos come from Potsdam to see Ohm. I vos at der concert in Potsdam, and I hear der great English soprano sing dat 'Dere is no place like Ohm,' und all der British people in der concert cry like der little babies, 'I dink to mimeself, I vill go und see dis blace Ohm vot der vos no blace like. Now, vich is der way to Ohm?'"

AFRICAN MARKSMEN.

The proficiency of the African cross-bow men amazed the Duke of Mecklenburg, who wondered how the weapon of William Tell found its way into the Bangandu country. But there it was, handed down from a dim antiquity which the natives were unable to reveal.

Several of the hunting tribes use the weapon, and some of the marksmen are so skilled that they can bring down a high soaring bird with the same sure action of the man with the gun.

"Nothing is done to the arrows used for killing birds," writes the duke in his recently published work, "From the Congo to the Niger and the Nile," "but for shooting monkeys they are invariably dipped in strophanthus juice, a poison which kills them almost immediately."

The duke was at the head of the German Central African expedition of 1910 and 1911, undertaken to supplement the work of the expedition of 1907 and 1908. Though the book makes a marvellous contribution to our knowledge of Central African fauna and flora, anthropology, ethnology, and meteorology, and shows the perfection of scientific research to the layman there are portions as interesting as the most imaginative fiction. One at times, despite the unvarnished narration, is reminded of the wild African stories of Rider Haggard. Even a chapter bearing the extremely practical title of "Research Work at Molundu," is enlivened by a vivid description of an attack on the expedition by "driver ants."

Science is not pursued on easy or comfortable terms in these wilds. It is a moment of real terror when the negroes raise the cry of "Ants, massa, ants!"

"All the spiders, lizards, and above all the cockroaches, sought safety in flight, and the boys screamed whenever they were bitten. Our combined efforts succeeded in diverting the main attack in another direction. The infuriated insects clung for some time to the roof, hanging in bunches to the palm fronds of which it was composed, and dropping one by one to the ground. Woe betide the unwary individual who received an ant in the neck!"

If you were told of a new discovery for the treatment of coughs, colds and bronchitis, as certain in its action on all chest troubles as anti-toxin is on diphtheria, or vaccination on small-pox, wouldn't you feel like giving it a trial? Especially if you could try it for fifty cents!

Peps is the discovery! Peps are little tablets, neatly wrapped in air and germ-proof silver foil. They contain certain medicinal ingredients, which, when placed upon the tongue, immediately turn into vapour, and are at once breathed down the air passages to the lungs.

In a word, while no liquid or solid can get to the lungs and air passages, these Peps fumes get there direct, and at once commence their work of healing.

Peps are entirely distinct from the old-fashioned liquid cough cures, which are merely swallowed into the stomach, and never reach the lungs. Peps treatment of coughs and colds is direct treatment.

If you have not yet tried Peps, cut out this article, write across it the name and date of this paper, and mail it (with 10c stamp to pay return postage) to Peps Co., Toronto. A free trial packet will then be sent you. All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. box.

CAN YOU FALL EASILY?

"A special providence hovers over drunken men and children."

This saying is frequently heard, but perhaps the majority of persons never thought that it really had some foundation.

As a matter of fact, the main cause of bone breakage from falls is due to the resistance of the tendons more often than from the violence of the shock.

A child or an intoxicated person rarely ever makes any great effort to recover balance in case of slipping or toppling over. So no special resisting force is exercised, and the child or adult simply sinks into a heap without serious injury.

On the other hand, when an adult, with his faculties alive and working normally, falls, he attempts to save himself. He goes through all sorts of contortions and draws up every sinew and muscle until it is tense. Then if the wrench or shock caused by falling is too severe, the bone breaks.

HOW HABITS MAKE WRINKLES.

There are different causes for wrinkles, which are not entirely due to old age. Habits of thought reflect themselves in the face and if persisted in create wrinkles through the repeated exercise of certain muscles in fixing the expression of the features. A constantly fretful or worrisome contraction of the skin of the forehead will cause wrinkles there independent of the age of the person.

In persons of a jolly, laughing nature, the lines running outward and downward from the eye, caused by laughter, will become more or less fixed.

Wrinkles running across the roof of the nose, between the eyes indicate concentrated habits of thought in general.

An over-exercise of decisiveness or determination will make permanent lines from the sides of the nostrils to the outer edge of the mouth.

The natural cause of wrinkles as they come with advancing years, however, has nothing to do with the expression of the mind in the face. It is caused by the lack of nourishment for the skin to keep the circulation of the blood up to its youthful strength. As we grow older we lose the fat that has accumulated under our skin, and which is due to an imperfectly adjusted circulation in all parts of the body.

When fat accumulates it makes the skin grow larger, and when the fat disappears with advancing age, the skin is too large, and in the act of contracting the wrinkles are formed.

A BUSY BURGLAR

For the third time within three months A. Montgomery's butcher shop was broken into last Thursday night and meat stolen. Mr. Montgomery claims to know who the parties are who make these informal calls. He would gladly give them meat if they would call and ask for it in the proper way. —Dundalk Herald.
