THE RED CROSS COLUMN

One of the most interesting accounts of the work that is being done for the wounded and sick at the front is sent in a letter from Mrs. Chauncey Depew to her sister. Since the outbreak of hostilities Mr. and Mrs. Depew have generously converted their chateau, 14 miles north of Compiègne, on the main railroad from Brussels to Paris, into a hospital, which is only three miles from the firing-line and is in such close proximity to the German trenches that the strains of the "Wacht an Rhine" can be clearly heard in the chateau.

Mrs. Depew gives the following graphic description of the work that is being carried on in her chateau: "We are getting better organized every day and the hospital and the ambulance service is really very good now. The latter, they say, is the best at the front. We are now in direct telephone communication with the trenches. As soon as the men are hurt, some one phones for ambulances and sometimes they arrive at the post de secours before the wounded are brought out of the trenches. They send us only the very worst cases and lately they seem more horrible as the Germans are using bombs now filled with nails and bits of old iron. Last Thursday we heard there were ten wounded and two died before they could be put into the ambulance and four most immediately after they arrived here. They were fairly torn to bits.

"We are so grateful to all the kind friends who have helped us and, thanks to them, we have been able to buy one ambulance wonderfully fitted up. The others belong to the British Red Cross, or to private persons who have joined our staff. We have also been able to buy a radiograph, which saves so much suffering, and many of the instruments and stores for the operating room. Beyond that, I have been able to distribute blankets, flannel night shirts and bed socks to the poor little field hospitals all along the front which for the most part are so wretched I would not believe their condition had I not seen it.

These hospitals have now been closed down by the French Government and only the hospitals under the authority of the Army Medical Corps or Red Cross Society are permitted to be used.

"The other day I was in a room—it was heated—that was the only good quality I saw that existed—mattresses made of straw covered with sacking and placed on three boards and a bolster made like the mattress. On these sacks of straw covered with a blanket, were men sick with pneumonia, typhoid, bronchitis, etc. and they could not even be undressed. The extent of their undressing was taking off their boots. They had nothing but a wagon with no springs to take them to the nearest hospital, miles away, and also they were very far from the railway. The doctor in charge asked if I could get them a thermometer. Thanks to friends, we have been able to better these conditions in several similar places.

Mrs. Depew continues: "The administration confines its efforts to the large hospitals so you must know that we are absolutely at the front, so much so that last week, the British Red Cross, who have sent us several nurses, thought they would have to take them away as we are so near the firing line. It was only on my signing a paper saying we would discharge them in time if danger arose, and their signing a paper saying they would take all responsibility of danger upon them—self as that they were allowed to stay. If we found we should be in the firing lines we would have to leave, but that does not seem probable at present.

"I personally have seen to the distribution of blankets, sweaters, mufflers, shirts and waistcoats. I gave them only where the officer in charge says they are really needed. The other day I gave 11 dozen socks knitted in Nova Scotia to the Moroccans, who, poor things, suffer most horribly with cold. They, and in fact, all said: 'How kind of people in far away countries to think of us.'"

Mrs. Depew says that she was able to give some of the tetanus serum that was sent and that it was deeply appreciated. Also a good supply of chloroform has lately arrived so that it can now be given to various postes de secours. (Note.—A large supply of tetanus serum has been ordered by the British Government from Toronto University and will be sent out at once).

Mrs. Depew continues: "We have only two of our own servants with us and have to depend on people around here for work. The laundry work is colossal; peasants do that, supervised by our old coachman and his wife. We can have only two candles to burn, as the electricity must be kept for the radiograph and the operating room, so it is not always the height of comfort. The things that have to be constantly renewed in the wards and operating room and the accessories of the motor ambulances are what we need money for and we should be grateful for any sums, large or small.

"We now have arranged with the British Red Cross to send our convalescent men straight through to the Paris hospital as soon as they can be moved, even lying down, to give place to others, and when you think of the others waiting in cold stations for a train to carry them, you can see the difference. I could tell you some very interesting things but my lips are sealed. It is a hard life, but a most thrilling and interesting one. Our surgeons may well be proud of their record—no tetanus, and only two cases of gangrene. One man who had his arm amputated and who we thought could not live, is now convalescent and has gone to Paris. Best of all not one case that has gone from this hospital but what has done well, and men already back at the front.

"We have had terribly cold weather lately and the suffering has been great. A comparative calm has existed for a few days but they say it is the lull before the storm. (This letter was written before the offensive attempted by the Germans at La Essee and Soissons). I must tell you that General Castleman, in whose army corps we are, after a thorough inspection gave us a high recommendation to the British Red Cross, and we are very content. Do you realize, however that no one from here can leave for Paris and return without a military permit? One feels a real prisoner, but they are quite right."

This is a letter from a lady who, situated a short distance from the firing lines, is seeing the real and true realities of war. It cannot fail to very deeply impress all who read it, and will perhaps be the means of inspiring many in this country to do their share on behalf of the brave men who are doing their work so nobly and suffering so greatly. We cannot begin to realize the horrors of this terrible war until we are near the zone of fighting and see day and night the constant stream of wounded and maimed men, many of them in the prime of life, being brought in from the trenches after a hard-fought fight.

These men are fighting to keep inviolate our homes and liberty and our very national existence. It will not be enough to thank them and cheer them when they return, but the time to assist is NOW when they are bearing the privations and misery of this dreadful conflict without a murmur and always with a smile. They are doing much for us: they are giving all they have their very lives, that we may rest secure and emerge from this world war greater than ever. What are we doing for them? Can we do too much?

This country has risen splendidly to the occasion and in every part of the Dominion our women are making great sacrifices for the soldier men, in high positions and with great responsibilities, are devoting their time to the work of the Red Cross and patriotic associations as well as giving of their wealth that the work may be carried on with greater energy as the war continues and as our Canadian troops take their places in the battle line. He that gives now, gives twice.

(It may be asked by our readers how the socks from Nova Scotia reached the Moroccans. Probably in this way. The Nova Scotia branch sent them to the Canadian Red Cross in London. From there they were sent to the British Red Cross and from there to the Paris depot. From Paris they probably went to the Chateau d'Annel hospital, which is recognized under the British Red Cross.)

Medical and surgical supplies, warm clothing of all kinds, tobacco in all forms, are badly needed. These may be sent to the different provincial headquarters or to main headquarters at 77 King street, East, Toronto.

CENTRAL DORNOCH.

Mrs. Herbert Trafford, also her two sons, Roy and Albert, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Trafford, of Desboro.

Miss K. Gillen of the Queen City attended the wedding of her sister this week.

The marriage of Miss Mae Gillen, youngest daughter of Mrs. M. Gillen, to Mr. Thomas Moore, of Holland Centre, took place on Monday at 10 a.m. The ceremony was performed in St. Paul's church by the Rev. Father Shaughnessy, of Owen Sound. The bride was dressed in a tailored suit of Holland blue sabardine cloth, and a white hat trimmed with two white willow plumes and a white veil. The bridesmaid wore a suit of brown serge, with a brown hat to match. The brother of the groom, Mr. Guy Moore, acted as best man. After the ceremony, the young couple, amidst showers of confetti, left for the bride's home, west of Dornoch, where a dainty lunch was served to the many friends of the young couple. In the evening, a number of the young people spent a pleasant time with Mr. and Mrs. John Heft, where a small surprise party was held in honor of the bride and groom. The evening was whiled away with games and dancing, and as the solar rays lighted up the eastern horizon, the guests left for their homes, with many wishes for a long and happy life for Mr. and Mrs. Moore. The young couple left Tuesday for a short honeymoon, after which they will return to their future home near Holland Centre.

Sorry to hear of Mr. Stewart McGillivray's accident. Hope he will soon be around again.

Sorry to hear Mrs. Watt has been laid up with a bad attack of la grippe. Hope to hear of her speedy recovery.

We are glad to see the smiling face of Mr. Edward Simpson, who is once more wielding the hammer in the blacksmith shop here.

Mr. Harry Jones, who has been in Chesley for the winter, is once more on the old plantation west of here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lueck, also Master Percy and Miss Edna Lueck spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Heathers, of Chatsworth.

Mr. Elmer Trafford intends spending the summer months in Chesley.

Mr. and Mrs. Stafford of Berkeley, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stafford, south of here.

There are representatives to a number of papers from "Dornoch," and "West Dornoch," so we thought perhaps some of the readers would like to hear from "Central Dornoch" occasionally.
