SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IX.—Second Quarter, For May 30, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, II Sam. vi, 1-19; Ps. xxiv—Memory Verses, Ps. xxiv, 7-10—Golden Text, Ps. cxxii, 1—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

David having been established as king over all Israel began at once to think of a place for the ark of the Lord, the symbol of the presence of the Lord in the midst of His people. The last record of the ark was when the Philistines returned it in a new cart with an offering; the men of Bethshemesh transgressed by looking into it, and 50,000 perished; they were glad to send it on to Kirjath-jearim, where it found a resting place for many years in the house of Abinadab in the hill (I Sam. vii, 1). I think that there is no mention of it during the reign of Saul. In our lesson chapter and in chapter vii, 2, it is mentioned sixteen times, and in the parallel record in I Chron. xiii, xv and xvi it is mentioned twenty-five times. It always suggests righteousness which God requires, but also that righteousness provided in Christ, who is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. The blood on the mercy seat speaks of the sacrifice on Calvary, and the cherubim beaten out of the same piece of gold as the mercy seat tell of the oneness of Christ with His redeemed.

The Lord of hosts dwelling between the cherubim (verse 2; I Chron. xiii, 6; I Sam. iv, 4; Ps. lxxx, 1) tells of the mercy of God in Christ and of His provision for communion with us (Ex. xxv, 21, 22), for it is our privilege to say "Truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ" (I John 1, 3). Although David's desire to provide a place for the ark in Jerusalem was commendable, he was certainly out of fellowship with God in the way he took to accomplish it and in his adopting the method of the Philistines, when he really knew better, as we shall see. David's folly in the matter of a new cart to bear the ark instead of the shoulders of the priests (chapter vii, 3; I Chron. xiii, 7; xv, 2, 12-15) brought about the death of Uzzah, terror in the heart of David and the ark resting for three months in the house of Obededom. When the Lord instructs us as to how He desires His work to be done there is nothing for us to do but obey and avoid all methods but His own.

One of the most grievous things in so called church work of our day is the worldly methods which seem to have been adopted on all sides instead of prayer and fasting and looking to the Lord alone to carry on His work in His way by His Holy Spirit. As truly as the Lord gave Moses that plan of the tabernacle and David the plan of the temple (Ex. xxv, 9, 40; I Chron. xxviii, 12, 19), leaving no room for suggestions or improvements or modifications of any kind from them, so has He as plainly told us His plan for subduing this world to Himself and making it a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. We are not permitted to be conformed to this present evil world in any way, nor are we to think of making this world, which lieth in the wicked one, a righteous world, for it cannot be done while the devil is its god, ruling as he does in politics and in commerce and in social life and also in much that is called religion. [See my tract entitled "The Secret of Missionary Interest." L. & K., box 216, Harrisburg, Pa.]

When the ark finally reached its place in the tent that David had pitched for it there was great rejoicing before the Lord, and David blessed the people in the name of the Lord of hosts (verses 12-19). There is always blessing associated with obedience to the Lord. Chapter vii is one of the most important records in the whole story of David, for it tells of God's unconditional covenant with David concerning the everlasting kingdom yet to be set up on the earth, with Israel as its center and an immortal man upon the throne of David at Jerusalem (vii, 12-24). That David knew that the promised son was not Solomon, but the Messiah, is plainly stated in Acts ii, 30, and Messiah risen from the dead, an immortal man, for no mortal man could reign forever. The same person is spoken of in the same way in Isa. ix, 6, 7, and also by Gabriel to Mary in Luke i, 32, 33, and the kingdom thus foretold will surely and literally come.

That the church is the kingdom, that the kingdom is here now, that it is only a so-called spiritual kingdom and within us, is wholly without foundation in the word of God. The much misunderstood saying in Luke xvii, 21, would not be so misunderstood if people noticed that the words were spoken to blaspheming hypocrites. The marginal reading is the correct one. David's thought at this time was to build a temple for the Lord, and even Nathan the prophet encouraged him, but the will of the Lord was otherwise (chapter vii, 1-11; compare I Chron. xvii). The plans for the building were given to David, and he was allowed to make great preparation for it (I Chron. xxviii, 12, 19; xxix, 1-5). Note David's question when he heard of this wonderful King and kingdom (vii, 19; I Chron. xvii, 17) and compare the question of the disciples in Mark iv, 41. He is the same in all the Bible story, and His name is "Wonderful." Without Him we can do nothing, but if as branches we abide in the Vine He will surely bear fruit through us.

POULTRY and EGGS

GIVE THE CHICKS ROOM.

Overcrowding Cause of Culls and Undersized Fowls.

When taken from the brooder and placed in colony coops on range or in yards, great care should be exercised that plenty of ventilation is provided the chicks and that no crowding is necessitated. The poultry raiser of the future will recognize the fact, more and more that overcrowding from the incubator to maturity has caused more culls and undersized poultry than any other one cause. It is not the cause of a great death rate, but is the cause of chicks receiving setbacks that no amount of feeding can overcome.

One can see in the majority of poultry yards a larger number of fowls than can be properly accommodated. This is also seen in brooding. The error is carried on to the laying quarters.

Shelter from sun and rain must, of course, be provided for the hen and her flock of young chicks. It is well to have a small run for the hen in connection with the brood coop and a wire door that can be closed at night for protection against marauders. The brood coop shown is one much favored in Rhode Island. It has glass about halfway across the front. The main suggestion in regard to this coop is that a wire door that would pass back of the slatted portion of the front would be an improvement.

ters, where in the majority of cases but from one to two square feet of floor space is given to the fowls. Overcrowding both buildings and land has brought failure to many, and the advice against this practice should be heeded.

Too much heat or too little during the early days of the chicks' lives will cause them to receive their first check. Placing them in growing quarters, where they are compelled to stay in poorly ventilated buildings and are overcrowded after they have been taken from the brooder or hen, is the second check.

The neglect to provide proper feed and the absence of green food is another cause, and when the hot days of summer come the failure to furnish shade, either natural or artificial, will retard growth. Check in the growth of the fowls means that much delay in their maturity.

Properly growing poultry is accomplished only by close attention to the leading essentials. This does not mean the pampering of chicks or stock. They can be checked by overkindness. But it does mean that every one who is successful must pay attention to the known laws of successful rearing. The feed rations of different successful poultry keepers may vary slightly, but the same foundation is behind them—namely, elements to make bone and muscle. There should be at least three to four square feet of space for each fowl.

A well balanced ration of bran, ground oats, meal, alfalfa, middlings in a dry mash and placed before the chicks at all times after they are eight or ten days old is a good practice. A good mixture is 200 pounds of bran, 100 of middlings, 100 of ground oats, 100 of meal, alfalfa and 15 per cent of high grade beef scraps. The best grade commercial chick feed is scattered in the litter four or five times a day until the chicks are eight weeks old, when coarser grains are fed. When milk can be obtained cheaply enough it is a welcome addition to the ration.

Selecting Breeding Hens.

In selecting the hens for the breeding pen in the spring the following factors have been found by observation and experimentation to be essential to heavy egg production—namely: First, breeding from heavy producers; second, the use of mature birds, preferably hens, not pullets; third, line breeding rather than too close inbreeding or out crossing; fourth, breeding from birds which were early producers as pullets; fifth, selecting birds which show a good, vigorous constitution; sixth, selecting for egg type long, rather deep bodies, with abundant room for the organs of digestion and reproduction; seventh, selecting large specimens of the breed; eighth, selecting late mothers, since they are usually the best winter layers; ninth, breeding from birds which have shown by records to be persistent layers; tenth, selecting birds that eat well, rise early and retire late. For such birds are usually heavy layers.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Keep Young Turkeys Dry.

The main things in raising young turkeys is to keep poult perfectly dry and never allow them to get wet. They should be kept indoors until the dew is off the grass and never be allowed to be caught in a shower of rain.
