Lesson XI.—Second Quarter, For June 13, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Ps. xxxii.—Memory Verse, 5—Golden Text, Ps. xxxii, 1. Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is certainly restful and most refreshing to turn from the record of sin, as in the last lesson, to this record of sin forgiven and to hear the Spirit of the Lord through David tell of this great blessedness.

As to the psalms of David, see how he gives God all the glory. "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and His word was in my tongue" (I Sam. xliii, 1, 2). There can be no doubt that the Lord wrote through him all the psalms attributed to him and many of the others.

In verses 1, 2, 5, there are four different words used concerning our guilt—transgression, sin, iniquity, guilt—and Dr. Adam Clarke says that the first means passing a boundary or doing what is forbidden; the second means missing a mark or not doing what is commanded; the third means what is morally wrong, contrary to equity; the fourth signifies fraud or deceit.

How rich is verse 7, my hiding place, our life hid with Christ in God. In God and in Christ! (Col. iii, 3; I Thess. i, 1; II Cor. xii, 2) My strong habitation, my dwelling place (Ps. lxxi, 3; xc, 1)—how absolutely safe, preserved from trouble, for, though we must have tribulation, we need not be troubled, and no real evil can befall us (John xvi, 33; xiv, 1). He may let us go to the furnace or the lions' den, but we shall come out without any harm whatever.

Inasmuch as "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps" (Jer. x, 23), it becomes us ever to seek from the Lord our God, with all sincerity, the way wherein we may walk and the thing that we may do (Jer. xlii, 3; Ps. cxliii, 8). In verse 8 of our lesson and in Isa. xxx, 21; Ex. xxiii, 20, we have the assurance of sure guidance if only we are meek enough to be guided (Ps. xxv, 9). There are horses which can be guided by the faintest whisper, and there are mules which sometimes seem more intelligent than their drivers, but those referred to in verse 9 are without understanding, and there are many such both among horses, mules and men.

MAKING THINGS GROW.

I would like to urge the importance of every man and woman rediscovering the art of making things grow. Not one woman in five takes the interest in house plants and her garden that her mother and grandmother took.

Not one man in ten at the present time is sufficiently acquainted with the needs of plant life to make even a fair success out of his garden, whether large or small. The knowledge of gardening and the love of seeing things grow are phases of European life from which we might learn valuable lessons.

OBJECTS OF A FARM BUREAU.

Co-operation Among Farmers is Especially Dwelt Upon.

One of the farm advisers of the United States department of agriculture in Missouri has formulated the following statement as to the objects to be attained through organizing a local farm bureau:

In order that we may have an official board made up of as many good farmers as there are townships in the county to assist the farm adviser in helping all the farmers of the county.

To circulate information about farming so that individuals won't have to experiment to find out what state institutions and neighbor farmers have found out.

To maintain an office that will accumulate valuable statistical data pertaining to the agriculture of the county.

To maintain a reference library of valuable bulletins and books for the benefit of all and more complete than any busy farmer would have time to accumulate.

To put ourselves in position to get our share of the assistance which the college of agriculture and the United States department of agriculture are prepared to give and for which we pay our share, whether organized to use it or not.

To take the first step in the county toward organizing the largest of all its industries—the farming industry.

To buy and sell co-operatively. It costs more to market than it does to grow. We cannot revolutionize a system in a day, but we can begin intelligently and conservatively to learn how to co-operate.

To maintain an exchange department through which we can learn who wants a man and who wants a job; who has pure seed and who wants pure seed; who has a farm to sell and who wants to buy; how many will need special seed—for example, which can be bought in car lots at a saving.

To co-operate with other farm bureaus in other counties in this and other states in finding markets and taking advantage of their bargains.

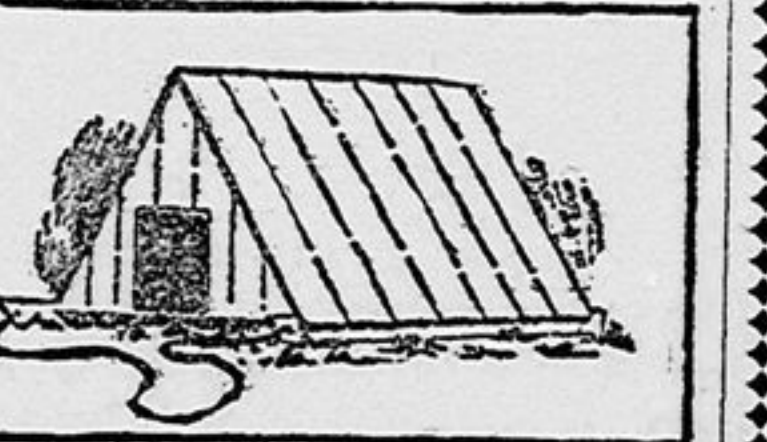

To co-operate in the control of such contagious diseases as hog cholera, which have been demonstrated to be largely controllable by co-operative effort.

To teach and bring about the teaching of subjects to farm boys and girls in schools and clubs, which will be of value to farm men and women.

In the doing of all these things to broaden our minds and add to the fullness and interest of country life.

Portable Farrowing Pen.

The illustration herewith shows how a portable farrowing pen can easily and cheaply be made. The runners are 2 by 6 and any length desired. Any sound planking will do for the body of the pen. A small window in the rear end is always advisable, as light is necessary. The pen can easily be removed from one part of the farm to another, and it will be found to be one of the most useful things used in swine breeding.

Hay Feeding.

A German experiment station has been feeding hay which has been stored for from one to three years to find if its digestibility has been influenced by storage. The conclusion arrived at was that hay was just as digestible after storing as before storing, and that the chief loss was a mechanical loss due to dropping of the leaves. Experiments were made both with meadow hay and clover hay that had been stored in the loft.

A Way to Kill Rats.

A contributor to the Farm and Fireside gives the following method for killing rats: Boil concentrated lye in a small amount of water till it forms a thick paste. Then take a bacon rind, tack to a wide board, and around the bacon rind spread the lye. Place the board so rats can easily find it. In attempting to get the rind the rats get the lye on their feet. The lye will sting them, and they will lick it off and die from its effects.
