FORTIFICATIONS OF QUEBEC.

Were Citadel Now Stands Was Formerly a Bald Rock. In his masterly sketch of Quebec and its origin in 1603 Parkman touches on what for the visitor to-day—fifty years since he wrote—is still the most striking feature of the situation of both Montreal and Quebec; namely, that these cities, one of them at least the very glass of modern progress, seem to stand in a romantic and beautiful setting of primeval forests and rocky uplands.

The Colonel and the Recruit. A prominent business man of King street west, Toronto, tells how the financial stringency has unavoidably urged curtailments in several departments in his factory.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION

Continued from page 2 written off the books of the Dominion. This is one of the results of the railway policies of the men who now cry out for economy and seek to fasten upon the Government the blame for expenditure which is a direct and unavoidable legacy from themselves.

Postal Service.

The beginning of the postal service in what is now the United States dates from 1639, when a house in Boston was employed for the receipt of letters for and from the old world.

A Brilliant Chemist.

A. T. Charron, who has recently been appointed chief chemist for the Department of Agriculture of the Province of Quebec and who will henceforth reside at St. Hyacinthe, Que., was one of the leading chemists of the Government at Ottawa and a brilliant graduate of Ottawa University.

Scientific Farming

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

Aid Given by Farmers In Fighting This Widespread Trouble. [Prepared by the United States department of agriculture.]

The recent lifting of the foot and mouth quarantines from large areas previously closed and the modification of the quarantines in still other sections has been made possible by the co-operation not only of the various state officials, but of farmers and stockmen themselves. Where this co-operation has been most in evidence progress in the eradication of the disease has been most rapid.

Indiana and Michigan are cited as instances of the importance in this respect of public opinion.

BARN PREPARED FOR FUMIGATION.

In Michigan the first herd was slaughtered on Oct. 19. Cases of the disease existed in fifteen Michigan counties and in eighteen in Indiana. In all 330 herds were affected. Sixty days later these herds had all been slaughtered and the infected premises cleaned and freed from disease.

The people not only observed the quarantine regulations, but they did all in their power to expedite the work of slaughter. In many cases they had the ditches in which the animals were to be buried dug and waiting for the killing gangs. As a rule, no objection was taken to the appraiser's valuation of the condemned stock, which is the more surprising in view of the fact that so little was generally known of the seriousness of the disease.

In only a very few cases was there any attempt to conceal the existence of the disease—in fact, public opinion was so strongly against this that it was practically impossible to do so. In one instance a man fed some skim-milk from a creamery to a calf, which later developed foot and mouth disease. It occurred to him to kill the calf and say nothing about the matter.

From such experiences live stock authorities are more than ever convinced that skim-milk should invariably be sterilized. The danger from the foot and mouth disease is, of course, a passing one. Previous epidemics have been stamped out, and there is no reason to suppose that this one will not be. Tuberculosis, however, is a permanent menace. Its symptoms are not so immediately noticeable, and it is therefore more difficult to trace the origin of the infection, but there is no doubt that it is frequently disseminated in skim-milk in the same way that the foot and mouth disease was in the instances described.

Together with the creameries, public sales of live stock have proved themselves most dangerous agents in spreading foot and mouth disease. In Indiana and Michigan the state authorities absolutely prohibited the holding of such sales in or adjacent to areas where the disease existed. The spread of the contagion in other states where this prohibition was not enforced shows the value of the precaution, but it requires strong and determined action on the part of the local authorities.
