PEG O' MY HEART

"You're very pretty."
"Do ye? Well, watch them an' mebbe ye won't mind me singin' so much. An', after all, ye're only a farmer, aren't ye?"
"Hardly that." And Jerry laughed again.
"This is called 'A Temple to Friendship,'" she explained.
"Indeed?"
"An' it's about a girl who built a shrine an' she thought she wanted to put Friendship into it. She thought she wanted Friendship. After awhile she found out her mistake. Listen." And Peg sang, in a pure, tremulous little voice that vibrated with feeling, the following:
"A temple to Friendship," said Laura enchanted,
"I'll build in this garden—the thought is divine!"
Her temple was built, and she now only wanted
An image of Friendship to place on the shrine.
She flew to a sculptor, who set down before her
A Friendship, the fairest his art could invent!
But so cold and so dull that the youthful adorer
Saw plainly this was not the idol she meant.
"Oh, never," she cried, "could I think of enshrining
An image whose looks are so joyless and dim.
But you little god (Cupid) upon roses reclining,
We'll make, if you please, sir, a Friendship of him."
"So the bargain was struck; with the little god laden
She joyfully flew to her shrine in the grove.
"Farewell," said the sculptor; "you're not the first maiden
Who came but for Friendship and took away Love."
She played the refrain softly after she had finished the song. Gradually the last note died away.
Jerry looked at her in amazement.
"Where in the world did you learn that?"
"My father taught it to me," replied

"Don't say that," Jerry interrupted. Peg simply. "Tom Moore's one of me father's prayer books."
Jerry repeated as though to himself: "Who came but for Friendship and took away Love?"
"Isn't that beautiful?" And Peg's face had a rapt expression as she looked up at Jerry.
"Do you believe it?" he asked.
"Didn't Tom Moore write it?" she answered.
"Is there anything better than friendship between man and woman?"
She nodded.
"Indeed there is. Me father felt it for me mother or I wouldn't be here now. Me father loved me mother with all his strength an' all his soul."
"Could you ever feel it?" he asked, and there was an anxious look in his eyes as he waited for her to answer.
She nodded.
"Have you ever felt it?" he went on.
"All me life," answered Peg in a whisper.
"As a child, perhaps," remarked Jerry. "Some day it will come to you as a woman, and then the whole world will change for you."
"I know," replied Peg softly. "I've felt it comin'."
"Since when?" and once again suspense was in his voice.
"Ever since—ever since"— Suddenly she broke off breathlessly, and, throwing her arms above her head as though in appeal, she cried:
"Oh, I do want to improve meself. Now I wish I had been born a lady. I'd be more worthy of—"
"What? Whom?" asked Jerry urgently and waiting anxiously for her answer.
Peg regained control of herself, and, cowering down again on to the piano stool, she went on hurriedly:
"I want knowledge now. I know what you mean by bein' at a disadvantage. I used to despise learnin'. I've laughed at it. I never will again. I'm no one's equal. I'm just a little Irish nothin'!"
"Don't say that," Jerry interrupted.
"Thank ye for promisin' to help me, Mister Jerry. But would ye mind very much if the bad little somethin' had one more spurt before I killed it together? Would ye?"
"Why, how do you mean?"
"Take me to that dance tonight—even without me aunt's permission, will ye? I'll never forget ye for it if ye will. An' it'll be the last wrong thing I'll ever do. I'm just burnin' all over at the thought of it. My heart's burstin' for it." She suddenly hummed a waltz refrain and whirled around the room, the incarnation of childish abandonment.
Mrs. Chichester came slowly down the stairs, gazing in horror at the little bouncing figure. As Peg whirled past the newest post she caught sight of her aunt. She stopped dead.
"What does this mean?" asked Mrs. Chichester angrily.
Peg sank into a chair.
Jerry shook hands with Mrs. Chichester and said:
"I want you to do something that will make the child very happy. Will you allow her to go to a dance at the Assembly rooms tonight?"
"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Chichester severely.
"I could have told ye what she'd say wurd for wurd," muttered Peg.
"I beg your pardon," said Jerry, straightening up, hurt at the old lady's tone.
"The invitation was also extended to your daughter, but she declined. I thought you might be pleased to give your niece a little pleasure."
"Go to a dance—unchaperoned?"
"My mother and sisters will be there."

CONFESSES PLOT TO DESTROY FACTORIES.
After a severe grilling by the Windsor police without result, Lefler of Detroit, last Saturday night confessed to crown attorney Roff, at Windsor, that he had conspired with two other Detroiters to dynamite Canadian factories and public buildings. In his confession Lefler said:
"I have worked with Manager Albert Kalischmidt, of the Tate plant in Ford, for several years. When the war started the plot to blow up factories making supplies and ammunition was first introduced to me by a man who offered me $200 if I would handle the dynamite at the Tate plant."
"Three months ago the man commenced to smuggle dynamite over in his automobile at Walkerville. This was stored in the vault of the Tate factory. Another man was to bring over the fuses and time clocks. I bought two suitcases in Detroit and took them to Walkerville without any questions being asked by the customs officers."
"The details of the plot were discussed in the office of this man in the Kresle Building, Detroit. The only part he took in the plot was to furnish me with $25 on account and smuggle the explosives over from Detroit."
According to the police, Lefler said he was to blow up the Tate factory, which was sold several weeks ago to a Toronto company for the manufacture of munitions for the British army. The plot included the Peabody factory which was dynamited a week ago, the armories, the Canadian Bridge Company plant at Walkerville, where 500 high explosive shells are being turned every day, and the Dominion Stamping Company's plant at Ford.
Thirty sticks of dynamite were found in the vault of the Tate factory last Friday, and several more were uncovered by a grass cutter who was cutting weeds in the rear of the building.
