Both Beef and Dairy Animals Are the Better for It.

Renders Bulls More Tractable-Caustic Potash or a Sharp Knife for Calves-The Saw or Special Shears for Older Cattle.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

It is generally realized that horns on cattle are a disadvantage, and that both feeding and dairy cattle are improved by dehorning, in that they are prevented to a great extent thereafter from causing each other injury. Dehorned cattle also mingle together more quietly and annoy and disturb each other less while feeding and drinking, and as a result make better gains. Another advantage of dehorning is that in shipping fat cattle to market the danger of injuring and bruising each other is lessened and consequently reduces the waste incidental to the removal of bruised parts from the carcasses after slaughter. The economic waste and loss though bruises inflicted by horn thrusts before slaughter is much greater than is generally realized. Bruises from this cause are known to incur a wastage in some shipments of about one per cent. of the dressed carcasses, incidental to Mr. Arnold D. Noble informs us the trimming and removal of the that hereafter he will ship Hogs from Durham every Saturday forebruised parts. noon. Highest prices paid. 11 23 th

The dehorning of bulls renders them more tractable and easily managed, and removes the menace goring and seriously injuring attendants and others. The practice preventing horn growth in young cattle overcomes the objections of those having sentiments against the operation of dehorning adult cattle. This procedure is becoming generally popular and is being practiced to an increasing extent in calves.

Caustic Potash Treatment for Calves. The development of horn growth can be effectively prevented in calves by the use of caustics applied to the "horn buttons or nubbins" soon after birth. To be successful the operation should be done when the calf is two or three days old and, at least, before it is a week old. Before applying the caustic it is best to clip the hair from around the little "horn buttons" on the head. The little "horn buttons" are then moisframe woodshed attached; drilled tened slightly and rubbed thoroughly for a few seconds with either caustic potash or caustic soda. After a short time has been allowed for the caustic to dry, a second application is given as before. The caustic can be obtained in small white sticks, about the size of a pencil, and one end should be wrapped in paper or cloth to protect the fingers while applying it. Two or three applications of the caustic, properly done, are sufficient to destroy and prevent the horns from ever developing. The skin around the treated spots should be smeared acre of land; well fenced; good stawith a little vaseline, and the calf ble. This is to prevent the caustic being washed off the treated spots and spreading to the surrounding skin and into the Nearly new Magnet cream separ-

> Outting With Knives. When calves are allowed to go without treatment until they are several weeks old, and the "horn buttons" have developed into projecting knobs, the caustic treatment is not sufficient to entirely destroy growth, and may permit an irregular growth make his relatives rich and workof horn to develop. At this age, the less. best method is to remove the projecting horn knobs by cutting them off at their base, close up to the head, with a sharp knife or with a pair of calf dehorners. In the case of male calves intended to be kept as bulls, many prefer to defer the dehorning operation until about the age of two or three years, or at a time when the horns are almost fully developed. The deferring of the operation to this time in the case of bulls generally makes them still more tractable than if deprived of their horns while young. In the case of steers and heifers not deprived their horns while calves, they should be dehorned before they reach the age of three years. In dehorning grown animals, it is essential that they are properly secured and restrained for the operation. For this purpose the animal to be dehorned should be securely fastened in a rack or chute or a solid stanchion. Once the animal is securely fastened, the horns should be removed with as little bungling as possible.

Using Saws or Strong Shears. For removing the horns, either a sharp meat saw or a pair of Keystone dehorning shears may be used. The dehorning shears are most commonly used, nevertheless the saw is quite satisfactory and serviceable for small numbers. The main feature is to do the operation as quickly as possible and to remove the horn close up to the head, about half an inch below the hair line, thus removing that much of the skin with the horn. If this is not done there is a likelihood of a secondary growth of irregular horn taking place, forming projecting horn stubs which are undesirable and spoil the animal's appearance. After the horns are removed, no further treatment is, as a rule, required, unless there is severe bleeding. In cases of severe bleeding, the core can be smeared with tar and the opening packed with a piece of absorbent cotton, or with a piece of clean cheese cloth. This dressing can be allowed to remain for a day and then removed and the parts washed off with antiseptic solution, such as a two per cent. soluat any time other than during fly time in summer and during zero weather in the case of cattle wintering outside.-C. D. McGilvray, M.D.V., Ont. Vet. College, Guelph.

World Leaders I Have Met

(Continued from page 6.) ienced leaders who have battled up were being taken up for some laudfrom the ranks through long, laborious, disappointing, disheartening, something, asked: "How much are hard, tiresome years, through many failures to success. Their experi- ply. Then he at once wrote a cheque ences are just modern testimony for that amount. "I have not found confirming the accuracy of the les- big men selfish and grasping," he desons taught in the Bible. Hon. Mr. Bowman, Minister of Forests, in his campaign speeches, took much pleasure in referring to the magnates who made money from public utilities and spent it in luxury and idle-

Bowman's Charge Refuted. "As I knew nearly all of these men to whom he was referring, and knew them intimately, knew their private life, we asked him to name one. He could not. The reverse is and was true of every man who is associated with our traction and other public utilities. A number of them, after giving the best of their lives building up industries that brought millions of capital into Canada, paid out millions in wages and for Canadian supplies, ended their days, or are ending their days with little money. It is not the money they make, it is what they do with it.

Ontario Indicted.

"The way we natives of Ontario, more than any other class in Canada, more money than you can use." run after the agitators, the crooks, the hypocrites and false gods, makes me many times sad and depressed. I find myself many times alone in the wilderness. I have no possible or direct or indirect selfish personal ends to serve in pleading with you for a more generous treatment of our prize men and women-our real gods. There is no love lost between some of them and myself. The relations are most unfriendly in some cases. You can differ, you can criticise, can abuse a man or a policy in private life, even in a local paperweekly or daily-you can get away son with it, but when you have a paper and by the more influential classes it | weeks with his sister. is another matter.

Defends Financial Leaders.

"The only thing these men car give me to-day is news. They can't give me money-making tips-I never use them excepting for the benefit of readers. My only interest is the upbuilding and prosperity of this country, and we can do it only by maintaining and aiding our tried men and policies and not worshipping idols and setting up false gods. Notwithstanding all that the hired labor agitators, politicians and propagandists from Central Europe may teach, and it is they who are at the back of this campaign against the men who are doing things in Britain, Canada and the United States, I know of no real American or Canadian business man or financnal leader who wants to make money that he may use it for personal wants or to

Hard Workers.

"I know of no American or Canadian business or financial leader who is not a very strenuous worker and simple liver. I know of no American of Canadian business or financial leader who is not using his great profits to extend his present industries or risking them in new enterprises, developing the country, increasing employment and adding to our prosperity. I know of many of them who are always thinking in terms of their employees and the public interest. We are hearing these days of an assessment on capital to pay debts, and the capitalistwho is just a busy business manis pictured as a grasping, selfish miser, surrounded by and defending his money bags. There is no greater libel on modern business. He is depicted as opposing and evading the income taxes. What a libel!

Tax Incomes. "As a matter of fact one of the richest men in Canada recommended the Minister of Finance not to issue tax free bonds and to place a heavy tax on large incomes. He himself pays over 70 per cent. of his income to-day. Speaking about it recently he had no complaint to make on his own account, but regretted that such a large amount of the money he was making went to pay works in railway building and public service, instead of where his profits used to go, in developing Canadian resources. Instead of business men having money to burn, as men like Bowman think, these busy men are invariably hard up, though always looking forward to the time when they can get some pleasure out of the money they tion of creolin or lysol. Deprecates Influence.

In conclusion, Col. Maclean deprecated the practise of using family influence in obtaining positions This, he considered a great bar to success. Good men don't worry about influences and salary, as evidenced in the case of Charles M Schwab, who was in receipt of million annually. When Morgan objected, Sshwab consented to ac cept $200,000 and a percentage on the extra profits he could make for the corporation, with the result that a the end of the year he drew $4,000,-
