OTHER PAPERS' OPINIONS

Latent Orchards

Scattered throughout the length and breadth of Old Ontario there are farm orchards that are worse than latent. Occasionally they do yield a quantity of fruit that is dumped on the local market at slaughter prices, much to the detriment of the apple industry. Fruit growing is now a specialty, and it is unwise for the farmer with a small orchard to set himself up as a fruit grower unless he has the time and inclination to go at the task in a systematic manner.

Under certain conditions, however, it will pay to take care of the farm orchard, in order to supply the home with good quality fruit, and perhaps have a surplus for neighbors who are without trees. A small orchard of twenty-five to fifty trees can easily be pruned without interfering with chores or other work, and that number of trees will justify the purchase of a barrel sprayer, which is needed on most farms now for spraying stable, hen coops, and other outbuildings. A couple of barrels of spray can be put on at the proper time without disturbing, to any great extent, the program of work in the fields; and by following the spray calendar carefully and doing the work thoroughly any farmer can get reasonably good quality fruit from the farm orchard.

If such a policy were adopted it would be beneficial to the commercial grower, for many farm orchards, in a neglected condition, are nothing but sanctuaries for insect and fungus pests. These breeding grounds help to intensify the infestations and scourges which commercial growers must fight every year.—Farmer's Advocate.

Taking a Chance!

Every farmer takes chances. The wheat grower runs a whole gamut of chances from drought and high winds after seeding, to frost and impossible harvest weather in the fall. The potato growers take chances with "bugs" and beetles, and blight and half a dozen occult diseases that affect the crop. The fruit grower is subject to the vagaries of the insect and fungus pests and the caprices of the weather. There is an element of uncertainty about every farming enterprise, but the farmer who purchases and sows clover seed that is plainly stained a distinct color to indicate that it lacks hardness, or buys and sows grass seed that he knows contains noxious weed seeds is deliberately transgressing.

With the present system of grading grass seed one may innocently buy and sow a number one seed and with it convey to the soil such detestable weeds as bladder campion. An analysis of the seed, made free of charge at one of the Seed Branch laboratories, is the best safeguard against the unintentional introduction of noxious weeds.

But when one buys alfalfa seed, stained red to indicate that it is imported from a district where varieties hardy under our conditions are not grown, the grower is taking a gambler's chance indeed. He takes the chance of it perishing the first winter or the second, and he furthermore is attempting to establish on his farm a stand of alfalfa that will yield, if it lives, a variety of seed that will not be wanted.

There are times when one must take chances, but we never yet heard of anyone winning when taking a chance with poor seed.—Farmer's Advocate.

Should the Department Pay?

The Caledon Mountain grade has a quagmire at the bottom of the big hill and motorists by the hundred have been pulled therefrom within the past few days. Saturday there were five teams pulling out motorists and on Monday three teams were on the job. A team can be had at any hour of the night. This service is supplied free of charge by the Department of Highways. We believe this is a service which the Department owes to the motoring public who travel provincial highways. Where the greater part of the road is in excellent shape and a few bog-holes appear on the road's surface, we believe it's up to the highways branch to instruct their men on the beat to see that motorists are not detained unavoidably. Too often is the motorist held up by some party interested in lining his own pocket only who takes advantage of the motorist's awkward position. In his license fee and gas tax the motorist has already paid for his use of the highway, and when defects occur the expense should not be placed on the motorists themselves.—Dundalk Herald.

Agriculture in Schools

A. P. Mewhinney, M.P.P. for North Bruce, speaking in the Legislature with regard to Premier Ferguson's Township School Board Bill, said there was no public demand for it. There has been talk of teaching agriculture in rural schools, he noted. I want to say, he declared, "That boys and girls of rural schools are sick and tired of agriculture. They get it two hours before they go to school and three or four hours afterward."—Chesley Enterprise.

A Fixed Easter

A bill has been introduced into the British House of Commons to stabilize Easter. The proposed day is the Sunday after the second Saturday in April. That is to say, instead of ranging over a period of about six weeks, Easter Sunday would always fall between April 9 and 16. The Home Secretary stated that lay opinion at home and abroad is in favor of a fixed Easter. The International Chamber of Commerce, the League of Nations Committee and railway companies give it their support. Representatives of all the Churches have stated that no point of dogma is involved, and that, provided it were proved to be for the convenience of the people, the Churches would not be likely to oppose. The scholastic profession also favors the proposal. There seems then no reason why, where once the bill is passed, the Government should not take the necessary steps to secure the definite concurrence of the religious bodies in England and on the Continent. One objection was raised—that a late Easter was nearly always rainy, and that the period April 9 to 16 was one peculiarly liable to rain and cold. But in a climate so accustomed to flout meteorological calculations the House evidently thought they might as well take the risk.—Mildmay Gazette.

In "Type" Terms

Forty minutes is the time limit for speeches in the House of Commons. If you don't think a fast speaker can say considerable in forty minutes, take a look at Hansard. We have it figured that fluent speakers can "say" at least a column in ten minutes. Almost an hour's time is required to set up a column of type on the linotype. So when one of our representatives makes a speech in his or her respective House, the linotype operator is hit hard even with a limit of forty minutes, as is the case in the Commons. It takes him at least three hours and a half to put in type a speech of forty minutes. "Sticking" by hand would require about a day and a half to set up in type a speech which took but forty minutes to reel off.—Dundalk Herald.

Go Slow on Old Age Pensions

Premier Ferguson is taking a wise course in refusing to be stampeded into enacting an old age pension law without first giving the proposition mature and careful consideration. Simply because other provinces have adopted such legislation is no reason why Ontario should follow suit without considering the question from every angle. The financial obligations of other provinces are trivial in comparison with which those of Ontario would be under such a law and it is wise not to shoulder such an undertaking until we know exactly what we are doing. Our ideas of charity and allied subjects have undergone somewhat of a change during recent years. Of course, poverty and misfortune in old age are things to be deplored, especially when the victims are brought to that stage by conditions over which they had no control. The collapse of a bank and other institutions have swept away the savings of thrifty people who had provided for their old age and left them penniless. Cases such as this are where old-age pensions would prove a Godsend, but there are other instances that are not so deserving. Go to the race-track, step into the picture shows any night, and you can see the class of fellows who will be drawing old-age pensions tomorrow. The thrifty, hard-working people will have to sweat to provide the means to keep those improvident bums in comparative luxury in the evening of their lives—and this class of no-goods live a long time. The number of needy people who have to be kept at the public expense is very small, but the bums and the never-do-wells is large. Why, we ask, should the hustlers and self-sustaining who labor and keep themselves, be taxed to maintain that class who were never any good to themselves or to anybody else? Premier Ferguson is well advised to go slow on this old-age pension business.—Orangeville Sun

The newly-weds on their honeymoon had the drawing room. The groom gave the negro porter a dollar not to tell anybody on the train they were bride and groom. When the happy couple went to the diner for breakfast next morning all the passengers snickered and pointed and eyed the couple knowingly. The groom called the porter and demanded: "Did you tell anybody on the train we were just married?" "No, sir," said the dusky porter. "I told 'em you all was just good friends."

LOCK THE DOOR

There is a legend about a farmer who went to great expense to fortify and lock his barn after a very fine blooded horse had been stolen.

That legend has come to be a means of showing how unwise it is to wait until the horse has been stolen to lock the door.

Advertising is a form of protection against loss of business which is occasionally treated like the farmer treated the barn and the horse.

From a seemingly logical premise that since there is no business or since business is not quite what it should be now, the merchant proceeds to the decision that there is no need to advertise.

This reasoning overlooks a great fundamental fact and that is that advertising is extended salesmanship; that just because a man hasn't money with which to buy today is no reason he will not have it tomorrow; that the man who goes after the business consistently reaps consistent rewards; that most folk shop where they are invited to shop; and—that
