OTHER PAPERS' OPINIONS

Should Make Laws Public

"Ignorance of the law is no excuse," so says 'the law'. That's an ancient motto. Another ancient saying is "the law is a ass!" It is in many ways. Here's an example: every year the provincial legislature sits for a couple of months and makes a whole new batch of laws and changes a lot of those that are on the books—and nobody knows a blessed thing about it. It wasn't so long ago that a couple of farmers in this section were fined for selling sacks of potatoes because they didn't have the proper kinds of tags on them. The legislature passed the law about tags; nobody on the back concessions heard a thing about it; a bunch of "sneak" inspectors the government sends out finds someone breaking the law and soaks them—"ignorance of the law is no excuse!" That kind of stuff is all rot. There is no reason why anybody should be ignorant of the law today—if the government made the law known. Years ago the facilities for making the laws known were few, but today there is not one in every ten thousand people who do not read the daily and weekly press. If the government would spend a little of the money they pay out in gobs of $10,000 to "strong men" to advertise the new changes to the old laws, so that everybody would know about them, there would be a whole lot more wholesome respect for the law throughout the country.—Kincairdine Review-Reporter.

Out On Parole

The alleged automobile thief who was shot and captured near Stratford last week, turned out to be a youth who had been sent to prison, and let out on parole, after serving only a part of the sentence. What might be expected? Isn't a thief a thief just as a snake is a snake? The whole trouble with the existing army of thieves and robbers is the slack treatment of first and second offenders. But the long-suffering public, the police and the courts are slowly waking up to the situation. The lash and "still" sentences are coming into vogue, and fleeing thieves are being shot down.—Lucknow Sentinel.

Mail Orders Decreasing

Those who have followed the mail order business in the past few years have been aware of the falling off of this type of merchandising. The advent of good roads, motor busses, automobiles, etc., have enabled the small town citizen and the farmer to move rapidly at small cost so that instead of making purchases by mail he is doing his buying direct.

It may be a somewhat daring prediction but it seems as if the days of the mail order business are numbered. If reports are true, there has already been a marked shrinkage in the trade of the mail order houses. People are learning that it is not altogether satisfactory to buy a pig in a poke. The auto has made it easy for people in the country to drive to a town or city and see what they are buying and this is becoming more of a custom. The more aggressive attitude of town merchants offers opportunities and satisfaction to the housewives who enjoy chasing bargains. The advertisements in the local weeklies are perused with as much zest as used to be the case with the "ads" of the city department stores.

we use the words they apply to objects or rates of movement that are strikingly different from ourselves or the common pace at which we move. Is an ant small? We say so, but compare her with an atom that measures one hundred-millionth of an inch. Is Mt. Everest large? It seems so, yet it is but a grain of sand on the surface of the earth; and the earth, some eight thousand miles in diameter, is tiny compared with a star like Antares, which has a diameter of four hundred million miles.

When we rush from New York to Chicago, a thousand miles in twenty-one hours, we talk of speed, but the electrons within an atom travel at the rate of one hundred thousand miles a second. Unconscious of the movement of the earth, we speak of an airplane annihilating space at two hundred miles an hour. But all the time the earth is turning, perhaps in the opposite direction, and traveling through space around the sun which is itself carrying its system of planets at a speed of thousands of miles an hour toward some vague spot in the heavens near the star Vega. So our airplane is very likely being carried backward far faster than it is going forward and is actually losing ground in space.

The Bible tells us that nothing is new under the sun; but what is old? Bread is old in a week, an automobile is old in five years, a man is old at seventy or eighty. But the historian talks of old civilization thousands of years in the past, the geologist pushes age back millions of years to the time when the earth was formed. What the astronomer means by "old" we hardly dare to guess.

So you see there is hardly anything absolute in our conceptions of time and space. Everything is old or young, large or small, swift or slow, relatively to something else. That is the hard kernel of common observation that lies at the centre of Professor Einstein's theory which even the youngest of us can understand.—Youth's Companion.

Entirely Out of Place

"Palson," exclaimed Ebenezer Johnson, "Ah's done got religion." "That's fine, brother! You am gwine 'lax aside all sin?" "Yes, sah." "You am gwine 'l church?" "Yes, sah-ree!" "You am gwine 'l care for de widows?" "Ah sho' am!" "You am gwine 'l pay your debts?" "Palson, what am your idee in bringing dat up? Dat ain't religion—dat's business."

MUST SPEED IN DETROIT OR PAY THE PENALTY

Motorists who drive in the inner lanes of traffic on Woodward avenue, in the City of Ferndale, after the next few days must travel 35 miles an hour or face the possibility of arrest for blocking traffic. Chief of Police Roy Reynolds of Detroit announced last week.

There are four 40-foot traffic lanes on each side of the centre of Woodward avenue. The inner two on each side are to be marked, Reynolds said, and signs posted to show they are to be used only by automobiles making a speed of 35 miles an hour.

Slow drivers, busses and heavy trucks are to remain in the other two lanes.
