The beginning of this week was a troduce sanitary subjects or say anyfield day in local Methodism. It was thing at all about physical condition their Anniversary time. Rev. Mr. Birks, a fromer popular pastor had been secured to conduct the services, have by your words given another and instead of the time honored tea, with its consequent worry, and bustle, and expense, it was this time decided to have a lecture on Monday evening.

The Sunday services were largely attended, the church being packed in the evening, all delighted to hear he would have said something about once more the eloquent pastor, whose pointed, logical, and well digested sermons were thoroughly enjoyed The choir too on Sunday and Monday were in excellent form and rendered Form a conspiracy against us, and let some appropriate pieces in first-class style.

Monday evening the church was weil filled with an audience containing many from other churches, and a sprinkling from the sister congregation | the first and hearing the depressing of Zion, in Glenelg. Dr. Jamieson, M. P. P., was made chairman and a transfer of seats with Mr. Ferguson being spoken of the Dr. felicitously thought his theology would be as defective as Mr. Ferguson's politics, while Mr. Birks in the same strain thought if Mr. Ferguson would read more politics and the Dr. more bible there would be a gratifying evened-up result.

Mr. Birks on being introduced complimented Dr. J. on the promotion that a useless surplus of discouragement had come to him, and expressed again the great pleasure it gave him to mingle with them once more and his regret at the impossibility of calling on all his old friends, he told a humorous story to illustrate the danger he might suffer from the abundant kindness showered upon him.

was not so much what a man had as the use he made of it that produced in life. He drew a vivid picture of the pioneer settler and his young wife successful in more than a material way, though he had less comfort in a year than we had in a day. They made the most of it. The great doctrine of "Work" as a means of success was dwelt upon, native genius was only another name for hard work.

He urged on the young the reading of books that would provoke and evoke thought; the mind should be giving as well as receiving, should be a fountain and not a sponge. The fields of history and poetry were ample for profitable research, but he urged especially that biography should be studled, it was too much neglected now. In a fine climax he showed how profitable would be the lives of great men, good men, saints and apostles and Jesus Christ himself. Fiction should be to our whole reading as recess was to school. It softened the brain, deteriorates the heart and weakens the intellect. In an eloquent peroration he said, 'faithful to all duties, alive to all good experiences, true to the best examples, it would be said of that man when he passed away "He made the most of it.

Mr. Birks has a wonderful command of language and occasional bursts of eloquence illumine his addresses. His sermons show that he is a growing man. Personally he looks well, though his friends have difficulty of recognizing him owing to his bearded appearance, "more chin" as he says himself, Mrs. Birks accompanies him, and she is also being heartily welcomed. They left Wednesday for home.

nice sum of $114. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the lecturer.

----TALMAGE ON FRIENDLINESS.

A recent sermon by the great preacher contains the following terse remarks on gossip as an injury to friendship:

Oh my friends, better cover up the faults and extol the virtues, and this habit once established of universal friendliness will become as easy as it is for a syringa to flood the air with sweetness, as easy as it will be further on in the season for a quail to whistle up from the grass. When we hear something bad about somebody whom we always supposed to be good, take out your led pencil and say, "Let me see! Before I accept that baieful story against that man's character I will take off from it 25 per cent for the habit of exaggeration which belongs to the man who first told the story; then I will take off 25 per cent for the additions which the spirit of gossip in every community has put upon the original story; then I will take off 25 per cent from the fact that the man may have been put into circumstances of overpowering temptation. So I have taken off 75 per cent. But I have not heard his side of the story at all, and for that reason I take off the remaining 25 per cent. Excuse me sir I don't believe a word of it."

He illustrates a too common lack of thoughtfulness thus: If you meet some one who is improved in health, and it is demonstrated in girth and color, say, "How well you look !" But if, on the other hand, under the wear and tear of life he appears pale and exhaused, do not in-In the case of improved health you impulse towards the robust and the jocund, while in the case of the failing health you have arrested the decline by your silence, by which he concludes, "If I were really so badly off, it." > THE KIND OF CATTLE IT PAYS TO FATTEN.

The following extract, taken from the Chicago Live Stock Report, will be of value to those who intend feeding cattle the coming winter, says Farining of

"In nothing is the importance of a righi start more vital than in the fattening of live stock, and particularly cattle, for market. Many elements contribute to success, but, unless the start is right, skill and care count for out little, and failure is stamped upon the undertaking from the very outset unless indeed fortunate (circumstance, such as a combination of high-priced beef and low-priced feed should inter- the beart is true Tom. vene. It is of the greatest moment, therefore, that the feeder should select the right kind of cattle for fattening. We say kind and not breed, for while there are soveral good beef breeds there is but one beef type which is possessed by the several breeds in common. With some feeders a steer is a steer, and the idea that one animal may be more profitable to feed than another does not seem to enter their heads, or if it does it is chased away by the delusive thought that the smaller cost of the inferior animal will offset any difference. Fortunately this class is small, and the vast majority will understand that the profitable steer to feed is the one bred and built for beef-making, the animal that repays feed and care by putting on | a thick covering of rich, ripe, juicy The collections amounted to the flesh, deep and thick in the parts from whence the high-priced cuts of meat are taken-and not the animal that converts the bulk of his feed into tailow and hardly puts on flesh enough to decently cover his bones, and that of inferior quality. No argument that can be brought to hear against the scrub and in favor of the well-bred animal is so potent as to show that it pays to raise and feed the latter."
