The late Lord Glenely was fond of telling the following story of Mr. Labouchere, father of the first Lord Taunton, as illustrative of the enterprise necessary to the success of the poor but clever young man: As a young man Labouchere was house of Hope. When it came time to marry having discreetly made his own choice of the lady, he applied to Sir Francis Baring for leave to pay his addresses to his daughter. Sir Francis demurred, as Labouchere, though rising young man, had no fortune. "But if Hope takes me into partnership?" said Labouchere.

Labouchere than went to Hope, and intimated his wish for this arrangement. Hope in his turn demurred.
