ROB ROY.

In the beginning of our budget we beg leaye to wish you Mr. Editor and staff a yery happy New Year.

Miss Mary Beaton of Toronto returned home last week to spend a short time visiting friends around here.

Ms. Alex. Kennedy of Toronto, accompanied by his wife, spent Christmas at his home here from which he has been absent for a number of years. He returned Monday after Xmas leaving his wife to spend another week at the homestead. She returned last Monday. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy a happy and prosperous journey through life.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McComb of your town spent Xmas with their son Mr S F McComb.

Mr Joe Firth is again welcomed back by one and all to spend the winter at home after spending several years in the Great North West.

Miss Eliza McCormick is at present visiting friends down in the lower settlements. Somebody will be lonesome till she returns.

Quite a number attended the annual School meeting last Wednesday. Mr Jno Gray was elected trustee for the coming 3 years. Mr Gray has'nt many children going to school but he has the experience and therefore makes a first class trustee. Success John.

were entertained for a short time by teacher and pupils. A Christmas tree was the centre of attraction especially by the pupils who were all kindly remembering away at a well on Mr Thos Sullivan's ed. Mr Thos Sullivan acted as Santa Claus, and with Mr John James Patterson as his assistant, distributed the prizes to the children with a few well chosen words of encouragement to each. At the close of the entertainment the teacher was made the recipient of a handsome writing case and a work box, Miss Neltie O'Hearn on behalf of the school making the presentation, Miss Jessie McRae read an appropriate address to the teacher from the scholars, to which Miss Stafford feelingly

CATCHING JEWFISH.

ANGLING FOR MARINE MONSTERS IN SAN DIEGO BAY.

The Process Is of the Progressive Kind. The Part Toothpicks Play-The Run With a Keg-Members of the Bass Family That Weigh Hundreds of Pounds.

Don't talk to a man from southern California about black bass fishing, or he will make your best bass story a fee-ble, pitiful thing. He will tell you of black bass that could swallow the biggest day's catch you ever made and take in your creel for dessert without as much as gulping. Voice a doubt, and the man from San Diego will pull from his fishing traps something that looks like a one fluked ship's anchor. That is what he fishes with for the strange, monstrous black bass in the bays and about the islands of the southern California coast. They don't call them black bass down there, though the fish commissioners say they are, and the naturalists have identified them by fins and bones and form with the gamy two and three pounders that make men fickle even to trout.

The men who catch these fish that sometimes weigh 1,000 pounds call them jewfish-a corruption of junefish. The last is a translation of one of their Mexican names. Probably they were called junefish from the fact that they are plentiful along the shores in the late spring and early summer. No matter how he got his name, the jewfish is a wonder. He looks like a bass fisherman's nightmare when they get him out of the water. Every fin and mark is there, magnified out of all proportion. His scales are as big as half dollars, his mouth is a gaping chasm, and the spikes of his dorsal fin are bigger than tenpen-

The process of catching a jewfish is a progressive and interesting one. The fishers begin at the beginning. With bent pins or dip nets they look for minnows or sardelles. The quarry secured, it promptly becomes bait, and the concourse is treated to smelt fishing. Then comes the smelt's turn in the succession. He is impaled, and the fisherman with a heavier rod and a larger hook, roes to the other side of the wharf for a halibut or a sea bass.

When the bait, dead or alive, is ready, the stoutest armed man on the wharf picks up the line. He swings the two or three pounds of bait around his head like an Indian does the bolas and hurls it seaward. The great line, as thick as a lead pencil, coils out after the hook, and that is nearly all until the fish comes along.

Incidentally toothpicks play quite a part in the fishing. Each fisherman takes a handful with him when he leaves the breakfast table. They stick one in a crack at the top of a pile and loosely loop the line around it. The shore part of the line is coiled on the wharf, and the end is fast to an empty powder keg or some such thing that will float well. On the toothpick is stuck a bit of white rag, and as half a dozen or a dozen lines are used at once there is a string of these little signal flags all along the dock. The fisherman has nothing more to do for awhile than to watch the flags. When one goes down, it means that something has taken the bait. After gathering in the barracouda heads or the impaled halibut the jewfish starts away like the locomotive on a fast express. Down goes the signal flag. Everybody around runs for the kine. They know they can't hold the fish, but the resistance makes it harder for him and helps them to tire him out-the ultimate object. The great fish does not struggle at first, but moves steadily seaward, pulling the line through the men's hands. Occasionally, when the fish weighs less than 200 pounds, they can tire him out without paying out all of the line, but usually it all goes, and presently the struggle is transferred to the water. The empty powder keg bounces over the water most erratical ly, the men chase it in a boat, and when they catch it hold on. Then the réal fun of jewfishing begins. It is just sport for a fish of any size to tow a whitehall around the bay, and it is pretty rough sailing in his wake. As soon as he realizes that there is a fight on the jewfish seems to forget that he is a staid bottom fish. All the steam of his black bass ancestors gets riley, and he plunges and turns, twists and strikes. Somewhere down in the cavern of his gullet he has an arrangement of bone like a couple of millstones, and when he discovers he cannot spit out the hook he fish in San Diego bay, and though the books are made of hand forged tool steel buoy chains and docks, the fight must end in the death of the fish. Sometimes he tows the boat for three hours before his strength is gone and he is hauled to the surface. The death struggle is worst of all. The fish is dragged to the top and lies there, apparently all but ead. Then they drive a harpoon into him, and the sting of the steel starts all his life again. The harpoon line holds him near the surface, and he makes a great race for a little while, but, of course, it cannot last. At the end the ash is towed back to the dock, and there the floating population of San Diego is assembled. Everybody gets hold of a rope and hoists the giant fish upon the dock, and there the tired monster flounders, its mouth gaping like a tunnel Being East and West Parts of Lot and its eyes, big as baseballs, starting
