OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

The capital has once more assumed its sessional bustle and activity, and the wheels of legislation, which were set in motion by his Excellency with much pomp and ceremony last week, are now spinning merrily along with accustomed smoothness and regularity. The expectations prevailed in some quarters that, inasmuch as the session was so late in starting, it would be shorter than usual but the indications at present are all the other way. There may not be a large number of Government measures laid before the House but one or two of them will be very hotly debated and stubbornly opposed by the Opposition, while the private bills already on the order paper are much more numerous than is usual at this period of the session.

The Redistribution Bill.

The two measures that are going to consume the most time will be the redistribution bill and the Senate reform resolution. The policy of the government on both these matters was very clearly outlined by the Premier in his splendid speech on the address. Sir Wilfred's remarks thereon may be appropriately quoted here:—"He" (Sir Charles Tupper) "condemns it in advance because to him I regret to say, and to his party, the word redistribution means gerrymander. There is a sinister import in the very word. He said we wanted to play with loaded dice. No, our effort is to unload the dice. Who loaded the dice, I want to know? Who loaded the dice with the infamous franchise act? Who loaded the dice with the still more infamous redistribution bill? Who carved the Province of Ontario into monuments of shapeless deformity, shapeless deformity to the eye, and of even greater deformity to every instinct of right and justice? Sir, the honorable gentleman asked me yesterday where was our constitutional power to pass the act we propose. I answer the constitutional power of the House of Commons to undo every wrong, and to give justice to those who have suffered wrong. We do not propose assuredly, to increase the number of members of the House, but it is our aim and purpose to undo the great wrong the supreme injustice, which was done against the liberties of the people in 1882. Let me say to the honorable gentleman that I should be ashamed of myself if we were to enter in the path trodden by himself and his friends. We do not want any loaded dice, what we want is to have fair play for them as well as for us. We are here in the consciousness of our strength, and so help me God, I think we shall have that strength in the hearts of the people but never by such methods as were resorted to by the honorable gentleman."

Senator Mills Says Ditto.

This statement of the Government's policy was further borne out by Hon. David Mills, who as leader of the Senate, declared from his seat in the Upper House, that the bill was intended to repeal a gerrymander bill passed by the Conservative Administration in 1882. No doubt, continued the Minister of Justice, the Government could have secured a party advantage had it desired to introduce a gerrymander bill, but it had simply decided to remove the gerrymander of 1882 from the statute book by adhering to county boundaries in the new distribution. In this way they were following the traditions of Great Britain, Sir John Macdonald in 1875 made a strong plea for the observance of precedent by maintaining county boundaries in the redistribution of seats. The Government was not introducing anything novel in returning to that system. It was their desire to adopt a rule adhering to county boundaries which would be respected by all Governments. The carrying out of this system, he maintained, would not interfere with the system of representation by population, as far as the relation of the Provinces was concerned, and that was all that was provided for in the constitution. The desire of the Government was simply to place the two great political parties on an equality at elections.

As to Senate Reform.

As to the second great topic of current interest, that of Senate Reform, the Premier has already made clear his ideas upon that matter and he now, not only reiterated his proposal, but supports it by reference to accepted authorities, quoting the opinion of Sir John Bourinot to the effect that, "in some countries there is a union of the two Houses to consider and pass bills on which one or the other disagrees. This is a useful precedent though it is borrowed from the United States."

Sir Wilfred Laurier made it further evident that it was the intention of the Government to proceed in this matter with due deliberation and by constitutional means. The Canadian Parliament cannot legislate thereon but can only petition the Imperial Parliament. Let me add" continued the Premier "that not only have we the intention of asking the House to express its views upon the question, but certainly we intend as well to have our resolution for the improvement of the Senate submitted to the Senate itself. The Senate is a Constituent part of this country, it is a part of the institutions of this country. Whether it approves or disapproves and I am rather inclined to think it will disapprove, I for one shall always treat it with the respect to which it is entitled, I may differ from the Senate and the Senate may differ from us, but at all events we do not intend to proceed in this matter by any revolutionary method. On the contrary the Senate itself will be asked to perfect the work of Confederation, not to destroy the work of Confederation, as my honorable friend has said, but to perfect it, because human institutions, the Senate among the rest are essentially perfectible."

The Prohibition Problem.

Another matter to which the Premier gave considerable attention and very naturally so, was that of the plebiscite and his remarks thereon were closely followed not only by the members of the House but by a large number of prominent prohibitionists who crowded the galleries. Some of these gentlemen are credited in the Opposition press with having charged the Government with a breach of faith in connection with the plebiscite. The Premier however made that matter very clear. "The Government," he said, "has broken no pledge to the prohibitionists because the prohibitionists themselves never made any demand. What is the history of the plebiscite? The history of that matter is:—We did not make a pledge to the prohibitionists as a class, as a body, as an association. We made a pledge to the Liberal party. We made a pledge in 1893 at the time of the convention which was held in this city, that if we came into office we would have a plebiscite upon the question of prohibition, so as to obtain the honest, unbiased opinion of the people upon that great question."

Continuing Sir Wilfred explained that there was a thorough understanding in the party as to the future course to be taken. If the plebiscite was unmistakably in favor of prohibition, the anti-prohibitionists were prepared to fall into line and work honestly and earnestly to forward that policy. If on the other hand the vote was not large enough to warrant the introduction of a prohibition measure then the temperance section of the party was pledged to acquiesce, and the question was to disappear from the arena of practical party politics. Less than 23 per cent. of the electorate," concluded the Premier, "pronounced in favor of having a prohibitory law in this country. Should the party under such circumstances make that policy its own? Should the party under such circumstances introduce a prohibitory law? That is the problem now before us and I do not hesitate to say Mr. Speaker, speaking here with the authority that I hold from my position, and as I hope with the confidence of my party behind me, that the voice of the electorate which has been pronounced in favor of prohibition is not such as to warrant the Government in introducing a prohibitory measure."

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

Mr. Jas. McPhail, Queen Hill, Co. Bruce, a relayee of the McLean's of Bentinck and Mrs. McCormick, Bunesan and others, left for Minnedosa Man, recently, and the Port Elgin Times send off to him and his family. "About 75 persons met at his residence on March 8, to express their high esteem for Mr. McPhail, as well as to testify to the loss the neighborhood feels at his removal. Mr. Jas. Munro was called to the chair and after explaining the object of the meeting called on Mr. John H. McArthur to read the accompanying address while Mr. Arch Muir made the presentation of the various articles referred to in it. In this the township of Bruce loses one of its most esteemed residents. The Times joins with his other friends in wishing him restoration to good health and a prosperous life in Man."

The following is the address:—
To Mr. James McPhail:—
Dear Friend,—We, your friends and neighbors, knowing you are about to leave your old home amongst us and break those kindly bonds of friendship which have been growing stronger day by day, for the last 24 years, by removing your residence to a distant part of our Dominion, desire to express our high esteem of yourself and family. We hope that health and fortune may smile on you and that you may long live to reap many an abundant harvest. We feel keenly the loss we are about to sustain in the removal of your sterling and upright influence from our midst as you have always proved yourself to be a kind, obliging neighbor in every time of need, with kindly word and action, rejoicing with us in our successes and sympathizing with us in our sorrow.

Before parting with you we wish to show you our high esteem of you by presenting you with a fur coat to warm and protect you from the cold when 50 below zero and when the howling blizzards pass. To you Mrs. Jas. McPhail, we take pleasure in presenting this collarette and pair of gauntlets to remind you of warm friends left behind in Bruce, and Mrs. McPhail, our aged and respected friend, we present you with this collarette and Muff as a small token of our regard for you, hoping that you may all long be spared to wear and enjoy them. Our earnest and united prayer is that health and prosperity may go with you and your family to your new home, and may He who is able to care for us all be your Protector, Guide and Comforter through life.
Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors.

Almost a MIRACLE

OTTAWA, Sept. 9th, 1896. To the Phrenoline Medicine Co., Ltd. Ottawa.

GENTLEMEN.—I hardly know how best to express my appreciation of your valuable rheumatic remedy, Phrenoline. My son Gordon, who is 9 years old, has been a sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for the past two years; was so bad at times that he had to be carried about on a mattress; was attended by two city doctors apparently without the slightest benefit; spent 10 days at Caledonia Springs, came home with no marked improvement; took three bottles of a Homeopathic remedy now being extensively advertised, which did not relieve him in the least. I was beginning to give up all hope of his recovery, when by chance I mentioned the case to a friend who strongly advised me to give Phrenoline a trial.

I did so, with the result that when my boy had taken only half a bottle he was able to get on his bicycle and ride like any other boy around the block.

I certainly feel that I cannot say too much in praise of your medicine, and shall do all I can to make known its value to others. Yours very sincerely, (Signed) REUBEN CLARK.
