SIMPLE DEVICES FOR COOLING MILK.

Not long ago I saw an ingenious way for keeping milk cool over night on the farm, writes Geo. E. Newell. The dairyman had a large tub of running spring water standing in the short lane that connected the highway and barnyard It was placed there for the purpose of watering milch stock while being driven to and from the pasture. A fence separated the lane from the dwelling house yard and drive way, where stood the milk wagon.

On a tall post in line with the fence my Yankee friend had swung an oldfashioned well sweep, heavier perhaps a step less than four miles there and than the ordinary sweep, and at its about six and a half miles back." tapering end dangled a cross-bar and a pair of iron hooks.
