FIRE PROTECTION !-Southampton has a hand engine for fighting the flery element. But the village squirt gun and the fire appliances are not kept in good order, for at the first meeting this year of Southampton council the reeve reported that the trough used for conveying the water from the pumps to the tanks was lying in his yard under six feet of snow and ice, and would take about three hours to chop it out; the hose had been left on the reel since the Shular fire and would likely be frozen solid; the patent extinguisher had burst from water being left in it and allowed to freeze; and it was also learned that the tanks were of no service, being on wheels and frozen in the snow and ice -Bruce Herald.
