THE DISPOSITION OF THE SAVIOR

It Was One of Gentleness, Prayer and Self-Sacrifice. Talmage Lucidly Defines

Washington, Dec. 31. In this sermon, which Dr. Talmage sends from Paris, he analyzes the character of the Savior and urges all Christians to exercise the qualities which were conspicuous in Christ's earthly life. The text is Romans vii, 9: "Now, if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his. There is nothing more desirable than a pleasant disposition. Without it we cannot be happy ourselves or make others happy. When we have that our temper or become impatient under some slight cross, we suddenly weaken to new appreciation of proper equanimity of nature. We wish we had been born with self-balance. We envy those people who bear themselves through life without any perturbation, and we flatter ourselves that however little self-control we may now have, some time will come, under the process of years, when we will be mellowed and softened and the wrong things which are in us now will then be all right, forgetful of the fact that an evil habit in our nature will grow into larger and more pernicious iniquity not corrected will become the grandfather of a whole generation of iniquities. So that people without the grace of God in the struggle and amid the annoyances and exasperations of life are apt to become worse instead of better. Now, the trouble is that we have a theory abroad in the world that a man's disposition cannot be changed. A man says, "I am irascible in temper, and I can't help it." Another man says, "I am revengeful naturally, and I can't help it." But the Bible says, "I will help him." And he tells the truth. No man can correct his disposition. I never knew a man by force of resolution to change his temperament, but by his grace God can take away that which is wrong and put in that which is right, and you know perfectly since their conversion are just the opposite to what they used to be. In other words, we may by the spirit of God have the disposition of Jesus Christ imprinted in our disposition, and we will never see heaven. "If any man has not the disposition of Jesus Christ, he is none of his." In the first place the spirit of Christ was a spirit of gentleness. Some times He made wonderful allowance against Pharisees and Sadducees, but most of His words were kind and kind and loving and inoffensive and attractive. When we consider the fact that He was omnipotent and could have torn to pieces His assistants, the scribes and Pharisees, and ten of the persecution and abuse of Christ endured it when He could have helped it. Little children who all ways shy off at a rough man, rushed into His presence and clambered about His feet, and He saw that His mother and His disciples were sore with wounds that they could not bear to have any one come near them, He would put His hand upon the wound and soothe it. The mother with the sickest child in His arms, He would take the child to His arms, and He would do it with a woman of debased character and said, "Now, amphetamine her, blast her, kill her." Jesus looked at her and saw she was sorry and repentant, and He looked at her and she saw that He was proud and arrogant and malignant, and He said, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone at her." A blind man sat by the wayside making a great ado about his lack of vision. They told him, "Hush up and not bother the Master." Christ adopted him and said, "What wilt thou that I do unto thee?" "Gentleness of voice, gentleness of manner, gentleness of spirit." We all admire it, whether we have any of it or not. Just as the rough mountain bluff and the stern glacier, while down into the calm lake at their feet and as the storm-torn winter waves to merge into the sunny spring, so the most precipitate and impulsive and irascible nature loves to think of the gentleness of Christ. How important is this to us? Gentleness in dealing with others. We have to live with the gentleness of Christ, we are not to be Christian without him. We do not know how to correct the ill-will or to encourage the disaffected, or to take care of a disgruntled man. We are to be gentle and patient. My sister had put her arm out of joint and we were in the country and the neighbors came in, and they were all sympathetic and they laid hold of the arm and pulled and pulled mightily until the anguish was intolerable; but the arm did not go into its place. Then the old country doctor was sent for, and he came in and with one touch it was all right. He knew just where to touch the bone. We go out to our Christian work with too rough a hand and too unsympathetic a manner, and we fail in our work, while some Christian in the gentleness of Christ, in the softness of his hand, and the gentleness of his voice, and the gentleness of his touch, retort for retort, and we are like the man who was carrying a thorn in his shoe. After awhile you look into the face of Christ and you see his gentleness, and you say, "Well, now, I must do differently." Then your proud heart says, "Now you have your enemy in a corner. You will never get him in a corner again.

the parable. "The key to the parable is easily found. The Jews were not different in matters of religion. They were made in the image and likeness of heaven, and they did not care for anything but their own glory. Men who care nothing for their glory, they will give up their privilege, they will give up their position, they will give up their wealth, they will give up their life, for a higher value upon which the words of God do not rest.
