No one can deny that Mr. Foster is a great word-monger, but his best friends will not ascribe anything more to his eloquence than a certain hard, cold brilliancy which touches nothing more than the mind. Premier time. Ross can touch the mind as well, but their is something under his clear reason and apt wording which is more than intellectual. It is something in the essence of the man-a human, personal note that gives warmth and sincerity to his utterances. As an intellectual performance. Premier Ross oratory is more than equal to Mr. Foster's; as an appeal to something deeper and more vital than reasen—the heart of the people-it leaves Mr. Foster's clever syllogisms and diamond-like sophistries far behind. Mr. Foster is an excelleet lieutenant, a brilliant special pleader, but he always failed as a captain. He cannot lead because his men wont follow; he cannot contrive because it is not in him. His talent is net for analysis and dissection. He is is made especially for the not constructive, which is a much high-

There was no change of consequence in trade at the western cattle yards to-day. Export cattle were not in such good demand. Fifty loads were the total receipts, and we had a good general clearance by noon.

For export cattle perhaps prices were not quite so steady, but we had no quotable change, and in butcher cattle and small stuff there was also no change.

Good grain-fed lambs were sold at from 41 to 41e per lb., and are wanted at this price. Barnyard stuff are quoted at 31 to 4tc, and are a slow sale at these figures. Feeders, stockers, and milch cows are also unchanged.
