The success of a widely read novel, such as "David Harum," invariably sets people talking about enormous sales, and paragraphs find their way into print recording the fact that so many thousands of copies have been sold. And we talk about it as though it were a nine days' wonder, totally unmindful of a book which has run through countless editions, and of which nearly 2,000,000 copies were ged his shoulders and frankly admitprinted in New York last year. That book is the Bible Of course everybody knows that more copies of the Bible have been printed and sold than of any other book, but few persons realize, or stop to think about it if they do, just to what extent the Bible is circulated. "What becomes of all the pins?" is a question that has never been satisfactorily solved. "What becomes of all the Bibles?" is one that is even more difficult of solution. A pin assumes infinitesimal proportions compured with a bound book, and when one considers that the increased publication of Bibles is out of all proportion to the natural increase in population, one cannot help wondering what becomes of all of them.

It stands to reason that a great many copies find their way into the hands of foreign missionary societies and are sent to the heathen of other lands. Possibly the proportion is onehalf. But even then the balance for home consumption, if so purely mercantile a phrase may be permissible, is very considerable. One New York publishing house alone, the American Bible Society, issued during the last year 1,380,892 copies, of which a abroad. Williams' Pink Pills. For some years prior to the winter of 1898 I suffered with a lame back, which frequently developed sciatica, and every movement of the body caused intense pain. In this way I passed gloomy days and restless nights, until the winter of 1898, when my trouble was aggravated by an attack of la grippe. The first and most severe symptoms of this trouble passed away, but it left me in a weak and depressed condition. I did not appear to be able to recover my strength; my appetite was very fickle; I was extremely nervous and my heart would palpitate painfully at the least exertion. I had been under a doctor's care, but did not recover my strength, and as a consequence I was much depressed in spirits. At this juncture a friend who called upon me advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to follow the advice and procured a supply. To my gratification I felt an improvement in my condition almost from the outset, and after using the pills for a little over a month I was once more enjoying the best of health, every trace of the trouble that had afflicted me having disappeared.
