NED. STEAMER.

aneiro Lost Gate

FRANCISCO.

ink Almost immediately for Life-U. S. Consul d --- What the Pilot Says Were on Board - Captain pidly. When the boat t it was filled with water e seams! I held on to the tackle, waiting for the orgo, when Pilot Jordan said, is lady." The lady started down the ladder, and just moment the ship gave an p of us and carry us unt washed us away. ne ladder fell toward us into r. and I did not see her rmaster Lindstrom, who ed into our boat, then startil out some of the water. ith the weight of six peothe boat down almost to vales. In another moment ad slid beneath the waves. Ripley's Experience.

sley, who was returning from where she had been em a surse, was on deck when struck, and was one of the o reached shore in the first ted to see the Golden Gate, this morning when I heard es going I got up and dressed t on deck. We had been anchor outside since noon, ed in toward shore in the when the log settled down ed we went to anchor just Lobos. The fog lifted again morning and the steamer up the bay. We had hardly with the stars shining bright he lights on shore showing. fog seemed to settle down han before, and then there udden sheek. It could not n more than five minutes is in the boat and the ship on one side, and went down . There were very few deck when she struck, but st have been a great many re dressing, for when the me a large number rushed tk half dressed. Down With the Ship. incisco, Feb. 22.—The Rio de was three days overdue from ong, via Honolulu, when she off the heads last night, and e fog prevailing at the time Pilot Jordan to bring her to intil he could see his way rough the gateway

Ward, who was on deck when I struck, at once gave orders rew on watch to hurry the rs to the forward deck. At time the quartermaster on mded the signal for fire drill, hin live minutes all the men their stations, While all going on Capt. Ward was the passengers and trying them from panie. He sucmly partially, as many of the propie rushed to the railings ped overboard. Some of these ked up; others were drowned. inese crew, to the number are several conflicting concerning the fate of Caprd. The steward of the Ric at he stood beside the capn the vessel went down. Two in to the last, but Frederick datically declared that Cap rd emulated Admiral Trio on tish Majisty's ship Victoria. down to his cabin, where his doom behind a locked er of lives imperilled 208: of lives lost: Whites, 39; 92; total 131; rescued 77. llowing are rescued-William London; James K. Carpen-Russell Harper, E. C. Howell, ong. G. Hentz, Capt. Hecht. teerage-Philip Nusenblatt, Third Officer Holland, Chief Herlihey, Ship Carpenter F. Freight Clerks G. J. Engle H. H. Leary, Quartermas Mathieson, Quartermaster F. om. Storekeeper E. Boggs, e Steward H. Donohue, Seaward, 29 Chinese at the mail 9 Chinese and four Japanese g's wharf.

New Pork Factory. ich, Ont., Feb. 24.-A repre ve meeting of farmers was Carlow for the purpose of ing a company to build and a pork packing factory. The adjourned to March 15th er to get fuller information ing the construction. Goderresentatives laid the claims town before the meeting as for such factory, and it is her probable that will be the tal Accident at Windsor. or, Feb. 22.-James McCormployed at Ferris' livery stanelsor, was fatally injured this on by a heavy cogwheel. fell down the elevator shaft which he was standing, and him on the top of the head. all was fractured and a deep Burned Ilis Money. Feb. 24.-A Jewish millionmed Taguiri, has committed at Leghorn. Before killing f he burned Turkish rentes to lue of two million france.

A PLOT FOR EMPIRE.

A THRILLING STORY OF CONTINENTAL CONSPIRACY AGAINST ERITAIN.

"It is the ties of kindred." he con- will remain for ever faithful to kindliness. I tell you, my friend, that heart she is aristocratic. 'The old there is a great storm gathering. It is nobility have a life in them which not for nothing that the great hosts you cannot dream of. I know, for of my country are ruled by a war lord! I have tested it. It has been weary I tell you that we are arming to the waiting, but the time is ripe! France teeth, silently, swiftly, and with a is ready for the cry of 'Vive le Roi! purposa It may seem to you a small | Vive la Monarchie!" I who tell thing, but let me tell you this—we are you these things have proved them. a jealous nation! And we have cause I have felt the pulse of my country, for jealousy! In whatever part of the and I love her too well to mistake world we put down our foot, it is trod- the symptom- !" den on by our ubiquitous cousins! The Ambassador was listening with Wherever we turn to colonize, we are greedy ears-he was breathing hard too late; England has already secured through his teeth. It was easy to the finest territory, the most fruitful see that the glamor of the thing of the land. We must either take her had laid hold of him. He foresaw for leavings or go a-begging! Wherever himself an immortal name, for his we would develop, we are held back by country a greatness beyond the the commercial and colonizing genius | wildest dreams of her most sanguine -it amounts to that-of this wonder- ministers. Bismarck himself had ful nation. The world of to-day is planned nothing like this! Yet he did getting cramped. There is no room for not altogether lose his common sense a growing England and a growing "But Russia," he objected, "she Germany! So! one must give way, would never sanction a German invaand Germany is beginning to mutter | sion of France." that it shall not always be her sons who go to the wall. You say that France is our natural enemy. I deny dear Baron, and you say a thing like it! France is our historical enemy- that! You amaze me! But of course nothing else! In military circles to- the whole affair is new to you; day a war with England would be have not thought it out as I have wildly, hysterically popular; and done. Whatever happens in Eu-

It is to come. So." "Not in Europe!" Mr. Sabin said. "Not in Europe or in Asia! The war torch will be kindled in Africa!"

"The Transvaal!" Mr. Sabin's visitor smiled. fish monopoly has been most galling the land or exact a mighty tribute. did he sit down. He stood with his to my nation. We, too, feel the burden Granted that sent ments of friendship hands behind him, looking steadily of over-population; we, too, have our exist between Russia and France, do into the fire. His cheeks were alyoung blood making itself felt you not think that Russia would not most livid, save for a single spot throughout the land, eager, impetu- sooner see France a monarchy? Do of burning color high up on his ous, thirsting for adventure and free- you think that she would stretch | cheek bone. His fingers twitched dom. We need new countries where out her little finger to aid a totter. hervously, his eyes were dry and these may develop and at once ease ing republic and keep back a king restlessly bright. He was evidently and strengthen our Fatherland. I from the throne of France? Mon in a state of great excitement. In have seen it written in one of the Dieu! Never." great English reviews that my coun- Mr. Sabin's face was suddenly il- ed, and a tall, distinguished looking try has not the instinct for coloniza- luminated. A fire flashed in his dark | man, grey-headed, but with a moustion. It is false! We have the instinct; eyes, and a note of fervent passion | tache still almost black, came softand the desire, but not the opportun- quivered lifelike in his vibrating voice. | ly into the room. His breast glitity. England is like a great octopus. His manner had all the abandon of | tered with orders, and he was in She is ever on the alert, thrusting out one pleading a great cause, nursed full Court dress. He nodded kindly her suckers, and drawing in for herself by a great heart. He was a patriot to the young man, who greeted him every new land where riches lie. No or a poet, surely, not only a politi- with respect. country has ever been so suitable for cian or a mere intriguing adventurus as Africa, and behold-it is as I have said. Already England has grab- his enthusiasm to escape him. Then bed the finest and most to be desired of the land-she has it now in her mind to take one step further and acquire the whole. But my country has no mind to suffer it! We have played second fiddle to a weaker l'ower long enough. We want Africa, my friend, and to my mind and the mind of my master. Africa is worth having at all costs-listen-even at the cost of war!" Mr. Sablu was silent for a moment, There was a faint smile upon his lips. It was a situation such as he loved. He began to feel indeed that he was making history.

"You have convinced me," he said at last "You have taught me how to look upon European politics with new ever. But there remains one important question. Supposing I break off my negotiations in other quarters, are you willing to pay my

The Ambassador waved his hand! It was a trifle! "If what you give fulfily your own statement;" he said, "you cannot ask a price which my master would Mr. Sabin moved a little in his chair. Hi: eyes were bright. A faint tinge of color was in his olive cheeks. "Four years of my life," he said, "have been given to the perfecting if I were to call you-of one branch only of my design; the other, which is barely completed, is The combine I result will be infallible. the future of this country is absolutely and entirely at your mercy. That is beyond question or doubt. To whom seever I give my secret, I the price is a mighty one!" "Name it." the Ambassador said, quietly. "A million, two millions? Rank? What is It?' "For myself," Mr. Sabin said, "noth-

The other man started. "Nothing!" "Absolutely nothing ! The Ambassador raised his hand to his forehead. "You confuse me," he said.

"Ach !" The little interjection shot from the | ance which you attribute to it. Ambassador's lips with sharp, staccato emphasis. Then there was sileace-a brief, dramatic silence. The in mind, if my scheme should after all two men ant motionless, the eyes of be ineffective, if it should fail in the each fastened upon the other. The Ambassador was breathing quickly, I claim for it, what can you lose? The and his eyes sparkled with excited payment is conditional upon its sucment Mr. Sabin was pale and calm, yet there were traces of nervous exhilaration in his quiverling lips and

"Yes, you were right; you were right, indee i," the Ambassador said slawly. "It is a great price that you

Mr. Fabin laughed very softly. "Think," he said. "Weigh the matter well! Mark first this fact. what I give you has not the power I claim for it, our contract is at an end. I ask for nothing! I accept nothing. Therefore, you may assume that before you pay my price your own triumph is assured. Think! Reflect carefully! What will you owe one of Verdi's operas, commenced to to me? The humiliation of England, carefully select a bagful of golf the acquisition of her colonies, the ciubs from a little pile which stood destruction of her commerce, and in one corner of the room. Already such a war indemnity as only richest power on earth could There things you gain. Then you are of an expert, swinging each one the one supreme Power in Europe. | gently, and hesitating for some France is at your mercy! I will time between a wooden or a metal tell you why. The Royalist party putter, and longer still between the makes no mistakes, and he saw him have been gaining strength year by rival claims of a bulgar and a flat- come out of his house, take his ticket year, month by month, minute by headed brassey. At last the bag at King's Cross, and actually leave the day's journey?" asked the Sunday the symptom which, as a rule, first m nute! Proclaim your intentions was full; he resumed his seat and station." boldy. The country will crumble up counted them out carefully. before you! It would be but a halfheartel resistance. Frame has not "Too many; it looks amateurish." Felix shook his head.

Mr. Sabin smiled scornfully. "You are a great politician, sooner or later a war with England rope, Russia will maintain the Isois as certain to come as the rising of lation which geography and temperathe sun and the waning of the moon! | ment have marked out. She would not can tell you even now where the stir one finger to help France. Why ing-room." first blow will be struck! It is fixed! should she? What would she gain by plunging into an exhausting war? To the core of his heart and the tips of his finger-nails the Muscovite is selfish! Then again, consider this. chairs and divans; there were You are not going to ruin France as | cigars and cigarettes, and decanyou did before; you are going to es- i "It is in Africa," he said, "that Eng- tablish a new dynasty, and not waste note of none of these things. nor

er. For a moment he suffered he asked; "you are looking tired."

was himself again, calm, convincing, impenetrable. As the echoes of his last interjection died away there was a silence between the two men. It was the Ambassador curiously at his companion. "I must confess," he said, slowly, "that you have fascinated me! You have done more, you have made me see dreams and possibilities which, set down upon paper, I should have mocked at. Mr. Sabin, I can no longer think of you as a person-you are a personage! We are here alone, and I am as secret as the grave; be so kind as to lift the veil of your incognito. I can no longer think of you as Mr. Sabin. Who are you?"

Mr. Sabin smiled a curious smile, and lit a cigarette from the open box before him.

"That," he said, pushing the box across the tuble, "you may know in good time !/. in commercial parlance, we deal Until that point is decided, I am Mr. Sabin. I do not even admit that it is an incognito."

"And yet," the Ambassador said, with a curious lightening of his face, as though recollection had suddenly been vouchsafed to him, "I fancy that stretched across the table. the work of the only man in England | "Excuse me," he interrupted, "let it | The Prince smiled. competent to handle such a task. remain between us as it is now. My

can be said between us. What is your | to-day?" The Ambassador rose from his seat | said, "from watching his house." and stood upon the hearthrug with give over the destinies of England. But his back to the fire. There was a streak of color upon his sallow cheeks, and his eyes shone brightly unde-neath his heavy brows. He had removed his spectacles, and was swinging them lightly between his thumb and fore-

"I will be frank with you," he said. "My opinion is a favorable one. I shall In a week all that you have said shall be laid before my master. Such as my "My conditions," Mr. Sabin said, personal influence is, it will be ex-"are these. The conquest of France | erted on behalf of the acceptance of and the re-toration of the monarchy, your scheme The greatest difficulty in the persons of Prince Henri and | will be, of course, in persuading the his cousin, Princess Helene of Bour- Emperor of its practicability - in plain words, that what you say you have to offer will have the import-

"If you fail in that," Mr. Sabin said, also rising, send for me. But bear this I should not offer such terms unless I are difficulties send for me!"

"I will do so," the Ambassador said, as he buttoned his overcoat. "Now give me a limit of time for our decision." "Fourteen days." Mr. Sabin said. 'How I shall temporise with Lobenski so long I cannot tell. But I to-day. It is ample! The two men exchanged farewells and parted. Mr. Sabin. with a cigarette between his teeth. and humming now and then a few bars from the they bore signs of considerable use. and he handled them with the care softly to himself. This time the tune seemed to have escaped him; he was whistling the "Mar-

CHAPTER XVIII.

'He Has Gone to the Emperor!" The Ambassador, when he left Mr. Sabin's house, stepped into a hired hansom and drove off towards Arlington street. A young man who had watched him come out. from the other side of the way. walked swiftly to the corner of the street and stepped into a private brougham which was waiting there. "To the Embassy," he said. "Drive

The carriage set him down in a few minutes at the house to which Densham and Harcutt had followed Mr. Sabin on the night of their first meeting with him. He walked swiftly into the hall.

"Is His Excellency within?" he asked a tall servant in plain dress who came forward to meet him. "Yes." Monsieur Felix," the man answered; "he is dining very late to-night-in fact, he has not risen from the table."

"Who is with him?" Felix asked. "It is a very small party, Madame la Princesse has just arrived from Paris, and His Excellency has been waiting for her."

He mentioned a few more names; there was no one of importance. Felix walked into the hall-porter's office and scribbled a few words on half a sheet of paper, which he placed in an envelope and carefully

"Let His Excellency have this privately and at once," he said to the man; "I will go into the wait-and Felix crossed the hall and entered a small room nearly opposite. It was luxuriously furnished with easy ters upon a round table. Felix took less than two minutes the door open-

"Is it anything important, Felix?" "Yes, your Excellency, It is imthe mask was as suddenly dropped. He | portant," Felix answered; "it concerns the man Sabin.

The Ambassador nodded. "Well," he said, "what of him?" You have not been seeking to settle accounts with him. I trust, afat last who broke it. He was looking | ter our conversation, and your pro- | felt perhaps that there was some Felix shook his head.

"No," he said. "I gave my word, and I shall keep it! Perhaps you may, some day, regret that you in. first words were not altogether terfered between us." "I think not," the Prince replied. Your services are valuable to me. my dear Felix; and in this country, wistfulness about her soft, dark more than any other, deeds of violence are treated with scant cere- of her manner, so un-English and so yourself for myself. It was an excellent thing for both of us." "I trust," Felix repeated, "that slim figure outlined so clearly your Excellency may always think against the abrupt sky line, they so. But to be brief. The report were at all events scarcely pleasant from Cartienne is at hand." The Ambassador nodded and list-understood. No. I saved you from ened expectantly. "He confirms fully," Felix continued. "the value of the documents which are in question. How he obtained access to them he does not say, but his report is absolute. He Mr. Sabin's protesting hand was considers that they justify fully the man Sabin's version of them."

"My own judgment is verified." he incognito is a necessity for the pres- said. "I believed in the man from When I place in your hands a simple | ent. Let it continue to be-Mr. Sabin! | the first. It is good. By the bye. roll of papers and a small parcel. Now answer me. All has been said that have you seen anything of Mr. Sabin "I have come straight," Felix

> " Yes ?" "The Baron von Knigenstein has been there alone, incognito, for more than an hour. I watched him go in--and watched him out."

The Prince's genial smile vanished. His face grew suddenly dark as thunder. The Muscovite crept out unawares. There was a fierce light in his eyes, and his face was like the face of apply for leave of absence to-morrow. | a wolf : yet his voice when he spoke |

is doing a little flirting, is he? Ah!" "I believe," the young man answered slowly, "that he has advanced still further than that. The Baron was | him. She was softer and more wothere for an hour. He came out walk- manly. Even her voice, in its new ing like a young man. He was in a and more delicate notes, betrayed ered by Addison-or, rather, stumbled state of great excitement." The Prince sat down and stroked the side of his face thoughtfully. "The great elephant!" he muttered. "Fancy such a creature calling himself a diplomatist! It is well, Felix," slightest detail to accomplish all that he added, "that I had finished my dincess; the bargain is all in your favor, this, there is no end to the possibilities and he will not mind leaving off." o; it. I must see Sabin immediately. held certain cards. Remember, if there It ought to be easy to make him un- bled a few lines on the back of a derstand that I am not to be trifled | card. with. Find out where he is to-night, Felix; I must follow him."

> Felix took up his hat. "I will be back," he said, "in half

The Prince returned to his guests, and Felix drove off. When he returned will give you fourteen days from his chief was waiting for him alone. "Mr. Sabin," Felix announced, "left town half an hour ago." "For abroad!" the I'rince exclaimed, with flashing eyes. "He has gone to Felix shook his head. "On the contrary," he said, "he has gone down into Norfolk to play golf." "Into Norfolk to play golf!" the Prince repeated, in a tone of scornful wonder. "Did you believe a story like that, Felix? Rubbish!"

Felix smiled slightly. "It is quite true," he said, "Labanoff

"Are you sure that it is not a blind?"

he said. "If you knew the man as well chamois leather from the pocket of as I do, you would not be surprised. As they grew brighter he whistled person—he does these sort of things. Besides, he wants to keep out of the

> The Prince's face darkened. "He will find my way a little hard to get out of," he said, fiercely. "Go and get some dinner, Felix, and then try and find out whether Knigenstein has any notion of leaving England. He will not trust a matter like this to correspondence. Stay-I know how to manage it. I will write and ask him to dine here next week. You shall take the invitation."

"He will be at Arlington street," Felix remarked. "Well, you can take it on to him there," the Prince directed. "Go first to his house and ask for his whereabouts. They will tell you Arlington street. You will not know, of course, the contents of the letter you carry your instructions were simply to deliver it and get an answer. Good! you will do that."

The Prince, while he talked, was writing the note. Felix thrust it into his pocket and went out. In less than half an hour he was back. The Baron had returned to the German Embassy unexpectedly before going to Arlington street, and Felix had caught him there. The Prince tore open the answer, and read it hastly through. "The German Embassy, "Wednesday evening. "Alas! my dear Prince, had I been able, nothing could have given me so much pleasure as to have joined your little party; but, unfortunately, this wretched climate, which we both so justly loathe, has upset my throat again, and I have too much regard for my life to hand myself over to the English doctors. Accordingly, all being well. I go to Berlin to-morrow night to consult our own justly-famed Dr. Steinlaus.

"Accept, my dear Prince, this expression of my most sincere regret, and believe me, yours most sincerely, "Karl von Knigenstein." "The doctor whom he has gone to consult is no man of medicine," the Prince said, thoughtfully, "He has gone to the Emperor."

CHAPTER XIX.

Wolfenden's Love-Making.

"Lord Wolfenden!" He laughed at her surprise, and took off his cap. He was breathless, for he had been scrambling up the steep side of the hill on which she was standing, looking steadfastly out to sea. Down in the valley from which he had come a small boy with a bag of golf clubs on his back was standing, making imaginary swings at the ball which lay before him. "I saw you from below," he explained. "I couldn't help coming up. "You don't mind?" "No; I am glad to see you," she said, simply. "You startled me, that is all. I did not hear you coming, and I had forgotten alreast where I was.

I was thinking." He stood by her side, his cap still in his hand, facing the strong sea wind. Again he was conscious of that sense of extreme pleasure which had always marked his chance meetings with her. This time he definite reason for it. There was something in her expression, when she had turned so swiftly round, which seemed to tell him that her meaningless. She was looking a little pale, and he fancied also a little sad. There was an inexpressible eyes; the light and charming gaiety mony, and affairs of honor are not attractive to him, had given place to quite another mood. Whatever her thoughts might have been when he had first seen her there, her tall, ones. He felt that his sudden appearance had not been unwelcome to her, and he was unreasonably pleased. "You are still all alone," he remarked. "Has Mr. Sabin not arrived?"

She shook her head. "I am all alone, and I am fearfully and miserably dull. This place does not attract me at all; not at this time of the year. I have not heard from my uncle. He may be here at any moment." There was no time like the pre sent. He was suddenly bold. It was an opportunity which might never be vouchsafed to him again. "May I come with you-a little way along the cliffs?" he asked. She looked at him and hesitated. More than ever he was aware of some subtle change in her. It was as though her mental attitude towards him had adapted itself some way to this new seriousness of demeanor. It was written in her features-his eyes read it eagerly. A certain aloofness, almost hauteur, about the lines of her mouth creep-"So ho!" he said, softly. "Mr. Sabin ing out even in her most careless tones, and plainly manifest in the carriage of her head, was absent. She seemed immeasurably nearer to

"What about your golf?" she said. motioning down into the valley where his antagonist was waiting. ing in New England in 1842. Dr. "Oh, I can easily arrange that," ner, otherwise you would certainly he declared cheerfully. "Fortunatehave spoilt it. If they have met like | ly I was playing the professional, He waved to his caddle, and scrib-

the change. Perhaps it was only a

(To be Continued.)

following questions:

ARE YOU GOING WEST? If so, send a letter or postal card to the undersigned, answering the

Where are you going? When are you going? Where do you start from? How many are in your party? Will you take your Special low rate settlers' tickets on sale during March and April to points in Manitoba, British Columbia, Oregon, California and all West- a blow upon the back and spine, has ern States. Full particulars from B. in many cases preceded the attack. H. Bennett, General Agent, Chicago | The disease is especially rare in & Northwestern Railway, 2 King America. Some of the oldest physistreet east, Toronto, Ont.

His Usual Trip. "What is meant by a Sabbath-School teacher.

GREEN OR BLACK,

SPURETEA "Pure tea calms, restores and cheers those in distress."

DRINK IT.

A free sample of delicious SALADA Tea sent on receipt of postal mentioning which you drink-Black, Mixed or Green Tea. Address "SALADA," Toronto or Montreal.

WOMAN VICTIM OF ADDISON'S DISEASE.

Her Skin Gradually Turning Bronze Colored.

vue Hospital. Mrs. Rose Lowe is the time, a few months ago, when she grade. was attacked by this strange disundoubtedly one that, notwithstanding its rare occurrence, has come to be well known as Addison's. All the descriptions of it in the medical books are in professional language and hard to be understood by laymen, but herein an attempt is made to translate technical terms into terms that will be generally comprehended. Addison's disease is a disease of the suprarenal capsules, which in the medical books are classified among the ductless glands. They are otherwise known as the adrenal bodies, and again as the atrahiliary capsules from the dark-brown hue occasionally observed in their medullary portion after death.

Nothing is definitely known as to the functions exercised by these bodles. They are commonly believed to form part of the lymph system of the body. Neither, it is asserted, from physiological experimentation nor from pathological investigation has much light as yet been shed upon the subject.

Disease Lately Became Known. There was practically no knowledge of any value respecting the to six or ten years. In rare indisease of the adrenal bodies till stances recovery has taken place 1855, when Dr. Thomas Addison, of and periods of improvement lasting Guy's Hospital, London, first published his observations on the malady now known by his name. From that time careful study has been made of the organs, and their diseases are now well recognized. And yet it is affirmed that, despite all this knowledge, ignorance remains of the exact functions of these organs Painless Corn and Wart Extractor. in health. It is only surmised that they act most probably as do other ductless glands in the body, and are more particularly a part of the lympathic system. They bear a remarkable relation to the great abdominal nervous centres, and have in their intimate textures a larger portion of nervous tissues than is to be found in glands of any kind within the organism. It is noted, further, that no morable of affording any detectable phythese cells, and are almost constant | 5.30 o'clock the following after

Disease Discoverd by Chance. adrenal bodies is Addison's disease or of the possibilities of modern railbronze-skin disease. It was discov- roading. upon by him-while he was endeavormood, yet he would take advantage ing to detect the cause of certain fatal cases of anaemia which he en- A NEW WHOLESALE TEA HOUSE countered from time to time. Such cases were taken note of by Dr. Chan-

Addison says: "The lading and characteristic features of the morbid state to which I would direct attention are anaemia, in connection with the Ross Tea Co., general languor and deb'lity, remarkable feebleness of the heart's action, irritability of the stomach and a peculiar change in the color of the Toronto, with the latest and most skin, occurring in connection with a diseased condition of the suprarenal capsules." The adrenals were overlooked in early autopsies, and were not regarded with any special interest till Addison's researches led to a more careful scrutiny of these organs. Males are more frequently attacked | the lot of the new company. than females by the disease. In 183 cases recorded in England 119 were males and 64 females. A majority of the cases occur between the twentith and fortieth years. Injury, such as cians in Chicago say they have never Symptoms of the Disease. The pigmentation, or coloration, is attracts attention. The grades of "From our house to grandpa's and coloration range from a light yellow Philippines by way of Alaska, Siberia back," replied Freddie Fosdick, who to a deep brown, or even black. It and Japan. knew where his family took dinner is always deeper on exposed parts.

It is reported from New York that face and hands. Occasionally it is a case of Addison's disease is in Belle- absent. Patches of atrophy of pigment may occur. The coloration is found on the mucous membranes of victim. She is but 28 years of age the mouth and of other parts. The and had been in health up to the anaemia is usually of a moderate

Other symptoms are gastric disturbances. The pulse is rapid and ease. Though in the hospital, she is the heart's action is feeble. The treated as a private patient by Dr. patient complains of lack of energy. Townsend that he may make a close both mental and bodily. Headache is stuly of the case. There would appear a frequent symptom, with gildiness to be little nope of curing the wo- and noises in the ears. With the adman, but it is thought her life may vance of the disease the prostration be prolonged a month or two. Ac- becomes more marked, the patient cording to the latest account the skin | remains in bed, the voice gets weak, of the patient is of the color of the intelligence dulled and death bronze, which marks the malady as finally occurs either by snycope or gradual aesthenia. Occasionally there are convulsions. With the progress of the disease the patient becomes greatly changed in appearance, assuming the color of a mulatto. The color, however, varies in degree and in depth of hue on various parts of the body, being usually more pronounced on the face, neck and back of the hands. tint is never quite uniform all over the boly, even in an extreme case of "bronzing." Points of pressure and those exposed to friction become the seats of greatest attraction in this respect. The friction of a collar or braces, constriction of garters, irritation of blisters or of skin eruptions, all lead to greater intensity of coloration in the points affected. The patches of varying depth shade off gradually and have no abrupt margins. The disease is usually fatal. Tae cases in which the bronzing is slight or does not occur run a more rapid course. There are cases which prove fatal in a few weeks. In a few cases the disease is much prolonged, even

Corn Sowing. Is a process excited by vanity, backed up by good, tight boots-you may lack time vanity, but you have the good tight boots-you may wear any size boots you please up to three sizes too small, if you use Putnam's Druggists sell it.

Rapid Railway Travel. Representatives of the Grand Trunk Rai.way Company had in their charge the other day two children, who probably made the quekest trip ever recorded between Truro, N S and Council Bluffs, La., covering the 2,033 miles on exactly sixty-ix hours and thirteen minutes. The little tots were alone, and made the trip to join their bid condition of the adrenals is cap parents, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. J. 8 mpson, in the city on the banks of the sical signs during life. With respect M.s.ouri River. They left Truro at to the functions of these bodies, Dr. | 3.45 o'clock in the afternoon on the Auld, of Glasgow, found that many Maritime express, arriving at the red corpuscles make their way into Bonaventure station, Montreal, at ly there. He believes that certain noon. While here they were enof these corpuscles are selected and tertained by representatives of attracted by chemistactic action the company, and at 10.30 within the cells. They there assume o'clock in the evening they boarded a greenish brown color and begin to the "Fast Flyer," arriving in Dearbreak up into larger and smaller | born station, Chicago, at 8,43 o'c ock particles. Pigmenting particles are the following evening. They continued present. Dr. Auld therefore believes | their journey the same evening, leavthat one, at least, of the functions | ing for Council Bluffs at 10.30 o'clock of the adrenals is to destroy a cer- and reached their detination at 8.45 tain class of effete red corpuscles of o'clock the next afternoon. Their journey was uneventful, but they He regards the suprarenal bodies as seemed to enjoy every minute of the in part excretory glands and the time they were on the trains, as the symptoms of Addison's disease as men in charge, as well as the passendue to interference with these func- | gers, showed them every attention. tions, leading to the circulation of The total time occupied from Truro decomposing products and inducing to Council Bluffs was seventy-two a tendency to pigmentary deposi- hours, from which, of course, the stop: at Montreal and Chicago are to be deducted, as well as the differences of an hour in eastern and con-The most important disease of the tral time. The foregoing shows one

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria

Mr. R. D. Ross, who has been for so many years prominently associated with the tea trade of Canada, originally with the "Salada" Tea Co., and latterly as manager of the "Monsoon" Tea Co., is launching out for himself importers and packers of Ross' highgrade teas. They have equipped a plant at 11 and 13 Front street east. up-to-date machinery for packing tea in lead packets, and with a capacity. for a large output. Mr. Ross enjoys the reputation of being one of the best judges of Ceylon teas in Canada, and, as he proposes to live up to, not on, this reputation,

a goodly measure of success should be

Gutta Percha Too Costly. Gutta percha has become so scarce and its price, consequentrly, so high, that its use in construction of longdistance submarine cables has beoome too costly. Gutta percha costs over $2 a pound, while rubber can be had at $1.30. For long stretches of 2,000 miles or more, gutta perchahowever, is requisite as insulating material, while for shorter stretches india rubber suffices. Hence it is now proposed as the more economical plan to lay the proposed cable line to the the temperament of a people who Some of the steel heads were a "It is quite true, Your Excellency," every Sunday.