The correspondent hopes the blockhouses, especially the stone ones, will not be destrroyed, as they are quite a feature of the landscape, like the great towers of Scotland and Martello towers on the scuth coast of England, and are historical monuments worth preserving.

London, June 11.-Colonial Secretary Chamberlain spoke this evening at the Corona Club, which is a gathering of eminent representatives of the British colonies. He said that through the peace settlement the British had obtained all they had hoped for and their hands in the future would not be fettered. The Government, he added, had been generous to its late opponents in regard to everything concerning personal and private matters, but had given up nothing in substance. It had done nothing to prejudice the ultimate solution of the South African question, to which it looked as its justification for the war. Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said: "I am sure / we are delighted by the way these terms are accepted by our late opponents. If those feelings prevail we are at the opening of an era of prosperity such as that country has never known."
