The funeral was conducted undertaker McMillan, Dromore, The remains being encased in a beautiful draped black lace and gold mounted casket. The interment was made at Amos church cemetery, the service at the house and graye being that of the English church, of which the deceased was a life long and devoted member. She had been long afflicted with a lingering dis ease which she bore with christian pa tience and fortitude. She expressed her willingness to depart and having a perfect confidence in a beautiful future life. To the sorrowing friends and to her daughter here who has so nobly fulfilled her part in taking care of and providing for her afflicted mother, we extend our warmest sympathy.
