London despatch: Again we find ourselves on the eve of the Corenation, and full of hope that this sime all may go off with eclat and joy. If only the weather be kind, a well coffed head. so far it does not look too hopeful, and experts are shaking their heads eminously and saying little about it; it does not do to prophesy till you are sure-especially concerning the English climate, which does generally what was least expected of itthis year at any rate. The season has been an abnormally prolonged affair, which should be good for trade. Town itself is somewhat deserted, 'tis true, but the countryside houses and river residences and clubs have been gaily and busily entertaining Colonial and other visitors. None of the society folk have gone far off as yet, preferring to keep within hail of the Corenation. I was at a charming garden reception a day or two ago in acountry house, where the house party included Several Canadians, miss Baxter, Mrs. Bowlby, Miss Florence Hanson (Montreal), Mr. Applebe Adams, and others. The Lord and Lady Stratheona did their best to make people happy at their big garden party at Knebworth, the house one always assodates with "Owen M redith" and his graceful verses. The weather was good, on the whole, though the wind blew high and made many people prefer the house with all its interesting treasures and curios to the grounds, where the band of the Gunners and the bagpipes discoursed sweet music at intervals. By the way, many Canadians may like to possess the new biography of Lord Strathcona by Beckler Wilson, which gives a short, concise and not too highly colored story of his life, his useful iffe, for he has done much for other people in his day, and will probably not be less helpful in future to the empire in general and Canada in particular. He has certainly earned our thanks for having been instrumental in binding Canada more closely to the Motherland, and England will not quickly forget the good and brave services done for her by Strathcona's Horse!
