

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

An Ottawa Man's Wonderfully Narrow Escape.

He was in Convulsions and the Doctors Fought His Life for Three Days and Three Nights, but he Recovered.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 22.—(Special.)—At 309 (Dumont) street, this city, there resides a man who has been nearer the hour and article of death than anyone who has been privileged to live to tell the story.

He is Mr. Geo. H. Kent, a printer in the employ of the Bank Note Co., of Wellington street.

Some seven or eight years ago Mr. Kent was seized with Bright's Disease which gradually grew worse till he had to quit work and was confined to his bed where he remained for some months.

Physicians were in constant attendance upon him, but instead of improving he gradually grew worse and worse.

At last he got so low that his body became terribly bloated and his skin like tanned leather. He had convulsions, which increased in frequency and the intervals between these spasms found so weak that he was barely conscious.

One night a particularly bad spell the physicians told his wife that he could not live till morning.

A messenger was despatched for a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which were immediately brought to the dying man.

Mr. Kent did not die. On the contrary in about two months he was at work again in his shop and had not since been off work for a single day.

Mr. and Mrs. Kent are naturally very grateful, and as a mark of their gratitude have called a sweet little girl born to them some years after Mr. Kent's remarkable recovery by the name of "Edna Doyle" Kent.

Mr. Kent has made a sworn statement reciting the details of his case and his cure.

VOWS MADE AT THE ALTAR

Strange Obligations Men and Women Have Made at Marriage.

Realists insist that love is but a species of lunacy and if one takes note of the foolish vows some people make upon the eve of their entry into the marital state he is half convinced that the judgment is a correct one. As one instance may be mentioned, the vow registered by a Prussian bridegroom to the effect that if his bride perished within the first five years after their union he would destroy his own life. This terrible oath was faithfully observed, for the unfortunate lady happening to succumb after the birth of her second child the husband blew out his brains directly the sad news reached his ear.

Less tragic was the vow made by a young Polish gentleman residing at Warsaw, though the oath in question was certainly touched with much folly. He swore that on each anniversary of the wedding day he would drink himself into a state of complete intoxication, and it may be added that he kept his word to the letter. Unfortunately, however, he did not observe the dispensation named for the anniversary alone, and in consequence his dissolute habits he wife chided and obtained a separation.

A middle-aged resident of Minneapolis made an exceedingly benevolent vow on the eve of his marriage to a charming San Francisco girl. He declared that as each anniversary of the wedding day came round he would distribute a thousand dollars to the deserving poor of the city. This resolve was rigidly adhered to and the poverty-stricken denizens of the place benefited accordingly.

A young Kentucky girl of amazing beauty who had been forced into marriage with an aged speculator whom she heartily disliked, vowed that after marriage she would never look upon her face in a mirror, feeling that it was her facial charms which had brought about the loathsome union. For six years she faithfully observed the vow until the death of her husband canceled the extraordinary oath.

Supposed to Have Point.

Some men's idea of progress is to etch and watch others go backward.

It requires a lot of nerve to tell someone the things they ought to know.

After striving for the almighty dollar many a man strives to get rid of it.

Remember that a man may be a dwarf and still be every inch a gentleman.

A man has to make a name for himself. All a woman has to do is get married.

It is better to have a light purse than a heavy heart, but more comfortable to have neither.

When a fellow is about to propose and the girl is nervous, it is generally because she is afraid some one will interrupt them before he gets it out.

GLINTS OF HUMOR AT BRIDAL ALTAR

Everybody knows how unresisting most bridegrooms are, how they are generally content to do as they are bidden in a dazed kind of way. Such a bridegroom took an inconspicuous part in a recent marriage ceremony. Someone or something, he did not quite know which, had led him to the altar and now he turned, and something else was steering his course down the aisle. His ears buzzed, and there was a mist before his eyes. Something clung to his arm which he tried to shake off. When he reached the vestry he discovered that it was wife. Then he found his voice. "Oh, it's you, Mary," he exclaimed. "George!" cried she, reproachfully. "Well," he added, "to tell the truth, I had no idea what it was."

Some, however, are not so nervous, but go through the necessary ceremonies in a matter of fact way. An elderly bachelor who at last contemplated entering the married state set out one evening accompanied by a friend to see the minister. The reverend gentleman had recently been ordained, and when his services were requested he took it seriously to heart and said: "Well, Mr. —, you know it will be my first marriage."

"Oh," returned the bridegroom, reassuredly, "ye dinna need to put yerse' the least about, sir, for ye see ye're no a bit waur than my self. It's my first marriage, too, an' I'm nae a bit frightened!"

It was a matter of fact kind of individual of this kind, who, on being asked the fateful question beginning "Do you take this woman?" replied: "What tither an I gaur to do; icsa that what brocht me here?"

Another rustic on a similar occasion answered the question thus: "Ye're takin' her, but it was her sister that I wanted."

He was certainly more polite the bridegroom who meekly responded: "Yes, if you please, sir."

Amusing incidents of frequent occurrence. At a marriage ceremony a few days ago in a little country church, when the minister said in a solemn tone: "Will thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" etc. instead of the woman answering for herself, a gruff man stepped forward and answered: "I will."

The minister looked up very much perplexed and paused. He repeated the sentence, and again the same gruff voice answered: "I will."

Again the minister looked up surprised, not knowing what to make of it, when one of the groomsmen at the end of the row said: "She's deaf, and I'm answering for her."

During the ceremony on another occasion the bridegroom happened to turn around to glance at a friend of his in the congregation. His friend, who was of a waggish disposition, observing the look, wet one of his fingers and began rubbing his right eye. Thinking his eye was dirty the bridegroom began to do likewise. Then looking round again, he saw his friend rubbing his other eye, and not knowing whether he was being the right one or not, he wet his fingers and rubbed both of them.

Whereupon the minister pawkly observed in a soothing tone of voice: "John, John, ye needna greet; it's nearly at the end of the row."

A rather unique incident took place at a wedding some time ago, and thereby hangs a tale.

A coachman to a country gentleman fell in love with one of the maids at a mansion house to which he occasionally drove his master. He ultimately proposed marriage and was accepted, though it so happened he had never seen his charmer except in the evening.

When the two met for the marriage ceremony to be performed it was observed that the bridegroom's face wore a look suggestive of extreme disappointment, and when the minister put to him the question, "Do you take this woman?" he cast a critical glance at the bride and responded: "Dad, noo when I see her in the daylight I'd like langer time to consider."

Had Forgotten His Excuse.

Bear Mother's Unjust Chastisement.
A friend of mine returning to camp after a day's shooting, suddenly came in sight of a big she bear with two cubs following in single file, proceeding along a ridge, the father of the three being sharply silhouetted against the sky. It was a very long shot, but he determined to try it, and fired. The result was curious. The procession stopped, the she bear scratched herself hastily, then turned around, and regarding the cub immediately behind her with grave disapproval, boxed its ears soundly, and then went trundling along the ridge, evidently under the impression that her frolicsome offspring had been up to some unusually objectionable tricks.—Navy and Army.

"Dose Again, Old Devil!"
The blow of an English army officer was visiting me with her son a charming little fellow about five years old. The mother told me with pride how honorable he was, how high-minded, and that she had never considered any of the boys in his class for an instant as in him indications of any traits that were low or base.

The child was put to bed every night at 8. We dined at 7. I was sitting in the drawing room one evening before my own study. The room was dark, the doors open, and my seat commanded a view of both the stairway and the dining room. The table was set and in the center was a dish of tempting peaches. Presently there came to my ears the patter of little bare feet, and a childish figure, clad in a night gown, stole down the stairs, through the hall, into the dining room, up to the table, where it had been a stubborn little fellow, muttered, "Done again, old devil!"—Harper's Magazine.

Kooled the Doctor.
Two Polish musicians who were badly afflicted with rheumatism, were recently taken to a hospital in Frankfurt. Each felt great pain in one leg and the physician tried to alleviate it by rubbing the leg.

One of the musicians howled terribly while the other uttered not a word; indeed, from the smile on his face, one would have said he enjoyed the rubbing.

After the doctor had gone away, the one who had howled asked: "How in the name of heaven were you able to endure all that pain without screaming?"

"Easy enough," was the reply. "I fooled the doctor; I gave him my sound leg to rub."

Reveries of a Bachelor.

A married man's troubles begin when he is engaged. When he is engaged, it isn't on what income one can get married, but on what income one can live after getting married.

No woman can ever account for her husband's lack of interest in her diploma and the photograph of her first suitor.

The way to convince a woman you love is to sit in abstraction for a long time and then say with a start that you were thinking of the first day you ever saw her.

Before she is married the average woman thinks that when she has a home of her own she will raise vegetables and chickens; afterward she thinks children will do.—N. Y. Press.

Twenty-Pound Cabbages in Cuba.
In Cuba cabbages frequently weigh as much as twenty pounds. All vegetables do well. Radishes may be eaten from fourteen to eighteen days after sowing, while corn produces three crops per year. Sweet potatoes are perpetual. The natives dig up the tubers, cut them off and plant the old vines, which produce a new crop in three months. All sorts of fruit, horticultural and green-house plants, and tubous stock are also grown with the most gratifying success.

LOST HIS RHEUMATISM By the Use of a Bottle of St. Jacobs Oil.

Sergeant Jeremiah Maher, of Ardcaith, Royal Irish Constabulary.

"My friend, Mr. Thomas Hand, has been a great sufferer from rheumatism in the back and joints for the last four years, during which time he has applied many different methods of treatment, but obtained no relief whatever, and for the last two years has been unable to walk without a stick, and sometimes two sticks, and was in great pain constantly. I induced him to procure a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which he applied with the most astonishing and marvelous effects. Before he had finished using the contents of the first bottle he could walk readily without the aid of a stick, and after a few applications from the second bottle he was free from pain, and has been ever since; and although 50 years and a farmer, he can walk and work without experiencing any pain or difficulty whatever."

Nature His Hired Man.
It was in the far south.
"How's times?" asked the tourist.
"Pretty tolerable, stranger," responded the old man, who was sitting on a stump. "I had some trees to cut down, but the cyclone leveled them and saved me the trouble."
"That was good."
"Yes, and then the lightning set fire to the brush pile, and saved me the trouble of burning it."
"Remarkable! But what are you doing now?"
"Waiting for an earthquake to come along and shake the potatoes out of the ground."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by conducting the sound directly to the auditory nerve, and this is done by the application of the Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. It is entirely cured by rubbing the leg.

One of the musicians howled terribly while the other uttered not a word; indeed, from the smile on his face, one would have said he enjoyed the rubbing.

After the doctor had gone away, the one who had howled asked: "How in the name of heaven were you able to endure all that pain without screaming?"

A little girl about 3 years old was out playing when suddenly it became very cloudy. She ran into the house and started her mamma by saying: "I'm not going to stay outdoors any more."

Sought and Found.
Three conceited young men went, as they thought themselves, passing along the road near Oxford, met a grave old gentleman, with whom they had a mind to be rudely merry.

"Good morrow, Father Jacob," cried the last.

"I am neither Abraham, Isaac nor Jacob," replied the old gentleman, "but Saul, the son of King, who went out to seek his father's asses, and, lo! here I have found them."

NIGHTMARE AND ITS CURE.

Those who suffer from nightmare and the number is legion—may be interested in knowing that the disorder is a nervous one, traceable in many instances to preventable causes. Sometimes these are due to prolonged wakefulness, a radical change in diet, or faulty position of the body, such as lying upon the back or face. Sometimes it is due to some mechanical interference, such as an aneurism or even swollen tonsils. West has reported a case in which, in spite of all hygienic treatment, nightmare continued every night for a long period, due to which during sleep in prone position, hindered free respiration. Cutting off the point of this mischievous avula caused the permanent discontinuance of the visits of the nightmare.

In nervous persons, emotional in character, nightmare may be caused by grewsome tales of woeful spectacles, grief, discouragement, hatred, anger, etc. In fact, the most intense of passions, due to the exhaustion of passion, due to the loss of dearly loved relatives or friends, sudden and extreme reverse of fortune, disappointed ambition, the fear of disease, or even a shock to one's self love and esteem, which, as has been aptly said, slays more victims than love.

The treatment of nightmare consists in awakening the subject and in there is perturbation of mind, giving some mildly sedative potion, such as warm water sweetened with syrup of lettuce. Following this care should be taken to remove the supposed cause, to prevent recurrences of the disorder. In the case of children, intense moral impressions, vivid stories and grewsome tales should be avoided, especially before bedtime.

The child should be put to bed early to avoid the exciting environment of the social circle, of animated conversation and convivial joy. The evening meal should be a light one, both as to quantity and quality of food and drink, avoiding highly spiced relishes and stimulating drinks. The chamber should be spacious and well ventilated, the bed not too soft and without too much bed clothing. Perfect muscular relaxation, avoidance of false positions and perfect freedom of all compression, resting with respiration or circulation, must be avoided. The feet ought to be warm and lower than the head. The body should be extended and not cuddled up into a ball. When the bed is in an alcove or surrounded by heavy curtains, the room should be well ventilated, for they prevent the free circulation of air, and the brain is stupefied, by the sleeper, the air vitiated by him being breathed over and over again.

The bed ought to be slightly inclined from head to foot, but the proper elevation of the head varies according to temperament. Anemic people need to have the head quite low, but full-blooded people rest easier if the head is higher.

A DOON TO HORSEMEN.—One bottle of English Spavin Liment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it has mysterious promptness in the removal of horres of hard, soft or calloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, swellings, stifles and sprains.

Some men wouldn't be any worse than their few, even if they were married.

Mighty are girls if ever talk about a new engagement without wetting their lips nervously.

A woman sort of expects burglars to come around in the same regular way as the milkman.

There is some hope for the idiot who thinks he knows all about gardening, but none at all for him when he thinks the same way about women.

An Intricate Language.
The intricacies of the English language are well illustrated in the definition given of a sleeper:

A sleeper is one who sleeps. A sleeper is that in which the sleeper sleeps. A sleeper is that on which the sleeper runs while the sleeper sleeps. Therefore, while the sleeper sleeps in the sleeper, the sleeper carries the sleeper over the sleeper under the sleeper, until the sleeper which carries the sleeper jumps the sleeper by striking the sleeper on the sleeper, and there is no longer any sleeper sleeping in the sleeper on the sleeper.
