The Geggie Lecture.

Thursday evening last Rev. Mr. Geggie, Toronto, gave his interesting lecture on "Wit and Humor," in the Presbyterian Church, in connection with anniversary services, the building was well filled.

At the opening Rev. Mr. Farquharson gave some highly interesting historical facts of the origin of Durham church. In October 1855 it was within the bounds of Hamilton Presbytery, which extended west to Detroit. In that year steps were taken to organize the work in Durham, and unfortunately by the records between that and 1857 are wanting. In the latter year Rev. Mr. Park was inducted, and few indeed remain of the pioneer members of the church. Mr. Farquharson mentioned Mrs Davidson and Mr. Walter Nichol, as two of the oldest continuous members. Though the first seats were boards on wooden blocks, the piety of those days was not less than we have now, yet the seeds of those days had resulted in the commendable progress made by their successors.

Messrs N. W. Campbell and C. Ramage made brief statements, the former on behalf of the Ladies' Aid, and the latter on behalf of the board of management, setting forth the efforts made and those yet needed to complete the work of improvement taken in hand.

Mr. Geggie's lecture was simply unreportable. He is brimful himself of the "Wit and Humor" he lectured about, a "God-given quality that should be cultivated and not be aye lookin' at things w' blue spectacles. Ye should be able to see fun even when ye're doom'd 't' the mouth." The lack of humor was a great lack, and Goethe's mother took the view that a man who could laugh heartily could not sin. He claimed that the great men who had moved their fellowmen had all been blessed with humor. Humor he defined as the atmosphere and wit the spark without humor and fun. "If ye hae a tendency to pun keep right on." The rollicking frolicking fun of the native of the Emerald Isle was compared with the sober laugh of the Englishmen and the "sair" laugh of the Scotman. With a never failing fund of anecdotes he played off one nationality against the other, always knowing the Scotchmen of an audience from the Irishmen from the fact that the former first saw the print when the latter was through laughing at it. The development of Niagara power was due to the shrewd Scotsman's remark that it was "a great waste o' water," and to show that Scotchman could make an Irish bull he told a story of two differing over a graveyard, one remarked "I wud rather dee than be buried there," "Man," says the other "I'll be buried that way under the Conundrum, under Repartee, under Irony, &c., was duly illustrated. We dont remember how the connection was brought in but he touched a popular patriotic chord when he compared the manly way the British and Canadians captured Cronje to the lying and deceit practised to capture Aquinaldo. Opinions may differ as to the lecture but ma certie he's a braw lecturer an giu he come again there'll be a bigger crowd to laugh at his witticisms an' see the airless coat sleeve dangling in moments of eloquence and excitement.

Anniversary Service.

Fine weather prevailed on Sunday last and good congregations morning and evening met to take part in the Anniversary services commemorating the opening of the 4th year of Rev. Mr. Farquharson's pastorate. The choir of the church had made special preparation and their selections were admirable, sung with appropriate taste and feeling as well as with musical excellence. Miss Burnet and Mrs. A. Jackson had a special duet in the morning and Miss King in the evening sang a solo with her usual force and effectiveness.

Rev. J. McD. Duncan, Toronto, was the preacher of the day. An able and scholarly man, and a valued servant of the church, his discourses were marked not only by ability but by an earnest gospel directness. In the morning he spoke from John XIV. "If you love me keep my commandments." This appeal to the disciples in the face of their weakness on several occasions, showed that the Master saw nobility behind their failings, and the same appeal was made to us whose weaknesses were not less theirs, and who had equal hope of receiving the same reward. Giving reasons for the requirement asked for in the tender farewell words he showed how it was justified by His authority over the forces of nature, it was as natural for man to obey as for Jesus to command and his service was not servitude. We learn to govern by learning to obey. Our obedience it was shown was not limited to our ability, for Christ constantly commanded the most difficult tasks, but in doing so made his grace sufficient for them. "It was faithfulness and not favoritism that was the road to advancement in His Kingdom. He saw (and sees) all the opposition of the world, the dangers, the sufferings before them, (and as yet commands us to obey. He built his belief on the power of love to a person, a power which many instances in the world's history showed to be most efficacious. Out of the trials of His life of Gethsemane and the cross he has constructed a crown to bind us to himself, and the thought of the infinite sacrifice he made should bind us to him. "Love is the foundation, Obedience the elegant superstructure; Love is the root, Obedience is the tree; Love is the source, Obedience is the stream, so there could be no obedience without love."

In the evening he spoke on the first homicide and the cry of vengeance that went up for a brother's blood. He pointed out how jealousy came before murder, he didn't overcome his passions and they overcame him. The sin from Christ's blood was not one of vengeance; no wrathful lightning in his eye, but a continual plea for mercy even when before the crafty High Priest or when being nailed to the cross. The cry "who is thy brother?" was one to-night, but the blood shed—that we shed—cries not for vengeance. He gave cogent reasons why Christ's blood was efficacious: there was a great power in the appeal of innocent blood. It came from one tempted as we are; from one who left the mount of transfiguration and its glory to return to earth and its shame; it was shed for the atonement of sin not his own—on the cross he asked nothing for himself, all for others; it was efficacious because the victim was willing; he set his face "steadfastly" towards Jerusalem, he could have had legions of Angels, but he willingly went to humiliation and death. By an appropriate illustration he showed that the doors of Justice, Truth and Holiness were shut against us, but the door of Mercy was ever open to all and through that the best as well as the worst of us have the privilege of entering.

THE LATE MRS. WM. MARSHALL.

Tuesday last Mrs. Wm. Marshall, Sr., of the 3rd Con., Normanby, passed over to the greater number. For a good part of the summer she has been in poor health from a stomach affection. It became acute a few weeks ago, but up to last week no immediate danger was feared. Last Thursday she grew suddenly worse, Friday brought unconsciousness, from which she had few conscious moments. She was born in Paisley Block, Guelph (P. about 99 years ago, and early came to "the bush" where, with her husband she struggled bravely with the difficulties of the early settlers and raised a family of 7 sons and 2 daughters, who, with the bereaved husband, will deeply mourn her loss. The daughters are Mrs. Wm. McIlvride, Craighurst, and Jean at home; the sons are Robert, James, John, David, William, George, Landels at home or near by. Mrs. Geo. Moore, of the 10th Con., is her sister. The deceased was no ordinary woman, she had great native intelligence, and was lacking in none of the qualities that a good wife and mother should possess. As a neighbor and friend the writer is in a position to speak and he often is there such unanimous testimony to goodness of heart and life as is born by North-end Normanby and all who knew her, to the memory of Mrs. Wm. Marshall. Her funeral takes place, Thursday, at 2 p. m. to Maplewood cemetery.
