We are not here this week [illegible] we have [illegible] which [illegible] not [illegible] [illegible] pressed into [illegible] [illegible] to young people and old people alike, learn to sing anyway—[illegible] by note—as by ear.

A great mistake is it, and one on the shoulders, to remain silent because not being able to sing thoroughly. Music is made no wise known the validity of Peace in the night of the supreme Being.

Too often now the choir have the most to do. Of course new pieces must be chosen and the strongest will give place to familiarity in a few days. The ancient manner of having a "precentor" is nearly done away with, but we still adhere to it more or less in that branch of the visible church called Presbyterian in this town in the old language, the Gaelic, and now since the musical organs of these amongst us who have taken the lead for scores of years are beginning to fail, there is a necessity of artificial instruments taking the lead. But here we may say that artificial singing will never do for Gaelic worshippers for they have the old system rooted and grounded into their heads that neither organs nor book of Praise nor any other hymns can ever be substituted for the good old Psalms of David. We are not at all finding fault with the good old people for clinging to the old version for it is hard to improve on the good old times, and psalms that were sung by our forefathers on the hills of Scotland and elsewhere hundreds of years ago, and chanted line by line by the "precentor" as was customary in olden times while singing the psalm etc., but we must be liberal and confess that there is great improvement on the praise part of the worship in all our churches during the last score of years as we can testify from long experience in the old system, and now as the key note is sounded properly on the instrument it is no trouble to sing correctly.

The congregation that lacks in the praise part of the worship assists in making the service more or less dull for the preacher etc. Hence the necessity of all the young people to learn how to sing for there are hundreds of young men and women who are possessed with good talent that never made use of it.

THE DELINEATOR FOR JANUARY.

Among the noticeable features of THE DELINEATOR for January is its fine cover—the first of a series that will continue throughout the year. The scope of the magazine has been generally widened, and new and valuable material has been introduced into all the departments. Clara E. Laughlin begins a series of papers entitled "Miladi" in which she considers the problems and prerogatives of womanhood. Cyrus Townsend Brady is represented by one of his famous bishop stories. Interest is heightened in Mrs. Barr's powerful love story, Thyra Varrick, and the novel develops along dramatic lines.

Mrs. Theodore W. Birney discusses Childhood, a subject concerning which she is eminently fitted to write. The fashions are presented in their usual attractive and timely form, and the holiday display in the shops is illustrated and described. The Hair: Its Care and Dressing should claim the attention of women. For the children there appears the first of the "What Happened Then" Stories, by Grace MacGowan Cook, and the usual pastime, a nature history sketch, etc. The pages of illustrated cookery portray a decided novelty in a Chinese dinner. Mrs. Margaret Hall begins in this number a series of Practical Talks to Young Housekeepers, and the Departments preserve their usual degree of interest and excellence.
