HOW THE SULTAN LOOKS.

Ruler of the Moslem Nation Looks and Acts as if He Was Haunted.

The lot of the Sultan of Turkey is not a happy one. Probably no potentate on earth is so continuously haunted by fear of death as is this dark-hued despot. Ray Stewart Paker, who recently saw Abdul Hamid at Constantimople, says of him: "I stood on the palace terrace rising above the little roadway down which on Friday the Sultan ventures forth to say his prayers. I saw the extraordinary precautions taken to protect him-the gathering of all his 5,000 troops, the stoppage of traffic by walls of armed men in every roadway leading up to the palace, then the surroundings of the few hundred yards of roadway which the Sultan must traverse from his palace gate to his mosque by rows of soldiers knee-deep. It was a strange, gorgeous, incongruous spectacle.

"Preceded by his women in closed carriages, several of their sons and some eighty great generals and officers of the army marching on foot, came the Sultan himself. He was driven slowly in an open carriage facing forward, with his Minister of War sitting opposite, and this is Abdul Hamid II., the absolute ruler of 25,000,000 people, the defender of 1-senize, the glorious government, vagassin" Every splendor of general cago Record.

and trooper is forgotten: every eye is fixed on the little, old, round shouldered man in the carriage. A shout-well-trained and evidently long-practised shout, curiously lacking in fire or spontaneity-goes up from the troops. The old man raises his hand in salute; he wears a red fez; his face is sickly white, like parchment; the nose is that of an old eagle long, hooked, high-bridged—the American nose, his subjects will whisper in contempt. His eyes, what one sees of them, for he turns his head neither to the right nor to the left, are deep set and black.

"Those who know him best say that he has a peculiar way of mov-"Above all things, avoid the girl ing his eyes without moving his head, as if he were always seeking to look been called, and the raven he looks. Total Abstinence Brigade.

"Fellow citizens, I'm sick," said Nathan Beeswax last night to a circle of admirers. "There was too much refreshment circulating last evening. I began with beer, shifted to old Pepper, finally worked my way round to Mumm's extra dry and then went off in a trance. When I woke up this else. I caught a glimpse of my reflection in a mirror, and my face frightened me so I screamed. You can't imagine how I felt, because I broke the record of misery. No man ever did feel like I did and live. I reached for the ice water pitcher and took a gulp. For a minute I thought I was in heaven. That water tasted like ambrosia and nectar. Thirsty? Don't ask me trivial questions. The temperature in my system was so high that my breath set my moustache on fire. It was completely destroyed. No insurance. I made four efforts to get out of bed before I realized the fatuous futility of essaying the impossible. I mouned in my agony. I was hot one minute and cold the next, while a clammy and continuous perspiration added interest and enjoyment to the proceedings. Every little while strange rigors would seize me and when I finally dropped into a fitful slumber I dreamed that an alligator was lying beside me and fanning me with his long red tongue. Nightmare? No, sir; this was an alligator. Holler? Why, I'll bet four dollars they heard me yelling on Edisto Island. Now harken to me: Nathan Beeswax, as a booze comedian, is no more. I've joined the Apollinaris brigade. Are you on?" " How did you happen to accumulate such a riotous jag, Mr. Beeswax?" asked one of his auditors. "Well, the material was available, my boy, and the time somehow seemed to be opportune. I had been unhappy for several weeks, and I yearned for the company of a few frollicking sensations. I wanted to feel glad, as it were, and forget about a bet I made on a horse last week that stopped in the stretch and asked for water. I opened the performance with beer, and I soon came to the conclusion that if I wanted to experience that joy which passeth all understanding I would have to switch. So I chased a whisper across the bar, and a bottle of crimson fluid connected with my good right hand. That was the beginning of the end. Ere long I was too merry for anything. My money also began to annoy me. I couldn't spend it fast enough, and when I met a stranger from M unt Pleasant Iacked him if he would allow me to give him $10. He said he would oblige me with pleasure, but he'd like me W. F. MONTAGUE. Grand Recorder, better if I made it $20. The suggestion pleased me so that I wept from sheer joy and handed him the $20. I was now at the champagne stage of the game, and the rapids were just below me. I vaguely remember meeting a longshoreman and asking him who his favorite poet was, but I can't recall what he said. Shortly afterward the automatic piano began to play "The Holy City," and when the instrument reached that 'Je-rusa-lem' note my soul slipped out of its socket and I passed away. But this morning-don't worry. I won't their shores and gave them the name go over it again. Hereafter address your letters to me in care of the Total Abstainers' Society. Are you on? "Fire" in English and "feuer"

German are pronounced somewhat alike, and this came near causing a pank at a New Year's celebration at one of the German churches. The German "feuer" means to celebrate. The choir at this particular church is sup-posed to be very fine, and the bulk of the entertainment fell to it. In one of the anthems the tenors and sopranos slowly mount the musical scale until they come to "A" above the staff. That's pretty high, and all the Irishman who was approaching could hear was the "feuer." He did not wait for an explanation. but ran down the street yelling "fire" at the top of his voice. Nicaragua's New Labor Law Seems to Make Strikes Impossible.

The Legislature of Nicaragua passed on June 30, 1901, a law that caused general consternation among all classes of society. It was one of the most remarkable edicts for regulating and defining labor in its relations with capital ever promulgated. The popular voice at once declared that such an edict could never beenforced. Two months ago, however, the Government put the law into effeet, and, according to the reports from Nicaragua, everybody is becoming reconciled to it, and the results seem to be thus far beneficial. The law defines a laborer as any person, male or female, over 16, who has not a capital of 500 pesos, which is about $100 in our currency.

It then declares that every laborer must have an employer. Anyone who is found to be unemployed is to be arrested at once, imprisoned for twenty days and made to labor on public works while awaiting an em

When an employer hires a person to work, the employee must buy a small book from the Government in which to register the name, age, description and general characteristics of the person and conditions of the contract. The employer must give his employee a receipt for this book, which the latter can produce as a proof of his good standing whenever arrested by the police on suspicion of being idle.

When the laborer has completed his contract with one employer and desires to go to another he must give his book of labor to his next employer and take a receipt for it. If the laborer wants money in advance his employer can give it to him only as a loan without interest, to be paid by retaining one-half of the salary or wages until the debt is cancelled. If a laborer leaves his employer without paying his debt he will be imprisoned, fined, and obliged to return and work it out. Any person employing laborers without this book of labor will be fined about $40. It looks to editors of Nicaragua newspapers, who have been studying this law, as though strikes cannot thrive under it, for laborers who throw themselves out of employment by striking are likely to be at once arrested for being out of work.

The main purpose of the law, however, is to prevent employers from advancing wages to laborers on a contract, which made the laborer a slave until he settled his account, and wonder why they were ever born, also to prevent idleness by obliging and why they are alive unless to everyone without capital to be em-
