Her Many Jewls.

The value of the jewels at the disposal of the German Empress is about $1,200,000. Of these, however, only $500,000 worth are her private property. The others belong to the crown and are simply lent to the Empress. The present Empress does not care to wear jewels except on state occasions nor does the Emperor care to see them on her in daily life hence weeks often pass without her seeing them.

Bad for the Skin.

Savvy's Magazine.
An Episcopal clergyman of Cincinnati was shaved by a barber who was addicted to occasional sprees. The razor manipulator cut the parson's face quite considerably.

"You see, Jackson, that comes from taking too much drink," said the man of God.

"Yes, sah," replied Jackson, "it makes de skin very tendah, sah. It do for a fact."

A Married Man's Musings.

Courtship is poetry; a marriage, first year, blank verse; after that, prose.

After a while every married man comes to be a firm believer in mind reading.

Along about this time the new leaves we turned over recently begin to fly back.

Where there's a will there's a way to break it—unless it's a woman's will.

It was said of a certain great man that he could baffle in seven languages. It is rarely that a woman performs one—eventh of this feat.—Pittsburg Despatch.

C. C. RICHARDS & CO.:
Dear Sirs—For some years I have had only partial use of my arm, caused by a sudden strain. I have used every remedy without effect, until I got a sample bottle of McNARD'S LINIMENT. The benefit I received from it caused me to continue its use, and now I am happy to say my arm is completely restored. —Z. W. HARRISON.

Sandals the Latest Fad.

Sandals, designed for ladies' evening wear, says the Queen, have already appeared in the shop windows, and will doubtless be long seen in the drawing rooms. West-end bootmaker recently exhibited a pair of sandals he had made for a customer, which would have graced the feet of a Roman empress. The book expert believes that the sandal has come to stay, and that the shoe, which has held sway for over twelve centuries, is at last threatened with a rival.

WHEN WARD ACTED CHEROKEE

There is a story of Artemus Ward which has never been in print. It was told to me by one of the victims, who years afterwards was sent as ambassador from the United States to a prominent country in Europe. Artemus was lecturing in a western city, and two prominent society young men invited him to a little supper after the discourse was over. It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning when his hosts turned out into the silent and deserted streets to escort Artemus to the hotel where he was staying. The humorist was feeling pretty brisk and gravely said:

"Did you ever hear me give the Cherokee war-whoop?"

His companions admitted they had not had that pleasure.

"Well," said Artemus, "I think I can waken the whole town although I am not sure of arousing the more distant neighbors," and with that he sent forth a war-piercing yell that made the sleeping city in like manner neigh-tight.

Before the two young men could gather their wits a policeman appeared out of the darkness and arrested them.

"Drunk and disorderly and disturbing the peace," said the officer; "make no resistance or it will be the worse for you."

And then he blew his whistle again to summon help in case the two should turn upon him, which they had not the slightest intention of doing, but they were thunderstruck at the prospect of spending the night in the cells and having their respective names in the papers next morning. They swore to the policeman that they had not uttered the shriek or murdered anybody as he seemed to suspect, and the bobby sarcastically advised them to try that story on the magistrate in the morning. As they parleyed there, a tall, dignified gentleman in evening dress strolled along.

"What is the trouble, officer?" asked the newcomer in a most urbane tone of voice.

"Drunk, and disorderly," repeated the policeman.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," said the stranger, "but I know these gentlemen and can vouch for their sobriety and respectability."

"And who the deuce are you?" asked the officer, not too well pleased at the interruption, yet somewhat mollified by the politeness of his interlocutor.

"I am Mr. Artemus Ward," replied the other. "I lectured last night before some two thousand of your constituents at the Opera House, and among my audience I understand was your own chief of police, so if you wish me to accompany you to the station I shall be most happy to do so."

The policeman dropped his hand from the shoulder of the future ambassador, for he had seen the name of Artemus Ward on the boardings in letters three feet long, and he had a deep respect for any man who could have his name printed in such gigantic form.

"Oh, if you know the men, sir, it will be all right, and I won't run them in, but who in thunder let out that blood-curdling speech?"

"Did you hear it, sir?"

"I did," admitted Artemus, swearing, and, furthermore, not five minutes since a man ran down in the direction from which I came as hard as he could go. I believe that he was the disturber of the peace,"

"Ah, well," said the official, with a sigh of relief, "that'll be the man, had luck to him and he'll run right into the arms of Mulligan, that's 'on Mulligan's beat.' Good morning to you, gentlemen, and my best apologies to the three of you."

"The mistake was quite pardonable," said Artemus, with his most distinguished bow, and he led his bewilder'd friends away. —Robert Barr in Saturday Evening Post.

"If No One Ever Marries Me..."
By a Bachelor. With Apologies.

If no one ever marries me—
And they don't seem very keen,
For I can't pretend I'm handsome,
And my purse is rather lean—

If no one ever marries me,
I'll get along all right—
I shall play at golf the whole day
Through And at bridge the livelong night.

I shall have a little sailing yacht,
And a motor all my own,
And I shan't be plagued with children's bills
For things that they've outgrown.

And still I'm sick of everything,
And dull as dull can be,
I shall think how glad I've made
Who didn't marry me.

—Punch.

Good Sense and God's Grace.

I have peered into quiet "parlors," where the carpet is clean and bright, and the furniture polished and neat into rooms where the chairs are set and the floor carpeted, into kitchens where the family live and the boys and girls are as blithe as the spirits in the thatch overhead, and I see that it is not so much wealth and learning, nor clothing, nor servants, nor toll, nor idleness, nor town, nor country, nor station, as tone and temper, that render homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country good sense and God's grace make life what no teachers, or accomplishments, or means or society, can make it—the opening stave of an everlasting psalm: the fair beginning of an endless existence; the godly, modest, well-proportioned vestibule to a temple of God's building that shall never decay, wax old, or vanish away.—Dr. John Hall

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

The springs of red blood are found in the soft core of the bones called the marrow and some say red blood also comes from the spleen. Healthy bone marrow and healthy spleen are full of fat.

Scott's Emulsion makes new blood by feeding the bone marrow and the spleen with the richest of all fats, the pure cod liver oil.

For pale school girls and invalids and for all whose blood is thin and pale, Scott's Emulsion is a pleasant and rich blood food. It not only feeds the blood-making organs but gives them strength to do their proper work.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contains Mercury as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when applied to the mucous surfaces.

Such articles should not be used except on prescriptions from reputable doctors.

As the damage they will do is ten fold

as the good they may possibly derive from them.

Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous membranes of the system. To Keep Off Old Age.

Sometimes as the years go on the muscles of the body, which should be straight and strong, become lax and convex, giving one the middle-aged figure which is such a tell-tale. To prevent or overcome this, you must be sure that you walk, stand and sit erect. Walking is the best of all exercises for these muscles. Relax the muscles of the face, let it scrunch up, clean, and feed it with plenty of cold cream. Remember that after the body is fully grown it only needs enough to keep it in good working order, that the plainer and the more simple the food the less the digestive organs are taxed, and that it is very important that these organs should be in good order, or even the necessary food will do harm. Remember that you should eat lightly of meat; that green vegetables and fresh fruits contain salts and acids which are especially efficient in dissolving the lime-salts, and that all rich food and drinks tax the digestion heavily, and furnish nothing good in return. Drink freely of water.

Nine Times Out of Ten Painkiller will be found to fill your nostrils a household remedy. Used as a liniment for stiffness and taken internally for all bowel complaints. Avoid substitutes. There is but one Painkiller—Perry Davis'.
