INTERNATIONAL LESSON NO. III
APRIL 19, 1903.

The Law of Love.—Rom. 13: 7-14. Study Verses 1-14.

Commentary.—Explanatory. Rome is situated in Italy on the River Tiber, 1,134 miles west of Jerusalem. The gospel had reached this far off land and there were a few Christians there who were diligent in seeking the truth. Paul had never visited them, but he greatly desired to do so. A few years after this his hopes were realized, although he did not go to them as he had expected, for instead of going voluntarily as a missionary, he was compelled to go as a Roman prisoner, under bonds.

1. Civil duties.—vs. 1-7. In these verses it is stated as a primary truth that civil authority is a divine institution. Nothing is said of revolutionary action, but revolutionary action in a Christian is distinctly forbidden.

2. To all.—To all those in authority over you. Tribute—Tax on person or property. Custom—Revenue. Tell on merchandise. Fear—Such as is due to a public official and to an authorized avenger of wrong. Honor—Do not behave disrespectfully to any person, and to those in authority show reverence and respect on account of the dignity of the office, even though you cannot respect the man.

3. The law of love.—vs. 8-10. 8. One no man.—It cannot be supposed that the apostle meant to prohibit the contracting of debts on any account. Christians are indeed under the highest obligations to pay all legal demands without reluctance or needless delay and with great punctuality, and they should avoid all superfluous expense and carefully guard against contracting any debts which they have not a reasonable prospect of discharging. Love one another.—In the preceding verses the apostle has been showing the duty, reverence and obedience which all Christians, from the highest to the lowest, owe to the civil magistrate, whether he be emperor, king, proconsul or other state officer; here he shows them their duty to one another, but this is widely different from that which they owe to the civil government; to the first they owe submission, reverence, obedience and tribute; to the latter they owe nothing but mutual love, and those offices which necessarily spring from it.

9. Shall not commit, etc.—In this verse the apostle quotes from the law as though he would say that the perfect love which he declares they owe to one another will entitle them to this. And whatever he has omitted, which the law contains, is all covered in keeping the law of love. Thy neighbor as thyself.—When this is done in reality there is completeness, and we keep the whole law.

10. Worketh no ill.—The law of love forbids the doing of anything that would injure myself or others, as practiced, the golden rule, acts toward his neighbor as he would that his neighbor should act toward him.

Bradstreet's on Trade.
At Montreal the demand for spring and summer goods is so great that mills and factories are taxed to their limit to meet the requirements of the trade. In fact the general view taken is that the prospects for trade were never better than they are at present. Fine spring weather at Toronto this week has stimulated the demand for goods of navigation, too, as increased the demand for goods for shipment by water to interior points. Trade at the Coast is showing a fair expansion for this season. Business at Hamilton has been active this week. The wholesale merchants of the Ambition City are getting a very good share of the increased trade requirements of the country, both in the west and in Ontario, and shipments continue on a large scale. The firm tone of the markets continues to stimulate purchases for the fall. At London this week the wholesalers have been quite busy with sorting orders for the spring and summer trade, and the fall trade is also increasing. Ottawa wholesale trade is very active for this season. General business at Quebec during the week has been active.

Six to One.
A well-known surgeon was imparting some clinical instruction to a dozen students who accompanied him in his rounds. Pausing at the bedside of a doubtful case, he said: "Now, gentlemen, do you think this is, or is not, a case for operation?" One by one the students made their diagnosis, and all of them answered in the negative. "Well, gentlemen, you are all wrong," said the wielder of the free and flashing scalpel, "and am going to operate to-morrow." "No, you won't," exclaimed the patient, as he rose in his bed. "Six to one is a good majority; gimme my clothes!"

At London ... Tower

Interesting discoveries have recently been made at the Tower of London of some inscriptions made on the walls by persons confined there in past times. In the work of repair and restoration, an opening in the St. Martin's Tower, a piece of deal framing had to be removed. Behind this was found the name of Ambrose Rookwood, a wealthy young Suffolk squire, who was confined in the gunpowder plot. It was finely carved, and the surname was divided, "Rook-wood," indicating the nature of its derivation. The unfortunate culprit was drawn and hanged in palace yard, Westminster, with other of the conspirators, on the last day of January, 1606. Mr. Hepworth Dixon, in "Her Majesty's Tower," gives an account of Rookwood's exciting ride out of London to his home at Coldham Hall. Following the gunpowder plot was discovered. He covered thirty miles on a single horse, and by means of relays of animals made the entire distance of eighty-one miles, in less than seven hours, a remarkable performance, considering the state of the roads at that period. A more elaborate inscription than that of Rookwood's and one of the finest of the whole series in St. Martin's Tower, is one that has been found through the removal of some inscriptions of white wash. Beneath an emblem of the Trinity appear the sacred letters "I. H. S." and, then, the name, "George Elesley, Priest." On the left is a shield containing the fleur-de-lis, the word Maria, and the cross of white wash. A Latin inscription which follows is supposed to be a verse from the Psalms, "As the hart panteth after the water brook, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God." But this cannot be stated with absolute certainty, as several words are wanting.—London Telegraph.

Jumped the Job.
"I'm perfectly willing to do any sort of work," he argued, as he held the door open. "I don't ask you to give me a meal for nothing." "You'll earn it, will you?" asked the head of the house. "Certainly I will. All I ask for is the opportunity." "Are you particular about the work?" "Not in the least! Try me at any blessed thing you want doing." "Very well. My wife's out of town, and I've got a servant who has been running the house for a week or so, and I haven't the moral courage to discharge her. Come in and work her out." "Let me see her, sir. I'll go to the back door and size her up." He was gone about two minutes, and when he came back he hurriedly carried the servant by the hinges in his hurry to get through. He didn't even stop in the front yard, but as he kept on he turned his face to the crack in the door and said: "Thank you very kindly, sir, but I did I ain't hungry, and can make these old clothes do me very well till next summer!"

Wanted a Chinese Song.
Most of the policemen in Australia are Irishmen, whose genius for humorous bantering knows nothing of its inequality under the Southern Cross. Here is an instance: Many Chinese names are reminiscent of a burlesque and are probably merely barbarian caricatures of the originals. Of these Fong Fat, Ah Su and Ah Foo are the most common. A newly appointed officer in a county case in which a Chinese was witness to call for Ah Song. The song of Erin looked puzzled and darted a look at the bench to try to discover if this was a colonial joke; but, seeing the judge as grave as an undertaker, he turned to the jury and blurted out: "Gentlemen, will any of you favor his honor with a song?"

SECOND CHAPTER OF CLOVER

The Preacher Caught on After Many Interruptions.
A writer in the Philadelphia Ledger gives the following interesting variation of an old story based on a confusion of the names of two kinds of grass. At a certain revival meeting of colored folks in a church in North Carolina the minister announced from the pulpit, "My text is 'Let de woman learn in silence with all subjection.' You will done for it in de second chapter, 'Seventh v'arse of 'Clover.' At de first month of an unknown epidemic a good brother plucked the coat tails of the minister. The latter turned round, men again faced the audience. "The spite ob de interruption," he said, "I repeat der text, nam from de second chapter, 'Seventh v'arse of 'Clover.' Again the coat tails were plucked, and the minister glared at the auditors, only to turn again to the congregation. "Benker Johnson," he said, "objects to de text. 'Let woman learn in silence.' We all know dat, Sister Johnson, but I don't repeat der text 'til we've found in de second chapter, 'Seventh v'arse of 'Clover.'" Here Brother Johnson rose to the minister's ear and whispered earnestly. "Oh," said the dominie, then to the gaping people, "I asks Sister Johnson's pardon. Her husband says I made a mistake, he is dat right. My text will not be found in de second chapter, 'Seventh v'arse of 'Clover; but in de second chapter, 'Seventh v'arse ob Timothy. I knowed it was some kind ob grass."

Hears B. A. S.
In almost all cases of organic trouble the heart is apt to be troubled. Irregular habits, worry, overwork, irregularity until the nervous system is a wreck, is a sure way to create a 90 puls rate. However, when the heart is troubled, the remedy is to correct the errors of living, sleeping regularly, eating regularly, exercising well, thus making better blood. If there is no heart trouble, but the heart is weak, try to correct that condition.—Health.

Lady Rose's Daughter.
A Canadian edition of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's novel, "Lady Rose's Daughter," has been published by Fiske-Stewart, 21 Richmond street West, Toronto, and is on sale at the bookstores for $1.50. The story attracts much attention while it was running as a serial in Harper's Magazine, opinions varying with regard to the merits of the heroine, Julie Breton, who assists in proscribing over the drawing-room of her patroness, and is so successful socially that she arouses the older woman's jealousy. This leads to her dismissal. Some of the influential friends she has learned to know in Lady Henry's salon rally to her rival standard, but without great enthusiasm, except in the case of her cousin, the Duchess of Crowborough; Jacob Delafield, who is in love with her, and a few others. Meanwhile, Julie, having exerted all her political influence with Lady Henry's friends for Captain Warkworth, a young man, poor, ambitious, determined to succeed in life, has become deeply interested in him. Her efforts are successful, and Warkworth gets the foreign appointment he covets. Then Julie learns that he is engaged to her own cousin, a young girl whom he met in India before he knew Julie, Julie and Warkworth face the truth that they love each other, and that it is too late. Julie, although pride is her strongest characteristic, lets her reserve go and confesses her love. Arrangements are hurriedly made to meet in Paris, and before they say well forever, to take two or three days out of their lives and use them as they will.

Julie slips away from her friends and reaches Paris. In the railway station the whole course of her life is altered in a surprising manner by the sudden appearance of Jacob Delafield, the man who loves her with unselfish devotion. The ending could not be more logical and satisfying. This is, first of all, a "good story." Beyond that, if the reader cares to look for it, it is a remarkable study in heredity, and in the psychology of woman. Throughout the novel brilliant scenes of London society at its best succeed each other with dramatic rapidity. It is unquestionably Mrs. Ward's greatest triumph.

Clear About the Stairs.
A lawyer was cross-examining an Irish woman, the point under enquiry being the relative positions of the doors, windows, etc., in a house which a certain transaction had occurred. "And now, my good woman," the lawyer said, "will you be good enough to tell the court how the stairs run in your house?" "How do the stairs run?" the witness replied. "Shure, when I am upstairs they run down, and when I am downstairs they run up"—Ram's Horn.

THAT WEARY SPRING FEELING

Is Quickly Disposed of by Dodd's Kidney Pills

They Tone Up the Kidneys, Ensuring Pure Blood, Good Circulation, and as a Consequence, Vigor and Energy.

Nearly everyone needs toning up in the spring. Some are altogether ill, others just feel fagged and worn out. They have little inclination to work and less to eat. They are simply useless. Did you ever stop to think that there is a reason for all this and that if the complaint is attacked intelligently it will yield readily, the lazy feeling will depart, and in its place will come vigor and energy and appetite? It is the Kidneys that are not doing their work. They need to be toned up with Dodd's Kidney Pills. Why? Because they are being overworked and need help. In the winter the body fortifies itself against cold. With the coming of spring it throws off this fortification, which consists of extra tissue, and additional waste matter is given to the blood in the arteries. If the Kidneys are in condition to do extra work this waste material is quickly expelled from the body in the usual way. But if the Kidneys are tired or worn out the waste remains in the blood and the circulation is clogged. The remedy is simple, Dodd's Kidney Pills put the Kidneys in good working order. The Kidneys in good working order ensure pure blood and good circulation—ensure brightness and energy. Thousands of people will tell you so, can tell you so out of their own experience.

Getting Rid of them Greasily.
A certain man, a market gardener, with a family of four daughters, was most desirous to get his girls married as they became of age. He waited till Sarah, the eldest, was her own mistress, but, as she reached the age of 25, and Mary, the second daughter, 13, became of age, and still no signs of marrying them, the father began to worry very much. "Well," he said to the neighbors who wanted to know what he was going to do with all his daughters, "if any man will give me one of my daughters, I will give him a hundred with her." Then the girls were crowded with suitors, and finally Sarah was married. And the next day the bridegroom received from his father-in-law—one hundred cabbages.
