A tempting lunch was disposed of and the day spent in boating and various other amusements. The soft voice and rippling laugh of maidens, intermingled with mirth, jollity, song and music vibrated and re-echoed throughout the invisible quietness of that romantic spot. A most enjoyable time was spent and as old Sol was wending his way to the western horizon, all embarked on the voyage home, and were unanimous in declaring that the day was one long to be remembered.

PRICEVILLE.

We see that the Pricerville correspondent to the Flesherton Advance is giving us a dig for suggesting the enlargement of our cemetery by way of getting lots adjacent. He insinuates that having such a nuisance so near to public places might do in the Highlands of Scotland. Well for his information we may tell him we were never in the Highlands, but nevertheless that does not deter us from being a good Highlander all the same and we are informed that they paid due respect to their dead there as well as any other part of the ancient world. He says by using the lot adjacent to the school might be the means of polluting the school wells, &c. Our school wells are polluted now, for there are two of them there and cannot be used. The cause does not arise from the dry bones of the dead in the old cemetery, 40 rods away. Our friend need not be personally afraid of being polluted by this nuisance for he has his dwelling place set on elevated grounds so he is secure from all manner of disease that might arise from the under current of the city or the dead.

There are a number of persons getting mail at our office in this town of the same name and it would be well for those corresponding with friends or business men of any kind to give them some distinction or other in their address so as they could be identified by the post master when delivering mail. For instance there are a number of McLean's, McDonald's, McDougall's, &c., of the same name and it would be an easy matter for the post master to distinguish them if this was attended to.

Lord Minto's term as Governor-General has been extended from Nov. 1903 to Nov. 1904, one year longer than usual.

Who said the binder twine trade of Canada has been ruined by free trade? True, the Yankees played sharp by putting an export charge on twine from the Philippines, but the Government has met that with a bounty and now our factories sell twine in the United States. Within two weeks, one factory, the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company, has sold 400 tons in Chicago.—Hamilton Times.
