> The Poultry Trade of Canada. Profitable and Increasing.

Within the last few years the con sumption of chickens has increased in Canada: the price realized for plump chickens has advanced. Both the increase in consumption and advance in price are due to the business of crate fattening ckickens. The chickens that realize the highest market price to-day are chickens that are fatted and prepared for market in accordance with the directions issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Chickens from the Ontario and Quebec Illustration Stations were sold a few days ago to Mr Henry Gatehouse for twelve cts. per pound, live weight; and to the Canadian Produce Co., Toronto, Ont., for eleven ets. per pound live weight. These are profitable prices that can be obtained by any farmer shipping the same quality of chickens to Montreal or Tcronto.

Killing Market Chickens. The method of killing the ckicken by dislocating its neck is different from the old-tashioned way of wringing or twisting the neck. When the chickens neck is dislocated, and the head is pulled from the neck in the manner described in the bulletin "Profitable Poultry Farming," the loose, unbroken skin of the neck forms a sack into which the blood flows. The body of the chicken is as well drained of blood as if the head were cut off with an axe: the market appearance of the chicken is improved by killing by dislocation: the flesh of the chicken is more juicy and edible. On the contrary, when ckickens are killed by twisting the neck, death results mainly from strangulation. The body of the chicken is not freed from blood on account of there being no space in the neck into which the blood can flow. The appearance of the flesh of the chicken that has been killed by twisting its neck is reddish and blood can be plainly noted and 47, Con. 3, S. D. R., Bentinck, conin it.
