ITALY OBJECT.

Sign Wireless Proctocol.

PROVISIONS.

The protocola dopttelegraphy has been nited States, Ger-Spain, France, and by Great Britain or cipal provisions are ons shall be cons at sea, regardless system carried by the publication of nations of all sysbe the duty of all to forward reports d requests for asversal system of stroduced. The sero regulated that will disturb each possible.

from the United eric Congress stats, however, gave a to the principles te majority of their sentatives dissentty of the concluaffirmed that no ons were guaranpresentatives suplishmen, declaring not repudiate its gnor Marconi. They at they would try modify his views accordance with prity of the delevention. The Brieed to submit the conference to their xpressed doubt as of the English posconcede equal ems, owing to the ireless systems in NGED BY SEA. Chalk Cliffs at gate.

-Ramsgate visita fine opportunity e wrought to Briad especially of obess of a splendid rk of sea defence. t, on which Ramsdy illustrates the ruthbessly taking al and giving back is not many hun-Chanet was really ed to sail to Loneat channel from r instead of round Margate. But the estuary and put wich, which, 400 scaport, a mile and. it cut and washed the northern side, the rate of two present time. sea has been eatgate's promenade, or twelve years odily 600 feet of twelve to twenty is considered that nty to eighty feet amount of erosion derstood.

E IN SUABIA. in Highlands-

From Ailment.

An alarming eptophthalmia is ragn, in the Suabian ase broke out in ered, and racidly le village, which of 3,600 inhabitwase contained one lightest communi-

her are now sui-

R IN LONDON.

CYcars.

in Two Degrees of

-According to the came to an end lay proved one of degrees Fahrenhis being only two ne highest point cury this year. y a few days ago fell to within an te of the freezing

degree, and duril cases of heat at the Metro-

CAN COTTON.

pment of the Ine Interior.

-A despritch from est Afres, reorta en a wonderfui decotton-growing inerior. It has been to put on extra to bring the large

The Englishman's idea of breakfast is a healthy one. Toast, jam and tea-a chop mebbe-just enough food for the stomach to assimilate properly—the warmth of the tea to draw the blood to the stomach and assist digestion. Blue Ribbon Tea is the daintiest and crispiest leaves of the

It is pure tea—free of tannin—appetizing and nutritious. Try the Red Label Brand for your breakfast.

Blue Ribbon Ceylon Tea.

Black, Mixed Ceylon Green

40c. should be

Red Label

The Rose and Lily Dagger

A TALE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AND WOMAN'S PERFIDY & & &

とうしょうしょう とうしょうしょうしゅうしょうしょうしょう しょうしょうしょうし When he had passed Lady Blanche, of and produced. made a movement toward the gate, "Not yet! He has stopped, and is seeming carefulness and curiosity, she whispered. CHAPTER XXXI.

by the hedge and cross the field."

The whole country was in a blaze of excitement which seemed to in- clerk of the court without a word, crease as the days passed, carrying however and resumed his seat with- to have left him !" with them the various phases of the out glancing at the marquis. great murder case; and not only the county, but it might be said the whole kingdom.

An immense crowd had collected outside the Town Hall to learn the verdict of the coroner's jury, and when it was known that it was one of "Willful Murder against Ernest Edwynd, Marquis of Nairne," a kind of thrill ran through the crowd, and each man turned and looked at his neighbor, as who should say,

"After this the sky falls!" The examination before the Mag-1strate had resulted in the committal of the accused for trial, and in Gerald to return to the rectorythe opinion of many old and experi where he was to stay during the pro- Perhaps the marquis will help me?" enced men the evidence which gress of the case-and she ran into Saunders had produced before Sir Ed- the hall to meet him with the mo- started at once for the prison. mund and his fellow magistrates mentous question on her lips; but The marquis was lying on his pallet,

In the midst of the excitement, at face. times almost amounting to a kind of | their heads and remain cool. One was Saunders, who went on his way as calmly and coolly and deliberately as if he were playing a game of chess, rather than putting in motion the machinery which might propel a peer of the realm to a shameful death. The authorities at Scotland Yard had left the case in his hands with every confidence, and he was conducting it with, at any rate, every indication of presence of mind | him. and acumen. He had produced at the examination just sufficient evi- think him guilty! You cannot!" dence to render a committal un-

the accused and the murdered man. Sir Edmund had noticed this, and, remembering what Saunders had stated in the library at The Grange, Gerald?" had felt surprised; but though a vain and pompous man, he was rather a sensible magistrate, and held his tongue, even when a fellow magistrate remarked:

"I do not see any object in-any motive for the crime. Why should Lord Nairne kill this unfortunate gentleman?"

"That may come out later, sir," responded the counsel for the prosecution, after a glance at Saunders, who sat with his walking stick pressed against his thin lips. The other man, who kept his head | thought it best to let him rest after was Gerald Locke. Not all he has gone through this mornexamination had he ing." any clear idea of the evidence against the marquis, but even when it was set forth with all the terrible distinctness of the rough, honest keeper, and the plain. matter-of-fact Saunders and his fellow constable, Gerald kept his composure.

Once only had he given a sudden start of surprise, and that was when the rose and hily dagger was spoken

HEALTHY, HAPPY BABIES. Every mother most earnestly desires to see her little ones hearty, rosy and full of life. The hot weather, however, is a time of danger to all little ones, and at the beside us, where we sat, you know, very first symptom of uneasiness or illness, Baby's Own Tablets should be given. It is easier to rang, we got up, and I forgot it and responded: prevent illness than to cure it, and an occasional dose of Baby's Own Tablets will keep little ones healthy and happy. If sickness next evening, I think-and went to ing crushed and utterly dispirited. does come, there is no other medi- look for it, for I knew it was valucine will so quickly cure the minor able, and that we ought to have put ills of babyhood and childhood-and it back in the glass case. But it to pieces, and Gerald had responded, you have a guarantee that it con- | was not there, nor in the case." tains no oplate or poisonous stuff. "You are sure?" he asked quickly, Mrs. John Nall, Petersburg, Ont., his eyes suddenly keen. says: "I have used Baby's Owa Tablets, and find them a superior remedy for troubles of the stomach and bowels. From my own experience, I can highly recommend the Tablets to other mothers." Mothers should always keep these tablets in the house, ready for any emergency. Sold by medicine dealers or sent postpaid at 25

Williams' Medicine Cc., Brockville,

"Let me see that, if you please," he said, and he looked at it with waiting and listening. Creep along but he recognized it in a moment. It was he himself who had taken it from the cabinet of which the marquis had given him the key, on the day before the murder!

He handed the dagger back to the "That's a clever young fellow, that Locke," said the prosecuting counsel. "He's young to have so big a case, but I've seen some of these young wet eyes. 'uns come out very strong sometimes, of yours, Saunders."

"Yes, sir," said Saunders concisely; come and stand by his side." he was just as reticient with the "Yes, the case is very strong."

May was anxiously waiting for was already strong enough to place there was no need to frame it, for but he was not asleep, and raised the rope round the marquis' neck she read the answer in his grave his head on his hand. Gerald Locke > sent him for trial." "Oh, Gerald," she gasped, hiding her face against his breast, and shuddering. "How could they?" "They could do nothing else, May," beside the bed he said gravely. She raised her head and looked at

"But you? Ah, I see you do not "No," he said slowly. "I do not becould do no other."

murmured in an awed whisper. "What seat in the hall?" said Gerald Locke, King-then Prince of Wales-who did he say-do? How did he look, looking at him steadily.

He shook his head. rally calm. At times I don't think he ders' evidence, Gerald?" was even listening to the evidence and the questions, for I spoke to him said Gerald slowly, still watching the once to ask him something, and he haggard face, so noble in its calmlooked up at me-they let him sit be- noss and composure. side me at the solicitor's table—as if his thoughts were far away. I am going to see him in an hour's time. I

May shuddered. "And worse still has to come, hasn't it, Gerald?" she whispered. "Yes," he said, "much worse. The trial will be dreadful" He was silent a moment, then he said suddenly "May, do you remember what you did with that dagger you and I took from the case in the hall?"

"The dagger! You don't mean-oh, "Hush!" he said, soothing her Yes, dear, the deed was done with that. Hush, hush; be calm, and try

"I do remember!" she answered, clinging to him. "I put it on the seat and it fell down; I meant to pick it up, but I forgot it. And when the beil left it lying there."

"Well?" he said. "I remembered it afterward-the

"Quite sure!" May insisted. "I am | understood. certain of it, because I turned over all the things, thinking that you paper, the accused had intended to might have put it back. Did you?" | convey to Gerald his determination "No," he said, slowly, thoughtfully, that Elaine should not be sought for "I did not. I forgot it completely, and brought forward. Will you remember, keep in your memory, everything that happened cents a box, by writing the Dr. with the dagger?" "Yes," she said. "But-oh, Gerald," guilty.

to save, the marquis?" She panted and clung to him, hiding her eyes for a moment, then she looked up bravely. repeat it, dearest?" She clung to him in silence for a moment, then she said in a whisper: "Gerald, where is Elaine?" He looked at her as if she had struck upon the line of his own anxlous thoughts.

"Elaine?" he said guardedly. "Yes. I cannot help thinking of her every minute in the day. To think that she should have been engaged to him only a few days ago, and that now-now that he is in this fearful trouble-she should have left him! There is some mystery, some strange, awful mystery, about it all. It is so unlike Elaine! You don't know her as well, or love her as .I do, Gerald, or you would understand how I feel. Elaine would give her life to save that of a friend-yes, indeed she would :-- and he was more than her friend, remember! He was her lover, her lover! And I know she loved thought that she must have known, ing and badgering his brains, toThe drain, by taking away the free large amounts of water evaporate she ran away. Can no one find her? Gerald, she must be found!"

Gerald Locke looked steadily out of the window without replying, and went on in an awed whisper.

He took a piece of paper from his pocket and gave it to her, and she read it. "E-- D-- Come back to B-- at once. He is in great peril." "That goes in all the morning papers to-morrow," he said. "Yes, May, you are right. Elaine did know! I am sure of that; but why she fled I cannot even guess--" He paused. "Unless?" breathed May.

"Unless she believed him guilty!" he answered almost inaudibly. May looked at him almost indig-"Oh, Garald!" she exclaimed. "You

"Then why has she gone-disappeared?" he said quietly. May looked at him with brave and unwavering confidence shining in her "I can't tell, I can't even imagine, and I think he'll make a hit over this and I have tried! But I know that Telegraph, came down the steps, business; but he has got his work you are wrong. Gerald, Elaine knows thrusting the paper in his pocket, cut out for him with this evidence | nothing of the - the murder; and when she does, that moment she will "Then she will soon know!" he great counsel as with everybody else. | said. "She must see it in the papers -they are full of it. But I will not trust to that. I will insert this advertisement, employ a detective, half He put on his hat as he spoke, and entered.

"Yes, dear," he said, putting his "I am taking a rest," he said, quietfrenzy, two men alone seemed to keep arm round her and drawing her into ly, and with a faint smile. "Have the little breakfast-room, from the you come to throw up the case, or window of which she had been anxi- are you still determined to defend says M. A. P., there is a keen interously watching for him. "They have the man whom everybody by this ost just now in the operation about time is calling a murderer?" Gerald Locke did not think it necessary to reply to this bantering question, but he drew the chair up be not only the largest diamond noticed the guarded reply. "But Dom Pedro diamond, about which avoidable, and he had carefully kept lieve him to be guilty; but if I had than you have learned? They have years ago. When the unfortunate back any mention of one name— been on the bench I should have had already proved me guilty, have they come from Grazil his great diamond soon of Kreidl, who, as he states, carbear sounds — Washington Post. "I want to know who picked up the came into the private market. An at-

"Are you rested enough to answer a few questions, marquis?" he said gravely.

"He said nothing, and he looked "Who else but I could have done the well-known f.nancier, Mr. Jacobs,

-well, it is hard to tell you so?" he replied. "It is proved that of Simla and Calcutta (the original, just how he looked. White, and ill, 'twas in my possession the night of by the way, of Marion Crawford's and haggard, but calm, unnatu- the murder. You have heard Saun-"You found it behind the seat?

The marquis did not answer. Gerald Locke drew a little breath

"I am answered," he said. "And now for my second question. Where is Miss Delaine? The marquis frowned and his lips tightened.

"I do not know," he replied. Gerald Locke took the advertisement from his pocket, and held it tore it across and across, and held realized that there would probably, the fragments in his closed hand. Gerald Locke sprang to his feet, and ine in Hyderabad the following sea-

Then the marquis unlocked his tightly-closed lips. "You understand?" he said; and Gerald Locke, white and breathless,

"Yes, I understand." CHAPTER XXXII. Gerald Locke left the prison feel-"You understand!"the marquis had said, as he tore the advertisement

But as he left the prison, walking slowly and with downcast head, he asked himself what it was that he By the destruction of that piece of

There could be only one reason for his refusal to seek her, for send-and her breath came quickly, "you Elaine must be in possession of some street to consuit a destist." Dr. Chase's Norva

-you will not want me to go into the court, to—to give evidence?" from her, and used as evidence He pressed her to him, and looked against him. Perhaps he had confessdown at the white, fearful little ed to her. Perhaps she had seen something, some trace of the crime. "And what if I should, May? You At any rate, she must be cognizant would do as much to help, perhaps of his guilt, and it was because of this knowledge she was keeping out of the way. What should he do? He was working in the dark. It would be better for him, better for the marquis him-"Yes, I would! You know I would self, if he would confide in Gerald, But—but, Gerald, you think that—" and leave him free to seize on any chance of saving him. But the marting it is probable that in course of fertility out of much which remains. where we dropped it, committed the Gerald knew that the silence which murder, May. Hush," for she had ut- the marquis had observed would be tered a low cry. "It is only to you maintained. He was the kind of man of our level or moderately sloping scent and carrying the fertilizing death sentence without a word if he thought that word would drag Elaine, the woman he loved, into the

As he waiked along he thought that | tion, and the value of the land | zation of heavy soils. It is manhe would disregard the marquis' implied injunction, and commence a which every landowner must de- be pulverized. More water is held search for Elaine; but then, again, cide for himself, he feared that if he did so, and she were to be produced in court, her knowledge of the crime would be dragged from her unwilling lips by the clever counsel for the prosecution. That terrible cross-examination! roots have an extensive pasture, compactly there is no space left He had looked on at it so often and seen the reluctant witness compelled, best advantage. In well drained most subsoils, certainly in all he knew, and sometimes more.

must be kept out of the case. And still to a great depth; from two to subsoils are rendered more retenthe question remained unanswered; four feet is quite usual, and some tive of moisture by having the parwhat was he, Gerald, to do? Was he plants, such as lucerne, have been ticles of which they are composed to remain completely powerless, known to send their roots as far separated from one another-in a handcuffed and fettered by the mar- as thirty feet. No roots, except word, by pulverization. This inquis' tacit acknowledgment of his those of aquatic plants, will grow creased capacity to contain guilt?

May anxiously, almost impatiently, to face loving, tender-hearted May ground water, so that the roots The plants in a dry time send with this terrible dilemma crush- are able to penetrate to their their rootlets throughout the soil, "Do you think she-she knew, ing the ille out of him. He turned normal depth, and furnishes con- and flourish in the moisture thus Gerald? Now and again I have away from the road leading to the ditions favorable to the greatest stored up for their time of need.

he lethought him that he had not soil. The soil may be said to breathe warm dry soils, or soils which permit yet visited the scene of the mur- through the drain, for there is a con- of a free circulation of air, but it has der, and though he could foresee no tinuous movement of air to and fro, little effect on a saturated soil. possible advantage in going there, up and down, caused by vibrations Warmth is essential to the germinahe resolved to make his way to the in the pressure of the atmosphere. tion of seeds and the proper growth bridge—the bridge round which a When the soil is comparatively dry of plants. Farmers who are cultivate from morn to night since the announcement of the murder.

The grounds seemed strangely deserted. There were no gardeners at work-they were discussing their master's fate up at the inn. A solitary groom moodily exercising a horse-the marquis' favorite! - was the only human being in sight; and as he came in view of the Castle do not know! If she had believed he saw that the blinds had been pullthat, nothing would have induced her ed down. It had all the appearance of a house of death. And only a few days since it had been so full of life and happiness.

> As he passed in front of the marble steps leading to the terrace, Mr. Ingram, who was standing on the lars of the murder in the London and accosted Gerald with subdued eagerness.

"Anything fresh, sir?" he asked. Gerald shook his head. "No," he said, gravely. Ingram shook his head, and sighed. "Most dreadful case, Mr. Locke," he

ROMANCE OF A DIAMOND.

The Excelsior Claimed to be the

(To be continued.)

Largest South African Diamond. In the circle whose members make a living out of dealing in diamonds, to be performed at Amsterdam on the "Excelsior," which is claimed to found in South Africa, but the largest stone of its kind in the world. So it "I am rested enough to answer," spondent, an appropriate moment to said the marquis, and Gerald Locke recall the romantic history of the what more can you want to know | there was so much excitement a few "And-and he, the marquis?" she dagger May and I left behind the tempt was made to sell it to the did not like to have anything to do The marquis' eyes did not droop or with the painful business. Then the attention was turned to India, where

"Mr. Isaac") took the matter in hand. Eventually Jacobs arranged the sale of the stone to the Nizam of Hyderabad for 46 lakhs, which, if the rupoe were at its nominal value, represents a sum of £460,000. The N zam deposited 23 lakhs with the bank which held possession of the diamond, the deal having been carried out by means of a glass replica and the expert description given by Mr.

deal and a diamond, and one happened here, the interruption coming from a slip of an Irish boy, Sir Dennis Fitzpatrick, at that time Eritish resident at the ancient court of Hyderabad. It is the business of the "Can you think of anything more | British resident in a native state to likely to attract her attention than advise-and tacitly control-the chief of the state; and Sir Dennis went The marquis read it, then slowly to the Nizam, and asked him if he on the general prospects, be a famhis starving subjects would do to him if they knew he had squandered 46 lakhs on another diamond for his diplomatic affairs. Shuddering at the fering. thought of scimitars at his throat or hand-bombs flung up into his howdah, the alarmed Nizam sent off at only partially paralyzed, and to those to benefit all who use it. once to Jacobs to quash the bargain. | who are slowly but surely developing Guite naturally the latter refused to the symptoms which indicate the bu cast off thus peremptorily, but a few days afterward he took steamer away irom Calcutta. This raised an | would suggest the advisability of usalarm, on account of the 23 lakhs ing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the, and anyone who regularly and perdeposited, and Jacobs was arrested great food cure for diseases of the before the vessel got clear in the nerves. Hooghly. After a long trial, in which all the bar leaders in India were en- awake nights, suffer from indiges- blood builder. gaged, the matter was settled by tion and headache, feel drowsy af-Jacobs returning the 23 lakhs to the ter meals, and losing energy, ambi- while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

"Does your typewriter need rememory, everything that happened ing ner away-for Gerald saw that pairs?" asked the meandering tinker centrate the mind, forgetful and absentance in connection she had been sent away-and that as he entered the office. boss. "She just went across the tion to the nervec.

ABOUT UNDERDRAINING

Its Many Benefits Described for the Farmers' Benefit.

Many reasons may easily be ad- | rain cannot pass directly downward, duced to show that Nature has her- as explained above, but runs away time, as fand becomes more valu- But with proper drainage, the rain is able, it will be found advisable to at once absorbed, and passes downlands that are worthy of cultiva- elements to the roots of the plants, tion. The question whether it will while the surplus moisture runs pay to drain a given area depends through the drains. on the value of the land before Again, drainage is absolutely drainage, the cost of the opera- necessary for the proper pulveriwhen drained. This is a question lifest that a wet soil can never

At the outset it may be pointed by a compact and close one. Watout that drainage deepens the er is held in the soil between the soil, and so affords greater room minute particles of earth, and if for the roots of plants. Unless its these particles be pressed together as it were, no plant can make use between them for water. This comsoils, the roots of most cultivated those through which water does No! The marquis was right. Elaine crops spread themselves widely and not readily pass. Hence, all these in stagnant water. Proper drain- moisture by attraction is the He felt that it would be impossible age lowers the surface of the greatest security against drought. water that occupies the pores of the from their surfaces, never become As he entered by the west gate, soil, allows air to pass through the warm. The sun has great power to there is a great deal of air in its ing what is known as a "cold" soil pores. Then, when a rain comes, it will be the first to concede the im-fills the upper end of these pores, portance of this fact. and if there is no outlet for the air Other advantages of under-drainbelow, it is imprisoned and exert- ing may be mentioned, such as the ing a backward pressure on the longer season of crop growth consewater above, prevents it from enter- quent on the earlier seeing of draining the soil more than an inch or ed land; the comparative freedom of two. It may happen, therefore, that fall wheat and clover from freezing in an undrained soil a heavy sum- out or winter killing; the absence of mer shower is forced to run off the open drains, which are a decided surface, while the land below the nuisance in the cultivation of the first inch is as dry as ever. This is land and the harvesting of the crop; one illustration of the truth of the and, last of all, the removal from the apparently contradictory statement soil of those soluble salts formed by that underdraining is a safeguard the decay of rock and organic matagainst drought.

terrace reading the latest particu- to grass, is liable to great loss by causes the condition known as "althis surface washing during the kali land." heavy rains in spring and fall. If the | Department of Agriculture, Ota land has not sufficient drainage the tawa, Commissioners' Branch.

DO FISHES HEAR?

The Wise Men Think That Most of

"Hearing and Allied Senses in of Prof. G. H. Parker, professor of Government laboratory at Wood's cided to issue a bulletin on the subject for the benefit of persons in-this paper is that in it Dr. Parker with the view of testing the powers of hearing in the gold fish in 1895. This species was chosen because of the ease with which it and, further, because it is one of those fishes that have long been reputed to come at the sound of a periments, Kreidi (1895) concluded that normal gold fish never responded to sounds produced either could be kept in the laboratory,

Them Only Sound.

ter, which cannot be used by plants All sloping land, unless laid down and the presence of which in the soil gave no response to the sound of a tuning fork or a vibrating rod, even when these were in contact with the water, though the fishes responded at once to such light shocks as tapping the aquarium, etc., or even clapby a pulverized and open soil than ping the hands vigorously in the air. Fishes" is the title of the latest To test whether these responses bulletin issued by the United States were dependent upon the auditory Fish Commission, which is the work nerves Kreidl removed these nerves and the attached ear sacs from a number of individuals, and after zoology in Harvard University. The poisoning them with strychnine, subbuiletin is a result of investigations | jected them to stimulation by sound. carried out by the doctor at the In all cases they were found to respond precisely as the poisoned animals with ears did. Kreidl therefore Hall, Mass, which proved of such in- concluded that gold fishes do not terest that the Fish Commission de- hear by the so-called ear, but that they react to sound waves by means of an especially developed cutaneous sense, or, to put it in other terested in ichthyo.ogy and piscical- words, the gold fish feels sound but ture. The most striking feature of does not hear it. Reviewing his experiments in great has revived the old qustion as to detail, Dr. Parker concludes finally may be, writes my Indian corre- whether fish "hear" or "feel" sound, that the mackerel, manhaden and a question that has lain dormant a number of other fish are not ever since 1895, and only lately only possessed of auditory faculrevived through certain investiga- | ties and organs, but they are able tions made by the learned Harvard to hear and not to feel sounds, al-

Chile Sauce.

Use ripe tomatoes. To each 18 allow 2 1-2 cupfuls of vinegar, 1 cupful of sugar, chopped green peppers enough to make 1 cupful, 3 onions belk After an extended series of ex- chopped fine, 2 tablespoonfuls of mixed ground spices, cloves, allspice, and cinnamon. Boil all together unin the air or in the water, though | til a rich sauce is formed, and the they do react to the shock of a flavors are so well blended that no sudden blow given to the cover of one is especially distinguished from the aquarium. Individuals rendered the rest. Pack in small jars and abnormally sensitive by strychnine store in a cool place.

acobs. But there's many a slip between a With Paralysis ried out a series of experiments hear sounds.-Washington Post.

Who Could Now be Well Had They but Known of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

the two men looked into each other's son, and if he could imagine what who is paralyzed can be cured by ataxia. It does not ease by inducusing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for ing unconsciousness and unnatural sleep. It does not deaden the many are beyond the reach of any nerves as does opiates and narcoturban. Seldom had such a forcible medical treatment, and must finish ties. But, on the other hand, by asargument been used in official or their days in helplessness and suf- sisting nature and supplying the ele-

> It is rather to those who are approach ot such ailments that we

Nizam and receiving £5,000 to cover tion and courage, it is time to pay you can prove that new, firm flest

We do not claim that every one | prevents paralysis and locomotor ments from which are formed new blood and nerve force, effects thorough and lasting cure and is bound Seldom, if ever, has any medicine secured such hearty endorsement of physicians and people alike. cures which it has brought about have often been most extraordinary. sistently uses this great food cure is sure to find it of inestimable When you find yourself lying value as a nerve restorative and attention to the nerves. You may and muscular tissue are being added find yourself irritable at times, wor- to the body, 50 cents a box, six ried over little things, unable to con- boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or sentminded. disheartened and dis- onto. To protect you against imimust be because—the Marquis was "It would seem so," replied the couraged. Better give come attent tations the portric and signature