DUTIES OF A MAID OF HONOR

**************** varied considerably, but those under the impression that the post is a dnecure may abandon this mistaken idea at once. As a matter of fact, a maid of honor goes on duty as soon as her Majesty arises, and takes it in turn until she retires at 11.30 or 12 o'clock, says London Tit-Bits. Queen Alexandra is content with four maids of honor, whereas the iate queen had eight. They are the Honorables Dorothy and Violet Vivian, Sylvia Edwardes and Mary Dyke. It is customary for the daughters of peers to be appointed to the post, but should they have no title they are permitted to adopt the prefix of honorable. The maids of honor are under the mistress of robes who is at present the Duchess of Buccleuch, and for their services they receive a salary of £300 a year. If they marry during their tenancy of the position they are given a ant of the Medicis of Italy prodowry of £1000 by the Queen, provided they have previously obtained her majesty's approval of the match.

It would be impossible for any one to become a maid of honor who had not received a first-class education, for her duties are extremely varied. After breakfast Queen Alexandra, when at Sandringham, pany with one of her maids, after brow and the throat. which she usually attends to her Truly when I entered 49, Eaton one of her maids to be in attendance required, although the queen's private secretary is also present. This done, she will either go for a drive or sit in the grounds while a maid of honor reads to her from the English, French or German newspapers and magazines.

During the afternoon there may be some state function to attend, and, bowever trivial it may be, it is necessary for at least two of the Queen's maids of honor must be prepared to appear at the meal and sing or play to the guests afterward. All the maids are very accomplished musicians, and good horsewomen, while at least two of them have exhibited undoubted talent as amateur actresses.
