In the Millinery Department

Our Millinery has long had a reputation for correct exclusiveness unapproached by any other store making pretences to non-extravagance. You may pay up to $15 for a hat here, but you're paying for art and not for fancifulness when you buy an expensive hat at the Store. We can give you beautiful Paris-modelled hats, the work of our own clever Milliners, at $5 to $10. We can give you pretty, tastefully trimmed hats for $2.50. And at every price you find good taste, beauty and harmony.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

Parliament having decided by a majority of 55 to go on with the guarantee of the new G. T. P. contract, a broader view is commencing to be taken of it, seeing there is no chance of propounding further modifications. That is, in some quarters, for it seems hopeless to expect papers of a certain stripe to speak the matter fairly. Some Conservative papers, such as the World and the News, rise above mere partisanship and condemn the Motion on its merits, though having their fling at various features.

The News, in a recent editorial, points out several objectionable details such as too much latitude allowed the promoters, the pledging of the country to building the Quebec-Abitibi portion, not knowing the character of the country, condemn the Motion on its merits, promising running rights, after expiry of 50 year lease, and several other things which are fairly debatable.

Having done this it closes with a rosy view of the future. At the very outset we have set out the advantages of the project in general, and we are constrained to give a portion of it; every Canadian spirit must expand as the possibilities are grasped.

The general project presents a remarkable contrast to the tortuous complexity of the details. At the very outset it ensures to our country a new, simple and immensely important advantage of a second link between the East and the West. Our whole scheme of national existence may depend on our success in drawing East and West together. The new railway will more than double our means of doing this; the more so because it should be one of the best lines of communication on the continent.

New areas of stupendous size and of incalculable possibilities will be opened for development. The Western Division will quarter across a region which has room for a million farms. Every mile of the main line will be in rich farming country, now almost empty; moreover, feed-stuffs can be driven into uncounted districts, which need but a railway to draw settlers. Further west, a new Province will be developed in British Columbia. The Eastern Division will give access to an enormous and practically unexplored wooded plain, north of the height of land in Ontario and Quebec. It will be singular if that region fails to have any resources of any kind, and whatever resources it may possess must, by its sheer extent be of considerable value. It may prove to have great industrial and agricultural value, and in that event the national gain will be enormous. Aside from the commercial stimulus, the growth of a new Canadian community on our northern plain will give a depth to the country, and possibly will establish a touch with the West which will be of priceless value in the development of our national consciousness. Further, the building of the Eastern Division will make possible the exploiting of Hudson's Bay, with all the possibilities involved in that line of development.

We will gain a new footing on the Pacific, and the Pacific is the ocean of the future. A new belt of settlement across British Columbia, a new support on our western seaboard, a new river of international trade across our country, a new avenue for the placing of our wares in the awakening Orient—such are some of the promises of the project to send the Grand Trunk across the plains and the mountains to the coast. The senior railway of Eastern Canada will be in touch with the markets of Asia and Australasia."
