GO MAD FROM MONOTONY. Lighthouse-keepers Often Suffer From the Inevitable Isolation. People who read books—and all do in this day—will recall Kipling's story of the lonely lightkeeper who became mad from the monotony of his situation...

Minard's Linament Cures Colds, etc. The esteemed New York Sun having demonstrated to its own satisfaction that Col. Roosevelt's charge up San Juan Hill was away from the scene of the fighting; the Wood inquiry having developed testimony that the "Doc" was in the rear at Santiago when according to his own testimony he was at the front; the Kansas text-book commissioner having decided that "unston" never swam the Bag River, to get together with sundry other triumphs of iconoclasm, the next thing in order is to ascertain whether Gen. Joe Wheeler actually climbed a tree on the firing line to locate the enemy. This is an important incident, the historic accuracy of which should be definitely determined.

Advantage of Being a Mute. First Deaf Mute (making signs)—Did your wife complain because you stayed out till after midnight? Second Deaf Mute (chuckling)—Did she? You should have seen her. But when it began to get monotonous I just turned out the light.

This government maintains 1,500 lighthouses, and about 100 of them are isolated.

lated, and communication with the outside world may be interrupted sometimes for months. If a man is taken from the ordinary walks of life, where he mingles with his fellow man, and sent to a lighthouse where no human face is seen except that of the ever-present assistant, and no sound is heard save the roaring of the wind and waves, he has been transferred from normal to most abnormal conditions.

In a remarkably short time keeper and assistant have talked out. Then they begin to wear on each other, and soon they fall quarrelling. Sometimes melancholia attacks one of them, and unless he is speedily relieved his mental balance is disturbed. When the disturbance becomes extreme it takes either a homicidal or suicidal turn, and the unfortunate has to be watched closely and sometimes confined to keep him from doing violence to himself or others.

It is well known that the Minot Ledge light is noted for the number of men who have gone crazy in it, and for that reason is an object of interest to students of mental diseases. It is, as everybody knows, a piece of engineering of the very highest order, being in that respect second only to the famous Eddystone light.

More than a year was consumed in getting a foundation for it, and so high are the tides and so terrific the storms that the entrance to the light is more than forty feet above the water. Then, one above the other come the five rooms occupied by the keepers and used for storage purposes, and finally the watchroom and finally the lantern.

The tower, being circular, and space greatly in demand, naturally everything is made to conform, so that no room shall be lost. Even the beds on which the men sleep are curved. Everything is round. The government has done the best it could to make life there as bearable as possible, and keeps five men stationed there, so that they may go ashore as often as the chance is afforded without detriment to the service.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

NIAGARA IS A HURON WORD. Therefore the Accent Should Be on the Last Syllable but One. "Everybody pronounces Niagara wrong," said a philologist. "The accent of this beautiful Indian word should not be put on the syllable 'ag,' but on the syllable 'ar'—the penult—the one before the last.

"Niagara means 'Hark to the thunder.' Its accent should fall on the penult, because the Indians themselves accent it there, and in practically all our Indian names of places the penult is the accented syllable.

"Think of the Indian names you know. Don't you accent nearly all of them on the syllable before the last? There are, for instance, Toronto, Mississippi, Allegheny, Appalachicola, Narragansett, Tuscaloosa, Saratoga, Conshohocken, Wissahickon and Hochelaga. In all these names the accent is on the penult.

"Niagara is a Huron word, and if you find a Huron you will find that the accent is as he does Saratoga or Tuscaloosa. I don't know how we have fallen into the habit of accenting it wrong."

BREAKING OF A HEART. She sat like a saint in the swaying chair car. With a far-away look in her eyes; Each eye like the ghost of some earth-straying star; (Sing hey! but the drummer was wise!)

The drummer came by with his bright, winning smile. And looked at the maiden with a heart full of joy. The maiden gazed out of the window the while. With a far-away look in her eyes.

He paused with a sigh and a languishing look; (Sing hey! but the drummer was wise!) He lowered her window and bought her a book; Nor minded her chilly replies: "She'll be a school-marm from Massachusetts, though; he likes mother used to make, with a plain fruit filling (as she said, "sweetened all the rule calls for, then shut your eyes and put in some more") that way of building it has its ardent devotees to this day.

Wilson's Fly Pads. Three hundred times cheaper than sticky paper. Oh, the far-away look in her eyes! (Sing hey! but the drummer was wise!) "Wait, surely, kind sir," said the maiden, "but, oh, the far-away look in her eyes!"

OLDEST CLOCK IN ENGLAND.

Erected in 1320 in One of the Towers of Peterborough Cathedral. Peterborough Cathedral has the oldest working clock in England. It was erected about 1320 and is probably the work of a monastic clock maker. It is the only one now known that is wound up over an old wooden wheel. This wheel is about 12 feet in circumference, and the galvanized cable, about 300 feet in length, supports a leaden weight of 3 cwt., which has to be wound up daily.

The clock is said to be of much more primitive construction than that made by Henry de Nick for Charles V. of France in 1570. The clock chamber is in the northwest tower, some 120 feet high, where the sunlight has not penetrated for hundreds of years, and the winding is done by the light of a candle. The gong is the great tenor bell of the cathedral, which weighs 32 cwt., and it is struck hourly by an 80-pound hammer. The gong and the striking parts of the clock are some yards apart, communication being by a slender wire. The clock has no dial, the great tenor bell of the cathedral, which weighs 32 cwt., and it is struck hourly by an 80-pound hammer.

RAINY RIVER MAN HAD TROUBLES. THH Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured his Kidneys.

Then his Rheumatism and all Pains Vanished once and for all—His Case only one of many. Barwick, Ont., June 20.—(Special.)—THH Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Rheumatism, or any other disease resulting from disordered Kidneys is the experience of many of the settlers in this Rainy River country. The case of William John Dixon, a settler in this place, is a fair sample of the work the great Canadian Kidney Remedy is doing.

"I had Rheumatism so bad I had to use crutches to walk. I had pains in my back and right hip and I had no comfort in sleeping. "I could do no more than dress or undress myself for nearly two months. I could not lace my right shoe. My brother advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I did so. After taking three boxes I could walk around like the other boys, and do my work. Six boxes cured me completely.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure cure for sick Kidneys. Sick Kidneys are the cause of nine-tenths of the ills the human family suffer from.

FROZEN RESERVOIRS. New Plan in Montana in Connection With Irrigation.

A travelling man recently returned from a trip through Montana tells of a new method of sawing for storing water under irrigation purposes. This consists of nothing more nor less than freezing the water until it is wanted. As soon as the weather becomes such as to melt this ice it is fit for the operations requiring the water. The plan, which is so far in the nature of an experiment, consist in making a series of shallow basins on the slope of a hill in such locations that, when water is plentiful they may be filled, each of those below the average receiving successively the overflow from the one above it.

Once frozen, the ice in these shallow reservoirs is there until the thaw sets in, when it melts so slowly as to keep up a supply of moisture sufficient for the germination and growth of the early crops. This unique method has been tried so far only in the vicinity of D. L. N. but it appears to be successful and is to be given a trial in several other favorable localities.

The Plant He Wanted. Tripp recently bought a piano, but ried it as soon as his wife and all the children began learning to play. The other evening Mrs. Tripp read in a music journal that it is a good idea to keep a plant or two in the room with a piano, to prevent the sounding board from becoming too dry.

"What kind of plant do you think would be best?" she asked her husband. "Well," said he, "if you leave it to me, I think a boiler-making plant would be about the right sort."

STEAMER RAMS AN ICEBERG. Able to Make Port, However, After a Run of Thirty-six Hours.

The most remarkable case on record of an iceberg collision is that of the Guion liner Arizona, in 1879. She was then the greyhound of the Atlantic and the largest ship afloat—5,750 tons—except the Great Eastern. Leaving New York in November for Liverpool with 500 souls on board, she was cruising across the Banks, with fair weather, but dark, when near midnight, about 250 miles east of St. John's, she rammed a monster ice island at full speed—eighteen knots. Terrific was the impact and indescribable the alarm.

The passengers flung themselves from their berths, made for the deck as they stood, though some were injured as they fell, and the calls of these for help, added to the shrieks of the frozen mob of half-men and women who charged for the boats, made up a pandemonium. Wild cries arose that the ship was sinking, for she had settled by the head, and with piteous appeals and despairing exclamations, the passengers urged the boats over, that they might escape the death that they thought inevitable.

But the crew were well in hand, no officers maintained order, and a hurried examination being made, the forward bulkhead was seen to be safe. The welcome word was passed along that the ship, though sorely stricken, would still float until she could make a harbor. The vast white terror had lain across her course, stretching so far each way that who could describe it was too late to alter the helm. Its giant shape filled the foreground, towering high above the masts, grim and gaunt and ghastly, immovable as the adamantine buttress of a frowning seaboard, while the liner lurched and staggered like a wounded lion in agony as her engines slowly drew her back from the rampart against which she had flung herself.

She was headed for St. John's at top speed, so as not to strain the bulkhead so much, and arrived there thirty-six hours later. Her deck and forepart were veined with great fragments of ice, weighing over 200 tons in all, shattered from the berg when she struck, being so wedged into the fractures and gaps as to make it unwise to start them until she was docked. The only population of St. John's lined the water front to witness her arrival.—McClure's Magazine.

WHEN ROYALTY IS ENTERTAINED. In entertaining royalty many restrictions must be observed. One of the strangest of these unwritten laws is that which forbids the use of finger bowls at dinner for any of the guests except the royal ones. This custom dates from the early days of the Georges, when the nobles were divided in their allegiance between the reigning house of Hanover, and the exiled Stuarts. To many of these nobles allegiance to the Stuarts was an avowed and often the outward acts of allegiance to the reigning sovereign were perverted into treasonable acts of homage to the exiles. No dinner was complete if the least toast to "the King" in those days, to evade which they were prepared punishable even with death and loss of titles and estates. The Jacobites, however, discovered a way to avoid this penalty without sacrificing their loyalty. Holding the wine glass over the finger bowl, they were able to give such a "over the water." This simple ruse was soon discovered and the use of finger bowls was forbidden.

Minard's Linament Cures Disemper. DOG DIED OF BROKEN HEART. Sent Away From Kind Family, He Grieved to Death.

At the Dog Show to be held at St. Hartin's Gren there will be exhibited a young St. Bernard dog that is expected to distinguish himself in the way of blue ribbons. It was the intention to also exhibit the dog's sire, which has taken blue ribbons at former shows. This has been impossible, as news of the poor dog's death has just reached his former owner. He simply died of a broken heart. Here, his owner, who lives out on the Main Line, made the dog feel like one of the family. The intelligent creature loved every member of the family, especially the children, and knew every friend and never failed to distinguish between delivery man and his neighbor. He seemed to take a pride in going to shows and to understand and like the honor and admiration heaped upon him. So when he was boxed up to be sent to Virginia, where the man who bought him lived, he barked with joy. "Poor dog!" The family grieved. The children wept, constantly reminding of their beautiful pet. Something over a month had passed, and they were thinking of trying to buy back the pet they missed so much when they received a letter with a Virginia postmark. It was to the effect that the St. Bernard dog had mourned himself to death. Lonely and refusing to eat or to be comforted he had at last died.

He Had Noted It. "That was a great sermon you preached this morning," said the old warden, "and it was well timed, too." "Yes," rejoined the parson with a deep sigh. "I noticed that."

"Noticed what?" asked the puzzled warden. "That several of the congregation looked at their watches frequently," answered the good man, with another deep sigh. An ounce of smiles is worth a ton of frowns.

Wilson's Fly Pads; the original and only genuine. Avoid cheap imitations. A PERSIAN PESSIMIST'S WHINE. Mr. Richard T. Gotthel, of Columbia University, who has a broad knowledge of oriental tales and proverbs, says the New York Tribune, was condemning pessimism one day at Columbia.

"Pessimism," he said, "is as old as the hills. Mankind has always regarded it and has always derided it." "There is a Persian story about a pessimist. That story is so old that no date can be assigned to it. I conceive a pessimistic farmer. "Good friend," a visitor said to the farmer, "you are fortunate this year. He pointed to the heavy and rich grass fields spreading so far as the eye could see. "You can't grumble," he went on, "about your crop this season, eh?" "No," whined the pessimist, but a crop like this is terribly wearing on the soil."

Wheat Food for Orientals. That wheat is taking the place of rice as the principle article of food in Japan and China is a conclusion arrived at by consultation of statistics, and the reason is to be found in the development of wheat fields hitherto left to the growth of grass, as in Canada, Australia and Russia. The more wheat is raised the more will be used, the larger yield keeping the price down, and as it is the finest grain grown, it is bound to take the place of all others.

ENGLAND OUR BEST CUSTOMER.

Tight little England, no bigger in area than New York State, yet with a population of 40,000,000, is by far the largest importing nation in Europe. The most remarkable feature of England's trade with the world is the preponderance of trade carried on with the United States. During 1903 Great Britain bought from the United States more than eight hundred million dollars' worth of our products, and this Anglo-American trade is by far the largest trade between any two countries on earth. The amount named exceeds by more than half a billion dollars the value of imports from the next largest seller, namely, France. Thus at the outset it is not hard to understand that with the output of our plantations, farms, ranches, and dairies, and with the products of our mills and factories, we feed, clothe and shelter, and provide the comforts and necessities generally, for the people of Great Britain.—Gilson Willets in Leslie's Weekly.

LOST LION. Irving Bachelor at a recent reception was asked if he could tell the origin of the expression "literary lion." Running his fingers through his iron gray hair, he smiled, shook his head slowly and said: "That reminds me of a story. Not long ago I attended a musicale at the house of a well-known literary woman. In course of conversation I asked her what had become of that long haired genius to whom she always referred as her literary lion.

"Oh, that is really a sad story," she replied. "You see, he was poor, and I persuaded my husband to lend him $50. But that ruined him so far as social purposes were concerned." "How did it ruin him?" I asked. "Why, the foolish man went and bought a suit of ready-made clothes and then actually had his hair cut short; just fancy, a literary lion with no mane!"

St. Martin, Que., May 16, 1905. C. C. Richards & Co. Gentlemen—Last November my child struck a nail in his knee, causing inflammation so severe that I was advised to take him to Montreal and have the limb amputated to save his life.

A neighbor advised us to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which we did, and within three days my child was all right, and I feel so grateful that my experience may be of benefit to others. Louis Gagnier.

NOVEL ADVERTISEMENT. That sentiment can be used with good effect in an advertisement, the Germans evidently believe; otherwise it is difficult to account for the following letter which recently appeared among the business notices in a German paper: "My dearest Charlotte: My heart is almost broken because your father has forbidden me to call on you, and I know the only reason is because I am not wealthy. I cannot, however, live without you, and so we must meet somewhere.

"Meet me to-morrow morning about 10 o'clock, at — in street—I mean that large store where they sell men's clothing. You know it's such a popular place that it's always crowded and therefore no one will be able to spy on us. Besides, I intend to buy an overcoat. In this store they have clothes of all colors and styles, so that I could never make up my mind if I were alone. Now remember, my darling, I'll expect you at 10 o'clock, and I hope you won't disappoint me."

Correctly Described. A village inquirer, having plied a newcomer with every conceivable question as to hopes, means, prospects, etc., finally asked him if he had a family. "Yes," was the reply, "I saw a wife and six children, and I never saw one of them."

After a brief silence the bore commented: "Were you ever blind, sir?" "No." "Another parson. "Did I understand you to say you had a wife and six children at home, and had never seen one of them?" "Fact." "How can that be?" "Why," was the reply, "one of them was born after I left."

FLIGHT OF METEORS. Observed in Their Passage for Over Two Minutes.

The Monthly Weather Bureau publishes a summary of the observations covering three remarkable meteors observed by the U. S. S. Supply, at sea, on Feb. 28 last. The meteors appeared in a group, the largest having an "apparent area" about six suns. It was egg-shaped, the sharper end forward. This end was jagged in outline. The other two meteors were round, one apparently "double the size of the sun" and the other "about the size of the sun." The meteors were in sight over two minutes, and were carefully observed by three people, whose accounts agree in all details. Curiously, they first approached the earth's surface and then receded.

VIABILITY OF TYPHOID GERMS. Especially Sensitive to High Temperatures and Sunlight.

Some recent experiments conducted in this country in regard to the viability of the typhoid bacillus are of especial interest to Philadelphians. It appears that this organism is rapidly destroyed by cold and heat. Rapidly, however, does not mean instantly at a freezing temperature, as the typhoid germ may survive when frozen in ice for considerable length of time, although the number of living organisms is rapidly diminished. They are much more sensitive to heat. An exposure of about five minutes at a temperature from 170 to 185 Fahrenheit is destructive. This figure is a little higher than is usually assigned for this germ. Typhoid germs are also rapidly destroyed by sunlight, an exposure of 30 minutes to one hour usually being sufficient to sterilize a culture when spread in a thin layer.

NINE MILLION ACRES Government Lands for Homesteaders.

In western Nebraska for the Union Pacific Railroad in section lots of 640 acres each, for almost nothing. The salubrity of these lands is something remarkable. Distance from railroad is three to thirty miles. There will be a grand rush of homesteaders. This is the last distribution of free homes the United States Government will ever make in Nebraska.
