LORD DUNDONALD IN POLITICS.

Lord Dundonald has proved that a great General is not necessarily a great gentleman. No matter as to the merits of the dispute between him and the government, it was surely an unwise judgment that led him, with an imperial officer, to take sides with a political party. No wonder some British papers are demanding his silence or his recall seeing in his lack of act, a positive danger to the continuance of harmony between Canada and Britain.

His action at the great Massey Hall meeting last week justifies these remarks. Gotten up as a purely non-political affair, prominent men of both parties invited, he failed utterly in grasping the situation. The address—which he had previously seen,—the chairman's introduction and addresses of the other speakers were all faultlessly in line with the non-partizan idea, yet Lord Dundonald put his foot right in it and launched out in invective against the government and of course in a Toronto audience there was bound to be many who could overlook propriety to join in a "crack" at the Liberals.

The greatest discourtesy of all was in the singular omission to make a reference to the address he had just received. The charge that the militia is neglected will go all the way to hurt the Liberals for it is a fact that they have been more generous by far than their predecessors now their opponents. The attempt to make capital for his would be friends will end in disaster to them for Liberals would like nothing better than to go the country on this same "Dundonald incident."

The iteration of "foreigner" and "stranger" by a few Conservative speakers and writers shows in what straits they are for a campaign cry. Everyone knows the local meaning the Premier had when he used the words, yet no doubt we shall hear for the —teenth time the charge that the Premier spoke of the British general as he would of the Prince of Morocco.

Lord Dundonald by this time will have the plaudits of Toronto out of his ears and will be able to listen to the echoes of the British press.

Here is what the London, England, Daily News says: "Are we to have the risk of an imperial crisis raised over that trumpety quarrel in which Lord Dundonald has not the shadow of a case. It is high time the British Government, which closes parliament, closed this indiscreet bearer of a great name and assured the Canadians that England disassociates itself from this fire-eating general," and the Daily Mail says: "The sooner the war office and the British government turn their attention to the doings and sayings of Lord Dundonald, the better it will be for both the motherland and Canada. It is no part of the duty of an imperial officer to cause friction between England and Canada, and a soldier who does so serves the larger empire most indifferently."

NORTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

During the past few years the increase in attendance at this popular school has been little short of phenomenal. In the school year ending last month about two hundred and fifty students received instruction at the N. B. C. and during the winter months every desk was occupied and additional rooms had to be secured.

The new addition is of white brick and will be situated in the rear of the present building. The dimensions are 27x50 feet with two storeys above basement. The building will be plain and substantial and will be fitted up with the latest school furniture and appliances. A complete new steam heating plant will be installed.—Sun.
