MEASURING THE EARTH.
Recent Appliances Used in the Science of Geodesy.
The science of geodesy is making rapid strides along the line of accuracy, and there is not much left to be perfected in the way of method. The all-important problem of modern as well as ancient geodesy, of course, is the measurement of the dimensions of the earth, which enters into all practical work of surveying, navigation and terrestrial physics. The International Geodetic Association several years ago undertook the problem, the different nations having agreed to contribute their share toward an accurate determination. As has already been recorded, the determination was undertaken in Ecuador in 1901, and extended from the Colombian to the Peruvian frontier, and every possible refinement to attain the maximum degree of accuracy was adopted. The greatest difficulty is to secure an accurate base line, which is complicated by so apparently trivial a thing as the expansion of the measuring medium. The latest refinement in the base method is that originated by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, using a single bar immersed in melting ice, the containing trough being carried in a suitable car upon a temporary track. Later still, M. Guillaume discovered an alloy of 64 per cent steel and 36 per cent nickel, possessing an exceedingly low coefficient of expansion, and, consequently, offers the best medium for accurate base line measurements. This alloy is known as "invar," and is usually employed in the form of a wire supported by tripods and stretched by a definite weight. A very valuable piece of work on the Island of Spitzbergen was completed with the use of this alloyed wire.

His Pessimistic Cognition.
"I suspect," ruminatingly said the Old Dodger, apropos of nothing in particular, "that if all men were mind readers in the full sense of the term, and each was able to realize what every other person he met actually thought about him, there would be very little going on in this world but fights, lawsuits and undertakings; and only the helplessly meek, the sublimely egotistical, the genuinely philosophical and the hopelessly idiotic would have any happiness in his life."

HE CAN SLEEP IN PEACE NOW
Wm. Taggart's Kidney Disease Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.
Well-known Tilbury East Farmer Tells the Tilbury News How Easily He Got Rid of His Trouble.
Tilbury, Ont., Aug. 29.—(Special).—Mr. Wm. Taggart, a well-known and highly esteemed farmer of Tilbury East, tells of his remarkable cure of long-standing Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills.
"For about four or five years," says Mr. Taggart, "I was a sufferer from Kidney trouble, and the scores of medicines I used gave me no relief. I was forced to get up three or four times every night and my life was simply miserable."
"At last I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I got relief from the first. After using two boxes I was completely cured, and you can bet I was a happy man. I cannot speak too highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills."
All urinary complaints are caused by diseased kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure the kidneys, and therefore always cure urinary complaints.

Chinese Silver Tea Sets.
Mme Wong, wife of Wong Kai Kah, Vice-Commissioner from China to the St. Louis World's Fair, has taken up her residence in Indianapolis, Ind., during her husband's absence on official matters. This gives the American woman a chance to see what the table silver of a wealthy Chinese woman is like. Several dishes new to the Americans are seen in Mme. Wong's collection. All the dishes are solid silver and richly ornamented. The tea set has solid silver cups and saucers, the size of our ordinary cups for family use. The soup spoons resemble our chafing dish.

WHAAP THEMSELVES IN RUBBER.
The New Reduction Cure The Secret of Some Fine Figures at Newport.
There is a new method of flesh-reducing which is intended only for people addicted to athletics. One of its features is the fact that one may follow it without attracting attention from their friends.
The graceful woman one sees at Newport riding along Ocean avenue, playing tennis at the Casino or on the links at the golf club may all the time be taking this method of getting thin, although there is no trace of it in their appearance. Men who ride cross-country or play polo may be simultaneously following this method of flesh reduction, although nobody would suspect it.
It is a fact that some of the women of New York smart society who are noted for their good looks and athletic figures are most devoted to this method of keeping their weight down. Among men its advocates are those conspicuous for their athletic figures and their strength.
This new method of melting away the too solid pounds is described as the "rubber dam" system. A rubber dam is the bit of rubber fitted by dentists about a tooth on which they are working to keep away saliva and other moisture. The rubber from which such dams are made comes in bolts about two-thirds of a yard wide. It is a hard rubber cloth, and is sold by the yard in one or two drug stores.
Persons who want to take off flesh may cut five yards of this material and wrap it tightly about the body, and keep it in place upon a tight-fitting suit of silk or woolen underwear, preferably of the kind called the combination. This is only the first stage of the rubber dam reduction cure. The hardest part is still to come. Once the rubber is in place there must come many swift sprints, hard horseback riding, tether ball playing or some equally exacting sport. The use of the rubber wrapper assists the action of the skin, makes the perspiration much freer and has been known to take off as much as five or six pounds in one day.
Women usually wrap the rubber about the body from the chest down to the knees. Many women are most interested in getting rid of their hips, as they are likely to show stoutness first there, and the big hipped woman is not at all in the style nowadays. Such women wrap the rubber dam several times around the hips, and waist and devote all their energies to that particular part of the body.
In the same way, men who think they are getting too heavy over the hips or maybe over the abdomen wrap the rubber only about these parts that they are anxious to attack.
The treatment requires nothing in the way of diet, although it will, of course, be very much more effective if fattening foods and liquids are avoided. But the rubber dam devotees do not, as a rule, follow any other course in attempting to get thin.
The treatment is not expensive. The original cost of the rubber will not exceed $4 in any case, and it can be used time and time again.
There used to be complaints that patients under the treatment might take to getting rid of their ribs, as they do the exercise they do immediately after and take a bath. For persons who ride or play tennis the new treatment is splendidly effective, but it is of no value to those not addicted to athletics.

AN HISTORIC HANGING.
Drop First Used on Unfortunate Earl of Ferrers.
It was the fourth Earl of Ferrers who was hanged in May, 1709 for the murder of his steward, a man of the name of Harold. The Earl, who killed the man in the most cold-blooded fashion, was tried by his peers in the House of Lords and found guilty unanimously, the sentence of death being pronounced upon him by Lord High Chancellor Henley, who presided at the trial at Lord Steward. The Earl was allowed to drive to the gallows in his own state carriage, drawn by six horses, which was followed by a hearse and six, and it is on record that the rope with which he was hanged was silk instead of hemp. This concession being due to his rank. Indeed, the silk rope used on that occasion was still in existence towards the middle of the last century, forming part of a celebrated collection of ropes used for purposes of capital punishment.
It was at the execution of Lord Ferrers at Tyburn that the drop was used for the first time, in the place of the old cart and ladder. The drop, it is reported, did not work very well. It is on record that the earl's toes touched the ground, and that he "suffered a little, having time to raise the cap, and the executioner pulled it down again, and then they pulled his legs, so that he was soon out of the air in a few minutes." In fact, the experience of an unfortunate earl led to the adoption of what is known as the "long drop" in lieu of the short one.
There is only one member of the House of Lords who within the last 200 years has suffered death as a felon, namely, the Earl of Castlehaven, described by his contemporaries as "the wicked husband of the wickedest woman in the world."

USE OF DRUGS FOR HEADACHE.
It may be said, with little fear of contradiction from those who know the facts, that if a cast-iron law forbidding the use of any drug whatever could be enacted and enforced there would be much less misery for the coming generation than there is for this.
A sufferer from repeated headaches who has found a measure of relief in headache powders or other even less harmful drug may dispute this assertion, but the victims of some drug habit or the friends of one whose heart, poisoned by acetyl-nitrid or antipyrine, has suddenly ceased to beat before its time, will look the matter from another point of view entirely. During the Spanish war numbers of a weak heart, and in the epidemic of pneumonia, which ravaged the country last winter, an unusual number of deaths occurred from failure of the heart to meet the added strain.
Although various causes have doubtless been at work to weaken the hearts of the present generation, there can be no question that one potent influence has been the indiscriminate use of headache powders.
In all cases of habitual headaches recurring periodically, a physician must, of course, be consulted as to the cause, eye strain, disease in the ears, nose, stomach or other more distant organs and remove it if possible. But the separate attacks of headache have to be relieved, if severe, and in these cases it is better not to resort to drugs, unless the drugs are taken under the special guidance of a physician. In the congestive headache, marked by throbbing, and made worse by stooping or lying down, a cold towel or an ice bag applied to the head, a hot water bag to the spine, mustard plaster to the back of the neck or to the inner side of the thigh, or a hot mustard footbath—one or more—will often give relief when many drugs fail.—Youth's Companion.

According to Law.
This story is being told of a certain New York politician says Harper's Weekly. He had succeeded in securing a friend of his position as tax assessor at the cost of considerable exertion. Not long after the friend had begun work in his new position the politician was surprised and grieved to see that he was taxed under "personal property," $24 as the position was valued. He called on his friend the assessor, for an explanation, accusing him of ingratitude and forgetfulness of favors received.
"But I couldn't do less than obey the specific details of the law," protested his friend; "look—here's what it says," and he read from his papers: "For all property bounding or abutting on the highway, $12 per front foot."
Sitting on His Plate of Cream.
They were discussing political broils, remarks Youth, an senator Charles Fairbanks said that the personal character in their reminded him of a church assessor who sat on his plate of cream.
"As I sat down comfortably to enjoy the scene, a little boy opposite set up a shriek."
"What's the matter, child?" I inquired.
"Boo hoo! Boo hoo!" he yelled.
"Who's worrying you?" I asked.
"You," he whimpered.
"Me?"
"Yes."
"How?"
"Yer settin' on my plate of ice cream."

MALACCA STRAITS.
Odd Superstition of the Natives About Crocodiles.
Along the Malacca Straits the Malays still believe that many beasts are sacred, and they are particularly impressed with the belief that the crocodile is a spirit of the water. Therefore, these ugly monsters are not only extremely plentiful there, but they are so daring that they make most of the waterways dangerous even for persons in boats.
The Englishmen who dwell in that part of the country declare that hardly a week passes without the killing of a native by a crocodile. The brute swims slowly behind the ruder, flimsy canoes and dugouts used there, and suddenly switches his terrible tail around in such a way as to sweep the men out of the boat into the water.
Here and there along the banks of the black rivers will be seen strips of white cloth and baskets full of fruit and rice, attached to trees or saplings close to the water. These are offerings made by the natives to some crocodile that has his haunt just under the bank.
Now and then, however, a crocodile becomes so ferocious and kills so many persons that even the superstitious natives feel it necessary to despatch him. Then they use an ingenious and curious method. They make a small bamboo raft about three feet square, and to this they attach a long rope, made of loosely-plied cotton. At the end is a huge hook, to the shank of which they tie a live chicken.
They set the chicken on the raft and

DIGGING IN ANCIENT RUINS.
Light Thrown on Grecian Life by Discoveries Made at Olbia.
Interesting and valuable archaeological discoveries have been made on the site of the ancient Greek city Olbia. The site is situated on the southern bank of the Bog, about midway between Othakoff and Nicolaiere, and not far distant from the estuary of the Dnieper. This ancient city was a colony of Miletus 655 B. C. (and was a great centre for Greek B. C. (and was a great centre for Greek trade with the interior. It is generally maintained among archaeological authorities that a trade route extended from Olbia across country to the north sea, and when a find of ancient Greek coins was made it was contended that was substantial proof of the fact. Recently, however, it was proved that these coins were spurious.
Olbia was destroyed by the Getae about 70 to 60 B. C., but it was revived and when it was visited by Dion Chrysostom, about 100 A. D., it was again a flourishing city. The excavations of this city are being carried out by M. Formakovski under the auspices of the Russian Archaeological Society. M. Formakovski has succeeded in unearthing extensive portions of the walls and foundations of the original city, which date back from the seventh century B. C. The masonry is identical with that of ruins of ancient cities excavated in various parts of Greece. Before this depth was reached two different strata of walls and basements bearing descriptions of the fourth and first centuries B. C. were encountered.
The stone blocks composing the ruins of houses, temples, etc., in these upper strata are of remarkably exact area, square proportions and excellently dressed. The more solid constructive work is, however, found in the remains of the original city. At this depth there was unearthed a perfectly preserved wine cellar. Some fifty huge jars or vases had evidently contained red wine, now turned to a light powdery substance. A large collection of valuable antiquities in gold, marble, and ancient pottery has also been found in these newly uncovered ruins. These have been dispatched to the Hermitage at St. Petersburg. M. Formakovski, however, carefully examining every antique unearthed, to establish its genuine character, as it was on this site that the spurious tiara of Sathapharnes, now in the Louvre was alleged to have been discovered.

TO EXTERMINATE HOUSE FLIES.
Scientists having proved that the common house fly is responsible for the spread of some of the most deadly diseases, it becomes the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating the little pest.
Many contrivances have been used for the purpose, including fly traps of many kinds, sticky paper, and different makes of poison, but although all will kill some flies there always seems to be as many left as ever. There is only one really effective way to kill them all, and that is Wilson's Fly Pads. One ten cent packet of Wilson's Fly Pads has been known to kill a bushful of flies, and a few pads properly used will kill all the flies in any room in a few hours.

Refinement of Cruelty.
There is a story going the rounds in London of a cruel revenge wreaked by a woman on a rival whom she hated. It was not a case of financial ruin, but in its way it was quite effective. She simply asked her victim to a pretentious dinner, and arranged a colored light so that it should fall full upon her and make her look ghastly. To add refinement to her vengeance, she placed her enemy's particular admirer directly opposite.

TO EXTERMINATE HOUSE FLIES.
Scientists having proved that the common house fly is responsible for the spread of some of the most deadly diseases, it becomes the duty of every housekeeper to assist in exterminating the little pest.
Many contrivances have been used for the purpose, including fly traps of many kinds, sticky paper, and different makes of poison, but although all will kill some flies there always seems to be as many left as ever. There is only one really effective way to kill them all, and that is Wilson's Fly Pads. One ten cent packet of Wilson's Fly Pads has been known to kill a bushful of flies, and a few pads properly used will kill all the flies in any room in a few hours.
