 An old lady was noticed by the vicar always to bow her head when the name of Satan was mentioned. He asked her the reason of this strange habit of hers, and she replied:

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.
 Sex and the Bee.

At one time the bees were male and female in equal numbers. The irresponsible male buzzed about, simply getting his own living, marrying and dying. The responsible female not only got her own living, but that of her children. Somehow, by and by, they came to see the advantage of communal effort, and, just as women say to one another now, "If you'll wash the dishes, I'll wipe 'em," one feminine bee said to the other, "I'll be mother if you'll get the living." It was a bargain, and the accommodating females took down in to board.
 The queen of a beehive does not rule, she lays eggs. She does not mind the babies. She does not even do her own digesting, let alone getting the food. The attendants that surround her feed her with bee milk, secreted by glands in their heads. She has to be fed continually, for at certain periods she has the power of producing from two thousand to three thousand eggs a day, twice her own weight—four times, indeed, for more than half her weight is eggs. In her lifetime a prolific queen will lay fifteen hundred thousand eggs.

 THE COST OF FIRING A CANNON.

Modern naval warfare is one of the most costly things that can be imagined. And a combat between two fleets means the expenditure of vast sums of money. Some idea of the high cost can be arrived at by taking a Japanese warship like the Kasuga or Nishin and calculating the number of shots she would discharge, say, at Port Arthur. The first named ship carries four cannons which cost $300,000 each. One of these guns can fire two shots a minute, and every shot costs $400; thus in five minutes these four cannon can discharge forty bombs at a cost of $160,000. The smaller cannon cost each $18,000, and it is estimated that in five minutes the twelve cannon could discharge shot to the value of nearly $35,000.—Leslie's Weekly.

YOUNG LADIES MARRIED WOMEN

Mrs. Jno. C. Huffman Speaks to You All.

She Tells of her Troubles and Their Cure that you may be Benefited.
 Napanee, Ont., Sept. 12.—(Special)—There are many women in Canada who will yet write letters of thanks to Mrs. Jno. C. Huffman, of this place. Mrs. Huffman suffered as they are suffering now. She discovered a cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills; and she is breaking the law of secrecy that binds the great majority of womankind to let her suffering sisters know where they may find relief. Mrs. Huffman says:
 "I was troubled for about six years with Kidney Disease and the pain was so great I could hardly bear it. I could not entertain any company. One night when I was feeling very miserable I read of some wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills and resolved to try them.
 "At that time my urine was something terrible and at times very disagreeable to pass, but Dodd's Kidney Pills soon brought me relief from all my troubles and by the time I had taken six boxes I was completely cured.
 "I am making this statement to the public in the hope that it may help other young ladies or married women."

VALUE IN OLD RUBBERS.
 The Commercial Use of Worn-Out Galoshes—An Increasing Industry.

Not one in a thousand New Yorkers is aware that one of the big industries of this country is the importation of old rubber shoes and galoshes. Yet it is a fact that these seemingly worthless discarded articles of footwear from nearly every country of the globe are daily coming into the country in large quantities, carefully packed and stowed away as part of the big Transatlantic liners. This importation has been going on for several years, and yet it has seemingly never attracted the attention of the alert chroniclers of interesting events, for the old shoes and galoshes have slipped into the country silently, hidden away on the manifests of the steamships and quietly sent to the consignees, who have eagerly paid the freight.

Primarily the cause for this strange industry is the ever-increasing demand for rubber in America, which has practically exhausted the South American rubber industry. Every year new uses have been found for the stretchable article. A few years ago, when electricity was not in so general a use as it is today, the demand for electricians for rubber was not very heavy. To-day, when every modern apartment house has electric light installation, the demand for rubber for insulation purposes is something enormous. The ever-increasing number of electric traction routes, electric elevated railways, electric locomotives, electric elevators, have added to the demand for gutta percha, and then the automobiles for which their huge rubber tires, compared to which the tires of the old bicycle is as nothing, and which brought the demand for rubber far and away above the supply at hand.

When the supply available from South America is not one-tenth of what it is today, every rag-picker in Europe is putting aside a space in his cellar for rubber shoes, discarded rubber coats, galoshes and broken balls. These were shipped separately to houses which began making it their business to gather nothing but old rubber, and finally the gathered rubber was sent in huge assignments to America, where it was eagerly snapped up. The old rubber shoes come in bales, thousands of them every week, for the home consumption of rubber in Europe is not one-tenth of what it is in America, and they have an idea there that rather than pay a stiff price for a rare article they can do without it. That is where they are different on this side of the Atlantic, for, the rarer the article gets to be, the more the American wants it.

All the old rubber shoes are gathered and shipped to Liverpool, which is, so far, the only shipping point from which the rubber has come to this side although German steamers—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Largest Diamonds.
 The eight largest diamonds in the world, some of which are in an uncut state and others are carefully cut and others are carefully cut and finished, so that there is a wide difference in their value. The Kohinoor, the smallest in weight, has been thus reduced by cutting and is much the most valuable of the lot and has been estimated at less than $500,000. The list is as follows: The Braganza, part of the Portuguese crown, weighs 1,880 carats; Kohinoor, belonging to the English crown, 103 carats; St. Elizabeth, 125 carats; Regent of France, 136 carats; Austrian Kaiser, 130 carats; Russian Czar, 193 carats; Rajah of Borneo, 367 carats.

FEAST OF THE WHALE.
 An Interesting Incident of the Social Life Among the Eskimos.

The principal occupation of these Eskimos (of Arctic Alaska) during the spring is the hunting of the bow-head whale in the leads, or open water, and among the floe ice of the Arctic Ocean. The taking of a whale is always a time of great rejoicing with these people, for it means not only an abundance of food and fuel, but a large amount of valuable trading material.

After the whaling season is over, the boats which have been used in the chase are gathered on the leads between the pack and shore ice, which is often some miles from shore, at the foot of some road that has been cut through the rough ice from the land to the water. The whaler's umiak (a whaling boat covered with skins), takes the lead, followed by the other boats in the order of their success. The harpoons, floats, paddles and everything pertaining to the chase of the whale are placed in their respective positions. The umiak are in an open flat ivory runner sled and lashed firmly in place. The owner, who is called omelic (head man), stands on the ice at the right hand side of the bow; the boat steerer stands at the stern and the paddlers stand at their respective places along the sides of the boat. When all is ready, the omelic gives the word to go forward, and each of the crew slips over his shoulder a broad breast strap of seal skin, which is attached to a short line made fast to the thwart of the boat. When all is ready, the boat is pulled forward by the thwarts of the boat, and each of the crew slips through the same form, moving on in its turn, until all the umiaks are strung out in a long line on the grounded ice, ready for their return to land.

At a signal from the head boat, all move forward, chanting weird songs of the goodness and power of the whale; for one of the superstitions of these people is that whenever working on any ject to be used in whaling, or doing anything connected with whaling, they must constantly extol the merits of this great animal.

Long before the boats reach shore the entire population left in the village—men, women, children and dogs—congregate on the beach to welcome the home-comers. When the first boat nears land it is brought to a halt a few feet from the shore line, and its tallman, which is always carried in a little pouch in the bow, and may be a wolf's head, the head of a raven, iron pyrites or any old thing, is lifted out by the omelic and held in his right hand toward the shore, where stands the chief medicine man of the tribe, who pours over it a little fresh water to refresh it and thank it for the benefits given, if the boat has secured a whale; or if the boat has not been lucky, to appease any slight that may have been put upon the tallman, in the hope that it will give them better luck in the future.

After reaching shore, a day or possibly two may be given for preparation, and then the great feast begins. Each successful boat owner, beginning with the one whose boat secured the most whales, gives a feast, to which he invites all the members of his tribe and any other people who may be in the village. First a wind break of umiaks, sails or skins is built to act as a shelter against the chilly blasts of the polar winds. It is placed in the form of a large circle, if enough material can be secured, in the centre of which the boat is placed (on the ground); and to its four corners are tied long ropes, which are passed over tripods placed about twenty-five feet from the skin. The end of the ropes are then drawn tight, and then made fast, thus raising the skin about four feet. The skin thus becomes a platform some eight or ten feet square, which serves as a sort of movable stage on which the young women dance.

The feast usually begins at the time when the sun reaches a due western point, about 2 o'clock in the afternoon; for during the eight days of summer, the Eskimo sun never sets, and being without timepieces, the Eskimos mark their time by the position of the sun while the sun has gone for the long Arctic night. These feasts, sometimes lasting twenty-four hours—Edward A. M'Ilhenny in September.

The Religions of Japan.
 Upon the restoration of the present Japanese Emperor to power in 1868, it was decided by the older statesmen—the advisers to whose farsighted policy much of the present success of Japan is her due—that it would be better to restore the ancient Shinto faith and get rid of Buddhism as much as possible. In this way Shintoism became the official national religion of Japan, and its rites are followed in all cases where the government is responsible for the celebration, though the common people are, as a rule, followers of Buddha at heart. In other words, there is no strict line of demarcation between the two faiths, and it is questionable whether the average Japanese individual could tell you to which sect he considered himself allied.

The Emperor is the head of the Shinto religion, and is himself worshipped as being directly descended from the gods, and every Japanese subject pays him homage as such; but this does not interfere with the subject's worship of multifarious other deities of the sea, the ocean, fire, food and pestilence; of mountains and rivers, and of special objects in nature—more than eight hundred in all. It was very simple to add to all these the gods of the Hinduism which Buddhism was introduced from China, through Korea, in the sixth century, the Christian era, but it was not so simple to displace them at the command of the statesmen. So the Buddhist priests still flourish, though short of the power and grandeur which were theirs under the rule of the Shoguns—William Dindwiddie's Manchuria letter in Leslie's Weekly.

Origin of Ice Cream.
 Many barrels of ice-cream does the average man swallow with never a grateful thought of that benefactor of mankind who invented the stuff in the first place.

Bacon knew that by melting snow with salt congealment would occur in any circumjacent liquid, but to him it was no more than an inedible, an extraordinary scientific fact. Further than that this noble seer never saw.

It was a Frenchman who, in all his humble namelessness, preparing for the Duc de Chartres in 1744, a snow-like dish, was the originator of ice-cream. A century in England passed in the knowledge in England of the art of making drinks, and their start is not laid even in France, for the French are said to have caught the trick from travellers returning from the sherbets of the Turks and Persians.—Boston Transcript.

ALPINE FATALITIES.
 Although Early, the List of Casualties is Already a Long One.

The record of the accidents on the Higher Alps has been that of the Ober-Gabelhorn. This great cone of reddish rock, familiar to all habitues of Zermatt, is not considered in these latter days a difficult ascent, provided it is climbed by experts with reasonable precautions. Its rocks are steep, but they are also usually firm, and to the best of our recollection they have never hitherto been the scene of any mountaineering fatality. In this instance a party of Austrians were making the ascent from Zermatt, down on rocks, one tourist and one guide on each rope. Dr. Demelius was in charge of the guide Tumbel, and was leading on the rope, when suddenly a great mass of rock which was serving as a foothold, gave way beneath his feet, carrying him and his luckless guide down with it to their death. The accident was almost closely similar to the well-known catastrophe on the Rothorn ten years ago, by which the guide Biner lost his life.

The sudden collapse of a foothold is one of those rare occasions when prepared to chance, and against which, perhaps, no vigilance can guard. An accident of a quite different type was that which in mid-July Miss Goodman lost her life. She was climbing with a party on the Matterhorn, when she slipped and fell. The rope broke, and she fell to her fatal results. It is feared that this fatality was due to the employment of second-class rope. Otherwise it is most inexplicable, as the cases in which a rope of good quality has parted under the stress of a fall are few and far between. In the great and memorable catastrophe on the Matterhorn by which Lord F. Douglas and Messrs. Hudson, Hadow and Crox lost their lives, the rope which broke was a weak and inferior one, which the guide ought never to have used. The type of rope approved by the Alpine Club can be trusted in most emergencies if it is properly used.—London Mail.

Whom Rheumatism doubles
 a man up physician and suffers alike lose heart and often despair of a cure, but here's the exception. William Pegg, of Norwood, Ont., says: "I was nearly doubled up with rheumatism. Would Hurry When the Lord Called.
 "It is an awful good thing to obey the commands of the Lord," says a member of the recent Methodist General Conference from Pennsylvania to a Washington Times man, "and whenever I think of this I am reminded of a story related of a pioneer Methodist named Valentine Cook, who was a power in his day, and who got off many odd sayings. "Once there was a terrible upheaval of nature in the shape of an earthquake, and Dr. Cook woke up, finding his bed jostling and turning. He believed the end of the world near and made a bee line for the door. His good wife, in great agitation, called, 'Valentine, wait for me! Wait for me!' "No, my dear," he answered, 'When the Lord calls, I wait for nobody, Good-bye,' and out of the door he shot."

A King Nine Times.
 The most befitting monarch in the world is Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. Without his Imperial crown, which is the identical tiara of Charlemagne, he is nine times a king, twice a grand duke, once a grand prince, once a prince, four times a margrave and the multitude of his titles as count and so forth is past enumeration.

The total of his titles of sovereignty and nobility exceeds a hundred. In addition as King of Hungary he bears the title of "Most Apostolic," which is one of the four honors bestowed by the Pope. Were the sovereigns of Europe to meet in a council, there is no doubt that the premier place would be conceded to Emperor Francis—alike by reason of his hereditary prestige and his representation of the ancient Holy Roman Empire.

First Cup of Tea.
 In all probability the first cup of tea ever made in England was drunk upon the site of Buckingham Palace. The reason for the supposition is as follows: The first pound of tea which came to England was bought—for 60 shillings—by the Earl of Arlington, in Holland, and was brought over by him; and at this time the Earl resided at Arlington House, which was pulled down to make room for Buckingham House, since then become Buckingham Palace.

The Cost of War.
 In the last 200 years France has spent $293,000,000 in war. Even Belgium spends every year 46,000,000 on her army. In less than 300 years Great Britain alone has spent $1,357,000,000 in war. At Hannoverburn 135,000 men fought and 28,000 were killed or wounded. Italy spends every year 14,000,000 lire ($56,000) on her army and navy. The French army costs every year 675,000,000 francs, 209,000,000 francs. The peace footing in the Russian army calls for the services of 170,000 horses. The army of Bolivia costs the people of that impoverished country $300,000 a year. At Gravelotte 239,000 men were engaged, of whom 45,000 were killed or wounded.
