On Randay evening the step Mr. Requirement gave a sermon on the durand responsibilities of citizenship, thing so his text the apostle's claim "I was free burn" or as the revised a sion puts it "But I am a Remark sion puts it "But I am a Roman born."
He proceeded to noint out the glory of citizenship and how it is to be attained. This citizenship brings him who possesses it into a certain fellowship with all the cutizens of the continues. the citizens of the empire. This fellow-ship neither depends on race nor creed but is the seal of a union to carry out the end for which civil government is established. If the mission of the church is to manifest the mercy of God. that of the state is to reveal the justice of God, so that for citizenship there is neither Jew nor Greek. Pagane nor Christian, but a union of all who love righteousness and hate a lie.

The privilege of this citizenship is that it secures to the individual his right as a free personality. In the olden days the Roman citizen was secured immunity from degrading punishments, he was given the right to appeal to Caesar and had secured to him a voice in the affairs of government. The value Thos. Dixon, Walkerton PO.
Solicitor for the said Administratrix.

of being a citizen of a great empire was seen the other day when the powerful Russian fleet was held up till they should give an account of their firing at the poor fishermen, humble it may be but as British citizens backed up by all the power of the British navy. The right to exercise a real power in state affairs had been secured after a long and painful struggle. It began in that lunitation of the sovereign power you read of in Daniel where we are told that the king though he could make a law must-himself be subject to that law when made and could not alter it to suit his arbitrary will. It had embraced such matters as the right of fair trial, the right of taxation. liberty of speech. of public meetings for discussing public questions. If we enter our liberties as free born citizens they were bought for us at a cost, not of golder silver, but by the precious blood of our heroic ances-

The duty involved in this privilege is that we allow the rights of freedom to others which we claim for ourselves. The principle of toleration has been one of slow growth. It is a case where experience teaches but little. Each party that cried against oppression when they suffered was ready to follow its predecessor when power came to their side.
The church had done much in proclaiming man's spirituality and his irdes-tructible personality, The early Chris tians had suffered and borne with patience the ills heaped on them for the Christ's sake, but so little did they learn tolerance that clerical or priestly rule Durham Bakery had almost become synonymous with a spirit narrow and bigoted. The Reformers laid claim to individual judgment, but the time for the free and full recognition of others rights was not yet Still they Come;
Still there are more to follow come. It remains for us to press on never yielding till this spirit is carried out to the full.

Why not fall into the procession and buy your bread, cakes and pastry at the up-town bakery where you are always sure to get the best returns for your money?

But how is this to be attained? There must be in the first place a spirit of intelligence among the citizens. It will not do to be good though ignorant, honest though incompetent. It is not a question of the character of the individual but of their fitness to push forward derns.

Some of the worst laws that have marred our statute book have been put there at the instigation of well meaning but ill informed citizens. The electors are the physicians and in order to succeed in curing, they must not only mean well, but be possessed of skill to know the ill and to apply the remedy. Strange to say the first step in advancing toward Wm. Johnston, Jr., C. Ramage, this intelligence is doubt. Had Luther never doubted the teachings handed down to him, there would have been no reformation as far as he was concerned. Had Deseartes and those with him never doubted the explanation of the world offered to them there would have been no modern science and had our fathers never doubted the rights of king and on "The Christian Spuit in the nobles to rule them, there had been for Mrs Theodore W Birney says: PHONE NO. 38.

The same is not courage. We would that this yoice we can and depend on some large imperial power securing to us what we want without any sacrifice on our part. Strange to say we sometimes use religion itself to cover our cowardice. One has satirized that easy going religious temper as follows: "Let us confess the truth in boles and corners, act daily falsehoods, look sharp after our vines and fig trees—and—say our prayers."

Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, United of this age is not courage. We would rather take our ease, enjoy what good is not one we hear with the physical sense of hearing, but it is a voice that speaks to our minds and souls, and the more earnestly we listen and long to do its lightest bidding the clearer will be its message to us. Christian life in the home requires that the child should be started right, that he should be given, and fig trees—and—say our prayers."
