Women Adept in the Art of Brewing the Beverage May Hypnotize Men.

Do you drink ten? Have you ever enjoyed the soothing com-fort, the gentle exhilaration of a cup made from carefully selected leaf?

Then you have missed much that makes life worth living; you have before you a fair, green spot in the desert of life that wafts you a fragrant invitation to come and rest, care free, within its charm.

Physicians who regard tea without the colored fancy of the enthusiast declare that its activity aids digestion. That is the whelly material view of it, and were it this fact alone which pleads for the beverage it might easily sink to the commonplace level of a mere stomachic. There is no danger of this, however, for tea has grown to be a belief.

It has its art, its sentiment, and its moral-ity. It has been glorified in verse and hal-oed by the brush of the inspired artist. It is a social and political force.

These thoughts naturally arise when reading how tea making has figured in two instances in Pennsylvania. There are no statistics at hand to show that residents of that State love the leaf any more than folk in other parts of the country but the event. in other parts of the country, but the exam-ples at hand show that it has been a most powerful sentimental, social and domestic

An aged Pennsylvanian, shrewd in business, 65, and long wedded, is being sued for breach of promise by a young woman whom he met at a "tea demonstrator" at a county fair. Through a long, frugal life this man had been a model of temperance. He looked not on the wine when it was red, nor blew upon the beer when it foamed. But when he look-ed upon a cup of steaming tea, poured from a perfect steeping, he was lost.

According to his own admissions, the action of the drink must have affected him like champagne, when taken for the first time. And ever afterwards, in a career of senile folly, the spell was upon him. Had he known the seduction of perfect tea earlier in life trouble might have shunned him in his old are.

In the other instance, a serving maid whose brew was a fragrant symphony and whose serving of it was the perfection of facile morning, he found that the wind grace and good breeding, was lured back to broken open the tool-house, secured the former employer by a promise of a trip plans, blown the whole house should be competition for such a prize, but this is the point of ethics for which is stirring the elect of Philadelphia society. Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.
