BALFOUR GIVES REASON.

Why He Favors Reform in the Fiscal Policy.

London, Jan. 30.-Speaking of his constituents at Manchester, Premier Balfour denied the assertion that he had been vague regarding the fiscal question. In his utterances Mr. Morley had offered a reward to anybody who could state his fiscal policy on a sheet of note paper. He would do it on half a sheet, holding up a sheet of note paper, from which he read: "First, I desire such an alteration of the fiscal system as will give us freedom of action, which is impossible while we hold ourselves bound by the maxim that no taxation should be imposed except for

"I desire this freedom in the main for three reasons; It will strengthen our hands in negotiations by which we may hope to lower foreign hostile tariffs, it may enable us to protect the fiscal independence of those colonies which desire to give us preferential treatment, it may be useful where we wish to check the importation of those foreign goods, which, because they are bountyfed or tariff-protected abroad, are sold below cost price here.

"Secondly, I desire closer commercial union with the colonies which have given that policy much support. 1 think it might produce great and growing commercial advantages both to the colonies and the mother country by promoting freer trade between them. Such commercial union is beset with many difficulties, but those can best be dealt with by the colonial conference, provided its objects are permitted to be discussed unhampered by limiting instructions. I recommend that the subject shall be referred to the conference

Toronto, Jan. 30 .- While removing a lunatic from the House of Industry to the Queen Street Asylum last evening Patrick Riley and John Webb, two inmates of the House of Industry, had a narrow escape from death. John Kaiser, another of the inmates, went violently insane a few days ago, and it was feared that he would harm the other inmates, it was decided to remove him to the asylum. He and the men who removed him left in a cab, and when they had reached the corner of Queen street and Euclid avenue Kaiser drew a razor from his pocket and with two sweeps of his arm slashed his two attendants, inflicting a serious wound on the neck of London, Jan. 30 .- The London correspondent of the Times telegraphs a long account examination of the city, the fortifications and there was no lack of troops, ammunition, food, nor any ot her essential thing. All accounts, he says, agree in condemning General ed weeks before. All accounts, too, agree in condemning the majority of the Russian officers, who had more fear of a failure of their comforts than of ammunition. All praise the courage of the Russian rank and file, who were in many cases shamefully commanded. All agree that no man less deserved the title of hero than Stoessel. Those who have witnessed the condition of the fortress, contrasting the evidence of their eyes with the astounding misrepresentations of General Stoessel, have had their sympathy turned into derision, believing that a more discreditable surrender was never recorded in history. Had the Kaiser waited until he had received the reports from the German and other milltary attaches, he could never have conferred the Order of Merit upon General Stoessel.
