NEWTON'S SCALE OF HEAT.
Great Philosopher Inventor of Thermometer Before Fahrenheit.

According to Sir Samuel Wilkes, Fahrenheit constructed his thermometer from one made many years before by Sir Isaac Newton. In the transactions of the Royal Society for 1701 will be found the paper written by Sir Isaac Newton, in which he first refers to the thermometer. By Sir Samuel, "He invented an instrument for measuring the degrees of heat in fluids by taking a tube and filling it with linned oil. On this he marked the freezing point as zero by putting the tube in snow and the boiling point as 100. The very awkward scale which we now use is evidently that of Newton, for the decimal system not being then in use, he took the number 100 to denote the heat of the body; he found, and made it the starting point of his scale, both upward and downward.

It was some time after that, for the sake of convenience, the degrees were divided into two, and thus the modern scale was 24 above zero and boiling point 62. When, many years afterward, Fahrenheit made his instrument and Fahrenheit's scale was 32 above zero and boiling point 212. When Fahrenheit, finding he could get a lower temperature than freezing, made this point zero, which brought the number 8 of Newton to 32 in Fahrenheit's scale. In this way the thermometer was constructed.

IMPREGNABLE STRENGTH.
The Canada Life Enters a New Era in Its History.

The Canada Life has entered on a new era, having within the last year passed the $100,000,000 mark. But while its size has increased three-fold in the past twenty years that is overshadowed in importance by the remarkable strength of the company's reserve funds have acquired.
The President, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, announced that the Canada Life policy reserves are now greater than the present Dominion Government standard by about $3,000,000. In the course of a masterly address he pointed out that while this great fund must necessarily be accumulated at the expense of surplus, yet the interest of old policyholders had been conserved, and they will henceforth receive materially larger cash surrenders and loan values than heretofore, notwithstanding the lower premiums they pay as compared with those charged to-day.
The report announces that the new business written in 1904 was greater than that of any previous year, the amount actually paid for exceeding $11,200,000.
The assets were increased by $1,894,000, this being the greatest sum in any single year in the company's history. The assets are now over four times as large as they were twenty years ago and aggregate over $29,000,000.
Perhaps the most striking feature of the report to the lay mind is the statement that the Canada Life has since its inception paid or credited policyholders with over $7,000,000 more than has been paid in by them.
This favorable showing illustrates the careful selection of lives, and the sound, conservative management which have always characterized the Canada Life.

"We have a great deal of pleasure reading your column in the Record-Herald, and usually find you accurate in your statements. In your item about 'Solomon's Luck,' you say 'What would have happened to him if there had been department stores long before Solomon's time, as you will see by reading the Book of Job. In the fourth chapter and fourteenth verse he says: 'All the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come.'

FEAST IS SPINSTERS' TRAP.

Girls' Matrimonial Club Invites Eligible Bachelors.

The spinsters of the Belgian town of Ecaussinne have their eyes set on more for the cause of women's rights than has been effected by parliamentary legislation for years past. In their country, why, argued these young women, in a country like Belgium, where men are in a minority, should not the feminine privileges, hitherto confined to leap year, be extended to every year of grace?
Being of a practical turn of mind, these marriageable women proceeded a few months ago to organize a matrimonial club of sixty members. The club's object was to attract desirable suitors. After much discussion, the would-be matrons of Ecaussinne came to the conclusion that in a land of legendary good living like Belgium a banquet would be the most likely way of appealing to the male youth of the district.
Invitations were, therefore, promptly issued by the president of the girls' club to sixty eligible young men to an open air feast in the gardens of the club house. The success of the appointed hour the bachelors began to arrive, some in automobile, some on horseback, some on bicycles. By 4, the hour fixed for the feast, the sixty bachelors had assembled. Whereupon the club president, with a show of embarrassment, welcomed the "eligibles" with a short but humorous speech.
The president then set the feast going by selecting a partner from among the bachelors, conducting him to one of the ten tables prepared for the "spread." Her example was immediately followed by all the members of the club, and in a few minutes sixty Julieta had their Romeo beside them.
Perfect decorum presided throughout the unique repast, notwithstanding the absence of caperous to reprove anything in the shape of smooching. The success of the matrimonial alliance, however, may be judged by the fact that fourteen weddings resulted from the banquet.
An open air ball brought the festivities to a close, this dance being particularly intended to give the bachelors an opportunity to choose their life partners. As a matter of fact, it seems that most of the proposing and accepting of the bachelors was done in a confidential information on the subject, conveyed by the club president.
The prime mover in organizing the club, the president did not find her "better half" at this year's banquet, the success of the matrimonial alliance, however, has proved such, however, that the club has now been replaced by new recruits. Hereafter, contented Ecaussinne banquets will become an annual affair.
The reputation of the club has now become widespread and since the holding of the banquet the club dames have received many letters from bachelors all over Europe asking the women of Ecaussinne to accept of their matrimonial alliances; their list of invited guests for the coming banquet will, therefore, be considerably longer than that of their own countrymen.—New York Tribune.

Wife Beating in Washington.
Of convictions for wife beating in the District of Columbia there were, in the year 1900, 124 cases; 1901, 104 cases; 1902, 127 cases. These figures do not include any case, of which there were quite a number, in which the wife withdrew the charge before trial, and no conviction was had, but only cases where there were actual convictions either by a plea of guilty or by trial by the District of Columbia Commissioners.

Good, But is it True?
A story of Lord Balfour has been going the rounds of the London clubs. It is said that Lord Balfour presented a document to the King for his signature. It had to do with the appointment of an important office, the appointee being unwelcome to the King, but who, owing to political reasons, must receive the post. When asked whose name he would be pleased to have fill the post his majesty said: "Oh, the devil's." "And shall the document run as usual?" said the King. "Our trusty, well beloved councillor?" The King signed the grant.

Revival Spirit Spreading.

Eminent religious leaders agree in the opinion that the great religious awakening in Wales is to affect this country. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson says: "No one sensitive to spiritual atmospheres can fail to note the increasing signs of the approach of a great spiritual awakening. Among them are the wonderful revivals during the last year in England, in Wales, and the indications of a great awakening in Scotland."
Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, who leads the Wesleyan evangelistic work, says: "The revival spirit is deepening in our country with each day. I have not in all my ministry seen such an awakening. The distinguishing feature has been the unparalleled interest of men in spiritual things."—The Christian Intelligencer.

Priests and Medicine.
When the Jesuits had their troubles, years ago, many of the proscribed ones took to medicine as a pursuit. Now that the Congregation of the Propaganda has decided that priest under some conditions may practice medicine, it is possible that a certain clerical element may enter into the schools again. This decision will be good news to the congregations that have been disbanded, and it is possible that science may profit by it.—From a Paris letter to the New York Medical Journal.

France's Area Growing.

The geographical department of the French General Staff has just published a report, according to which the area of France is now 530,801 square kilometers, while at the close of the Franco-German war it was only 520,500 square kilometers. The growth is explained by the fact that considerable tracts of land has been recovered on the Bay of Biscay. These reclaiming works have been carried on for more than 70 years, and have been very successful.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

WOULDN'T BE FOOLED TWICE.
Second Time Mayor of Obrenovats Was His Own Victim.

There has been an amusing sequel to the recent adventure of the two corporals, one of whom passed himself off upon the Mayor of Obrenovats as the Serbian Crown Prince, and was royally entertained.
The Crown Prince, rather nettled at a common soldier being mistaken for himself, resolved to ride with an escort to Obrenovats to show the Mayor the difference between a royal prince and an adventurer.
Unfortunately, the Mayor had been made the butt of the country since his meeting with the corporals, and had resolved to be retaliated. He planned for the Prince, when, therefore, the Prince arrived, the Mayor had a lurking suspicion that another joke was about to be played upon him, and, instead of receiving the royal visitor at once, asked him to wait until he telegraphed for information to Belgrade.
The Prince, highly incensed, rode off, and now the Mayor is more unhappy than ever.

Lobster Mortality High.
Let him that standeth take heed while of which hatch, but few ever live to grow up. This is not the fault of the mother, for she carries them about with her for nearly a year, and with admirable instinct guards them as she does her own life. When the young are set free, her duty is done, for they must then shift for themselves. Though hardly larger than mosquito eggs, being about one-third of an inch long, the little ones leave their parents on the bottom and swim toward the light—to the surface, where, from one to two months, if fortune favors them, they lead a free roving life. The open sea is a poor nursery for such weaklings, which become the sport of every storm and the prey of numberless hungry mouths. Out of a brood of 10,000 it would be a rare chance for more than one or two lobsters to reach maturity, or finally to end their career in the kitchen or the chafing-dish.—From Nature and Science in March St. Nicholas.

Preached to Cowboys.

"My first appointment by a considerable conference was in the fair of the bad men of the West," remarked the Rev. W. J. Wheeler, formerly pastor here of the Methodist Episcopal Church (South), to a Galois correspondent of the Kansas City Times. "I guess they thought because I was big and brawny I could stand to shoot them if necessary to enforce peace at meetings. Los Cerrillos, N. M., in 1883 and 1884, was a town of about 2000 atrocious inhabitants, most of whom were cowboys. What a preacher looked like till I came there were two saloons, which ran twenty-four hours a day, including Sunday. I chartered a schoolhouse for services and began to get acquainted. Among my first friends were the proprietors of the two saloons. The cowboys would ride in on pay day and 'shoot up' the town. On one of these occasions, I was passing down the main street and received a bullet through my hat. I took it off, examined it and went on. A justice suggested that I might swear out a warrant, but I told him it was an old hat, and I didn't care about going to law over trifles. Somehow the bad men began to evince a sort of respect for me. I was always there, but would never bring them along, but would never allow 'em during meetings. I never succeeded in getting more than four members, but the congregations were fair.
"I remember one day during services there was a little commotion in the back end. A tall fellow, Stewart by name, who had a splendid record as a dead shot, arose and said:
"Just stop a minute, parson. If you please."
"Then he and another man led a fellow out. Presently they returned. 'Tom's just drunk a little, but he won't bother you any more.'
"They had taken him across to the tavern and locked him up in his room."
"W. E. Williams, the most desperate man I ever saw, came to me one day and said he wanted to be stewarded."
"Steward?" I exclaimed. "What would a steward do?"
"Why," he said, "sit in the amen corner and take up the collection. Give me the job, parson, an' you'll find a healthy ante in the plate every Sunday."
"So I made him stewarded. He was as proud of his job as he could have been over a brand new Winchester. The collections were made in his piratical-looking snubnoser, getting more than $200 results. I could hear his hoarse whisper as he went from pew to pew."
"Darned you, small out!" he'd say, if a worshiper didn't show a disposition to contribute promptly.
"Sometimes a man would throw in a dime or a quarter, and if my steward didn't pick him up he'd be up and about the church. I'd just as soon see a man put a nickel in his pocket and whisper something that resulted in a donation to the church's revenue. Collections by the steward's persuasive system were always good, much better than I've ever had them since I returned to Missouri, and he unaccountably demonstrated his fitness for the office.
"One day he came to the office and notified me he was coming to Los Cerrillos. I knew he had never been there, but he was so moral and virtuous that I decided to give him a send-off that would give him an honor as a Grand Duke. I could see it tickled him immensely. Within ten minutes after his train had gone and he had left, I was in full blast again.
"Next year I was removed to Watrous, Neb., and I only visited Los Cerrillos once a month to preach. One rough night, when a melting snow was coming down in great sheets, I was waiting for the Santa Fe train to take me home. The little station, and no place to go except the saloons to get warm. The train was somewhere down the line, and the wind whistled cheerless coyotes knowing its location. So I walked up and down the street till I was in a passion. Bill, a fellow who had been here before, called me.
"Come in and get warm, parson," he said.
"I can't, Bill, you know why."
"Yes, I know, but they ain't no other way. I'll fix it all right, and he grabbed my arm and led me into a big room, where some thirty or forty cowboys and miners were drinking. Having cards and telling yarns. Bill rapped loudly on the counter.
"Fellers," he said, "the parson's laid out by his train, what ain't come, an' he's no place to go 'cept in here. He's got a palooka an' poker parlor. He'll sit 'round an' smoke with us, an' he'll swap tales with us, you understand—but thar'll be no trick sold over this bar, an' no cards played till his horse comes back. He's our guest, parson Wheeler, gentlemen."
"There wasn't a protest from a man. He was accosted by all most of them, and soon had made friends with the others. We talked of lodes, pay dirt, methods of drilling, best way to break bronchos, ailments of the different makes of firearms, compared the veracity of the Indian and the Mexican, and finally it wound up by one of the cowboys, from across the mountains asking me to make a little talk on the subject of my profession. I wouldn't have suggested that because as their guest I felt the laws of hospitality demanded that I follow their lead, but I was more than glad of the opportunity the cowman presented. I mounted one of the card tables, and in their own picturesque language, as I had learned it from them, told of the Martyr of Calvary and the Commandment Father. As they went on they threw away their cigars, and several removed their hats. Not a sound reached them. They were on their honor, and I believe they would have roughly handled any man showing the slightest disrespect.
"I don't believe I ever spent a more profitable hour in my life, or one where the mutual enjoyment was greater. My congregation was busily singing 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul' when the whistle of the belated train was heard and the meeting broke up.
"I saw Henpeck to-day, and he was very much under the influence of drink," remarked Nagget.
"Well, there's some excuse for him," replied Mrs. Nagget. "He lost his wife last week."
"I know, but a man should be able to celebrate without making a hog of himself."

ANIMALS' WANDERINGS.

Country Mouse and Town Mouse Fable Has Foundation in Fact.

The fable of the country mouse and the town mouse has a foundation in fact. Mice occasionally migrate in large numbers when food grows scarce, and travel considerable distances to fresh houses. Farmers in a part of Perthshire have good reason to become aware of this fact when a couple of years ago, vast swarms of mice invaded their cornfields at harvest time.
But the mouse only travels when it has to. The rat, on the contrary, seems to take a yearly outing, in very much the same fashion as do human beings. Rats are the most migratory creatures in the world. Troops of rats leave the towns at the end of summer and spend a month or two in the country, apparently in order to enjoy the change of food which the country affords at that time of the year in the way of fresh fruit and grain. Before the cold weather sets in they are all back again in their old quarters.
Reindeer migrate with the same regularity as swallows. They move south when winter sets in, but as soon as ever the snow begins to melt they travel steadily north, sometimes for as much as a thousand miles.
To end a holiday by deliberate suicide is so strange a phenomenon that for a long time naturalists looked upon the stories of the migration of the lemings as an improbable fiction. Yet the facts are beyond dispute. At irregular intervals these rat-like creatures start out from their homes in the fastnesses of Northern Scandinavia in huge droves, numbering tens of thousands, and travel steadily southward. Death pursues them in a hundred forms, rawks and other birds of prey hover above them. Thousands are drowned in rivers. Yet the rest struggle on until they reach the sea. They do not stop. They plunge in, swim out and struggle on until at last their strength fails and they drown. Not one ever returns from this journey of death.—London Answers.

What is a Patent Medicine?
The establishment of a proprietary medicine business differs in this from the making of a rabbit pie. The last thing, not the first, is to get your medicine. Get it from a book, get it from any doctor, get it out of your own head. It makes little difference. Not long ago a tonic which bore some such name as "Elixir of Pepsin" became very popular in the middle west. One of the large manufacturers of pepsin thought he saw a possible market and sent an agent to the makers of the Elixir. "Good Lord!" he exclaimed, "what do we want of pepsin? We don't use a grain of it."
"The preparation contains no honey," reported the analyst of a certain "Honey Cream," but it is probably much more valuable than if it did."—From Leslie's Magazine for March.

The First Artificial Flowers.
Fashion is responsible for many innovations. This is the case with the manufacture of artificial flowers, for their use has become a fashion. In the reports of the business world it was decreed that flowers should be worn in and out of their seasons, and that their color should be that of the season. The idea of making them of various materials which would resemble the real flowers. Later, in the middle ages, the artificial flower was probably made of paper, and women decked their heads with imitation flowers of cambric, glass, paper wax and metal. The most beautiful artificial blossoms are made in Paris, and their making is one of the chief industries of that city.
